President Delays Relief Program; To Keep Control

President, Buoyant After Trip, to Begin Series of Conferences.

Officials Uneasy Pending Decision

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt returned to the White House late yesterday, fresh and invigorated after two weeks of fishing in Southern waters, and sprang an immediate surprise on the Capital by announcing he is not ready to divulge his plans for putting 3,500,000 people to work.

For weeks the stage has been set for a tremendous expansion of the spending program, awaiting only the action of a hesitant Congress in turning over to the Executive $4,880,000,000 for work relief.

Shortly after Mr. Roosevelt's arrival, however, word was relayed out by a secretary that he has made no decision as to the organization he will set up to administer the fund and that no announcement is to be expected until after more than a dozen conferences are held.

The President has before him several drafts of executive orders, it was said, but he is not committed to any one of them. The only thing definite that can be said at this time, the White House reported, is that Mr. Roosevelt will be the actual, as well as titular, head of the whole enterprise.

Signs Pointed to Speed.

This development came as a distinct surprise, since it had been presumed that the President was prepared for instant action, now that the huge works fund, after months of bitter debate and ceaseless controversy, was at hand. His signing of the works bill as he sped homeward by train also had been taken as the prelude to rapid fire action.

Tanned and in robust good health by virtue of his Florida cruise, Mr. Roosevelt came back to the Capital after first going on to New York to attend the funeral of his cousin, Warren Delano Robbins. He was accompanied from New York by Postmaster General James A. Farley. Two others of the official family, Secretaries Cordell Hull and Henry Morgenthau, jr., met him at Union Station.

First concern of the returning President was the condition of his chief secretary, Louis McHenry Howe, who has lain ill at the White House for more than a month. Delighted that his old friend is now given a "reasonably good chance" to recover, the President spent his first half hour in chatting at his bedside.

Signs War Bill.

He then signed the War Department appropriations bill, carrying the second largest sum for military purposes since the World War, and scheduled a night conference with Speaker Byrns and Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, to consider means to speed up the still-pending social security measure.

Delay by Mr. Roosevelt in setting up machinery to handle the works program means a continuance of perhaps a week or more of the uncertainty which has existed ever since the President last fall expressed dissatisfaction with "this business of relief."

He still contemplates the creation of an "allotment board" to help him

Four Drowned As Auto Sinks

Car Dives Off N. Y. Pier Into 50 Feet of Water; Gale Thwarts Rescue.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—Traveling at high speed, an automobile containing four or five persons careened off a Brooklyn pier into the East River today and sank in 50 feet of water.

Police and fire department rescue squads, balked by high winds and tide when they tried to raise the car, expressed fear that its occupants had been drowned.

After repeated failures to bring the machine to the surface it was decided to wait until tomorrow morning when a Navy diver will be sent below in an effort to extricate the bodies.

Joseph Weiner, a milk truck driver, said he saw at least two men and two women in the machine and possibly a fifth person.

Screams of the women rose above the 50-mile-an-hour gale as the car hurtled through a 1-foot stringpiece and disappeared in the river, he said.

Police expressed a theory that the driver was blinded by a pelting rain.

The police launches and the fireboat Mitchel began grappling, but were forced to suspend work by the high tide. The water was too rough for divers.

Sought by Police

Gifts Surround Beating Victim On 3d Birthday

Girl Is Recovering Here as Police Close In on Father.

Norma Jean Green was 3 years old yesterday. Her birthday was spent in a hospital bed. Last night she was sleeping peacefully with nearly a score of dolls by her side, while authorities were closing in on her father, Robert Green, former convict, who is said to have brutally beaten her.

It was not the best of birthdays, but Norma Jean made the most of it. Although her little body was covered with welts and swathed in bandages, she was wide-eyed with wonder and joy at the gifts which poured in from friends and those who had read her story.

When afternoon was ending, sleep closed her eyes beside a heap of toys. Her mother, too, Mrs. Marie Roberts Green, 22, was worn out with the excitement of the day. At Casualty Hospital, where she is being treated, physicians said that her injuries from the severe beatings were responding to care.

The father, who eluded police and a posse of citizens Monday night and yesterday morning in the woods in the vicinity of the family's home at Ardmore, Md., was said to have been located last night. His capture is expected.

Mrs. Green's story of the affair was a tearful recounting of how Green had flown into a fit of rage and lashed the little child with his belt. It was all because Norma Jean couldn't spell "patty" when her father asked her.

"I thought the baby was dead," the mother sobbed. "I wanted to get a doctor but he wouldn't let me."

There were two beatings, Mrs. Green charged. The first occurred Sunday. When the child woke up Monday morning, aching from the strap marks, her father again asked her to spell "patty," the mother said.

Norma Jean got as far as "p-a" and then stopped, shaking with fear. Then, her mother told police, the father lashed the child again and again with his belt. When he left later in the day Mrs. Green ran to neighbors for aid.

When word of the brutality

Thomas Says Mrs. Lyddane Paid Him Fee

State May Ask Subpena of Bank Records to Trace Cash.

Harry Thomas, named as the prospective "killer" in the so-called Lyddane "murder plot," now admits he knows Mrs. Anne Lyddane, police said yesterday as it was learned the State may ask a subpena for a bank account of which the woman is trustee.

When Thomas was arrested last Saturday he told police he did not know Mrs. Lyddane. He also denied he had ever received any money from her directly or indirectly. According to police, he now says he had met her and that she gave him money in advance to kill her husband, Francis Lyddane. Police would not say how much the payment was alleged to have been.

Two men first questioned in the case both told police they had received money from Mrs. Lyddane and that Thomas was to do the actual killing. They also said the woman had offered to turn over to them the keys of the Rockville bank where she worked in part payment for the murder. Mrs. Lyddane was arrested but denies she asked the men to kill her husband.

To Ask Bank Records.

Bank records may be subpoenaed as the State attempts to check the story of the men that they were paid $700 for the murder. The account was not kept in the bank in which Mrs. Lyddane was employed as secretary to the president, bank officials said yesterday. The prosecution thinks it may find sizable withdrawals shortly before the time the money is said to have been paid. Name of the person for whom Mrs. Lyddane was acting as trustee was withheld.

The prosecution also said yesterday it had located one of two men sought as material witnesses. It would not say where he has been found or give his name.

This witness was not arrested, as he promised to return to the county to testify against the woman and men held in the case. Authorities also refused to divulge what his testimony would be but were confident it would help the prosecution greatly.

New Version Is Told.

It also was developed yesterday that authorities first learned of the case from a police informer who had been asked to do the killing. This man, whose name was not divulged, refused the job and told Washington police of the offer.

District authorities notified Montgomery County Police and kept a watch on local men suspected in the plot. After several days two men were arrested here and Mrs. Lyddane was taken into custody in Rockville.

This version of how police learned of the plot differs from the story first told here, which was that one of the men held had talked too freely while intoxicated. A police informer, according to the original version, overheard his conversation and told police here.

State's Attorney Silent.

Yesterday was unmarked by further fulminations on the part of defense and prosecution attorneys. Stedman Prescott, former State's attorney of the county, now leader of the defense, was in Annapolis asking State authorities for permission to examine statements concerning the plot allegedly made by the two men. The youthful State's attorney, James H. Pugh, after threatening Monday, after a conference with Prescott, to "knock off his block," denied himself to newspapermen and remained secluded in his office.

Police said yesterday they had questioned Mrs. Lyddane about withdrawals from her bank accounts. She admitted she had taken out sums of money, they said, but declared she had a right to do so.

She had $800 with her when she was arrested, police said at the time. Police said they already had sought to examine records of the bank where the trustee fund was kept, but that bank officials had refused permission.

Aliens' Fixers Paid Million, U. S. Finds

Federal Aids Accused; Cummings to Cancel 200 Citizenships.

By Felix Bruner.

Thousands of cases of fraudulent naturalizations, perjured declarations by aliens, and graft, involving lawyers, Government employes, and gangsters, have been uncovered by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Labor Department announced yesterday.

Michael J. Hogan, former Representative from New York, and for four years confidential clerk in the office of the Collector of the Port of New York, has been indicted with two others on charges of complicity in fraudulent alien registration cases.

Attorney General Cummings has appointed Samuel H. Kaufman, New York lawyer, as Assistant Attorney General to prosecute charges growing out of the investigation.

In addition, it was announced that:

At least 25 criminal prosecutions, involving 30 to 35 persons, will be started immediately.

Administrative charges against a number of employes of the Immigration and Naturalization Service will be preferred with a view to their dismissal.

Two hundred proceedings will be brought to cancel fraudulent citizenships.

Deportation of aliens for unlawful residence will be started.

The investigation, which has been going on for 15 months, covers a period from 1923 to 1933. Investigators estimated that at least $1,000,000 had passed from the hands of aliens to those of crooked lawyers, gangsters and Government employes who acted as "fixers."

The Labor Department announcement dcelared that evidence of

French Accord On Trade Laid To New Policy

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Conclusion of an agreement between the United States and France, designed to ameliorate the effect of double taxation on American interests doing business abroad, yesterday was regarded in State Department circles as the first achievement under the new "crack-down" trade policy.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull evaded a question as to whether he regarded the conclusion of the agreement as a direct result of the warning he issued a week ago to the French that they must cease discriminatory practices against American trade interests or be denied all concessions given other countries under this Government's reciprocal trade program.

On Tap Three Years.

But Hull obviously was pleased over the double taxation agreement and made it the occasion for stating he was encouraged in believing that this country was on the correct course and that nations everywhere would be encouraged to look with increasing favor on the program the United States is proposing for the restoration of both domestic and international finance and trade.

The Secretary pointed out that the double taxation agreement with France had been hanging fire three years. He said it should be helpful in promoting trade between the two countries, but that it was only one phase of the international economic relations between them.

Removal of that source of irritation, Hull pointed out, should be mutually satisfactory to both countries and should have the further

Garner Warns He'll Designate Bill Conferees

Tells Senate of Plan to Use Prerogative Usually Left to Chairman.

By Robert C. Albright.

Vice President John Nance Garner, who has been gradually carving a unique niche in Washington's legislative picture, yesterday whittled another notch in his Senate gavel, and proclaimed some new powers for himself.

Hereafter, announced the Vice President to a rather startled Senate, he will use his discretion in appointing conferees on legislation. In the past, chairmen of Senate committees actually have named conferees. Nominally, the Vice President was supposed to appoint them. All he actually did was announce them to the Senate.

Nobody objected seriously to the proclamation, however. The Senate, whenever it desires, may elect its own conferees, if those appointed by the chair don't exactly suit. But the move was significant of the Vice President's tightening grip on a Senate that heretofore has seldom taken its presiding officers seriously.

Permits Favorable Conferees.

It is important for another reason. It will give the Vice President a chance to name only those Senators known to be favorable to Administration measures, to conference committees which put the final touches on legislation and iron out differences between the two Houses.

Unwilling to accept the traditionally inconsequential role mapped out for a Vice President, Mr. Garner by degrees has been transforming it into a real job. His alacrity in wielding the gavel frequently has speeded through legislation that with a less alert occu-

'Tip-Off' Probe Hints Ouster Of Headley and Capt. Morgan

Commissioners Appoint Board of Three to Investigate Charge That Gaming House Operator Was Notified of Impending Raid.

The District Commissioners yesterday set in motion machinery which may result in the involuntary retirement of Inspector Albert J. Headley and Capt. Joseph C. Morgan, commander of the Fifth Police Precinct.

E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, George W. Offutt, chairman of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and Capt. Howard F. Clark, assistant engineer commissioner, were constituted a special board to inquire into all the facts and official actions of those involved in the so-called gambling "tip off" story told before the House District crime committee.

Appointment of the special committee was proposed to the Board of Commissioners by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who has immediate supervision over the Police Department among many other District activities. No date was set for a report by the committee. The committee is to study testimony given before the House District Crime Committee, the report of Inspector Thaddeus R. Bean, assistant superintendent of police, and is to make whatever other investigation it may wish. After it has done that it is to make recommendations to the Commissioners.

The furor arose when Capt. Morgan insisted a gambling establishment was operating at 113 B street southeast and should be raided. Police had no warrant to enter the place. Capt. Morgan did not accompany police raiders who smashed in without a warrant. Precinct Detective Watson Salkeld, armed with an ax instead of a warrant, smashed into the place and found it empty.

The condition of the place, the raiders said, indicated it had been closed for a long time. A short time later the vice squad, under command of Lieut. George Little, who operates out of police headquarters, raided the place and corraled something like 60 persons, including operators and patrons. Some of the latter were reported to have been permitted to leave after brief questioning.

It was reported they were influential members of Congress and

Hauptmann Appeals U. S. Tax, But He May Die Before Hearing

By the Associated Press.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann yesterday began a fight on a Government income tax assessment which may not reach a decision until long after his electrocution for the Lindbergh baby's murder.

A petition filed jointly in his name and that of his wife, Anna, applied to the Board of Tax Appeals for the redetermination of income tax claims, penalties and interest totaling $9,768 for 1932 and 1933.

The document was drafted by Attorney Frank B. Meseke, of New York.

The litigation may require two years for settlement. Hauptmann's appeal from the death sentence is scheduled for hearing in June.

The name of Isidor Fisch, the tubercular German furrier from whom Hauptmann claimed to have received the Lindbergh ransom money found in his possession, recurs repeatedly in the long petition.

The petitioner charged that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in computing the claims, was in error in crediting to Hauptmann funds received through operation of a joint brokerage account and in the joint operation of a fur business.

House Passes Bill to Erase Gains of War

Confiscation Voted, 367 to 15 as Roosevelt Signs Army Boost.

402 Million in Defense Approved; Loan Ban in Conflicts Asked.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Historic steps of a paradoxical nature—in behalf of peace and in preparation for war—were taken yesterday by Congress and the President.

The day's developments at a glance:

1. The House passed the McSwain bill to confiscate war profits—a peace gesture.

2. Senators Nye, North Dakota, and Clark, Missouri, offered a resolution to prohibit American loans, public or private, to belligerents in case of another world conflict.

3. President Roosevelt signed a bill increasing the strength of the Regular Army by 40 per cent and carrying a War Department appropriation of $402,000,000, the second largest ever voted in peace time.

4. The Senate passed a resolution authorizing $38,098,000 in Navy public works construction.

5. A House committee prepared to report a bill calling for an increase of 5,000 in Navy personnel this year and 11,000 ultimately under terms of the bill.

McSwain Bill Passes, 367-15.

As passed, the McSwain measure would levy a 100-per cent tax on all "excess war profits" and would freeze prices at levels prevailing on the date of this country's entry into any other war. The vote on final passage was 367 to 15.

House liberals forced adoption, 205 to 183, of an amendment which stripped from the bill a series of provisions which would have permitted the drafting for armed service of all men between 21 and 45.

Opponents of the conscription clause argued Congress could pass such legislation overnight in case of war.

Observers believed the full extent of the Government's taxation of war profits would not be known until the Senate passes the bill and the two Houses adopt a conference report. The bill, in effect, will be drawn by the conferees.

Action Pleases Committee.

The Senate Munitions Committee was pleased by the action of the House Saturday in writing the broad tax clause into the measure. The committee wants to have the Government seize all war earnings above 3 per cent and confiscate all salaries above $10,000.

For a time it looked like the munitions committee would be unable to legislate to tax profits because all tax measures, under the Constitution, must originate in the House. Now, however, the Senate can entirely rewrite the tax clause.

The Nye-Clark resolution would impose a maximum fine of $100,000 and a 10-year prison term on any person or corporation executive who loaned money to a combatant nation for purchase of commodities.

Passport Ban Urged.

Another neutrality measure introduced by Senators Nye and Clark would empower the President to deny passports to American citizens to keep them off the seas should plane or submarine attacks on ships be launched in another war.

President Roosevelt, in signing the War Department bill departed from his custom and issued a formal statement explaining his reasons. He emphasized that the measure would increase the manpower of the Army to "peace strength" rather than war strength.

The statement follows:

"In approving H. R. 5913, the War Department appropriation bill, it is pertinent to call attention to two matters:

"1. The bill authorizes the increase of the average enlisted strength of the Army from 118,750 to 165,000 enlisted men. In a very real sense this increase does not represent an extension of the Army involving new units. It is more correct to say that the increase is in effect a restoration to company, troop, battery and other units of privates who, in previous sessions of Congress, were arbitrarily transferred and the units thus decreased

Simon Discloses Rift With Reich; Stresa Guarded

Reveals Arms Dispute

SIR JOHN SIMON.

Hitler's Arms Equality Demands Revealed in Commons.

Rebuke Relieves Ex-Allies' Tension

Announcement of Blunt Rejection Greeted With Cheers.

The Crisis Abroad.

In London Sir John Simon revealed sharp differences between Germany and England over Hitler's rearmament plan.

Italy massed an "army" of 3,000 detectives at Stresa to protect the statesmen at peace talks opening tomorrow.

In Paris it was revealed that a Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact will be signed.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, April 9.—Sir John Simon bluntly revealed sharp differences between Britain and Germany in the House of Commons today over Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's far-reaching rearmament plans to restore the Reich to prewar military might and colonial power.

The foreign secretary eased tension among the former allied powers—Britain, France and Italy—two days before their conference opens at Stresa, Italy, by reemphasizing the wide divergence betwen the British government and Germany on Hitler's proposals.

Sir John was greeted by cheers in Commons when for the first time he revealed officially confidential details of Hitler's astonishing proposals, the extent of which hitherto only had been hinted.

He told the German Ambassador, Dr. Leopold von Hoesch, yesterday that Der Fuehrer's proposals were not acceptable, and requested Berlin to submit new suggestions.

Hitler's Proposals.

Any impression that Britain was veering toward leniency to Germany was dispelled by his stern attitude in Parliament.

Sir John said Hitler's proposals to him in Berlin included:

1. Germany be allowed an army of 36 divisions, representing a maximum of 550,000 soldiers.

2. Permission to possess all types of arms other powers own.

3. Germany be permitted "with certain reservations" a navy 35 per cent of the British in tonnage—or about 385,000 tons.

4. Air parity with Britain and France. If the Russian air force is expanded, Germany would expand further.

5. Restoration of Germany as a colonial power, ending her days as an "inferior power."

On the last point, Sir John said, "Germany alleged, by way of example, that she is in a position of inferiority while she had no colonies," and that this no longer could be tolerated.

Stresses Differences.

The foreign secretary, stressing the wide divergence between the German and British stands on these major points, intimated that at the conclusion of the Berlin conversations two weeks ago he had conveyed to Hitler his disappointment at the fresh difficulties in the path of the agreement.

He and Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald expect to clarify these

Paris, Moscow Will Sign Pact Of Mutual Aid

Accord for Quick Action in Event of an Attack by Germany Revealed.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 9.—Official circles disclosed tonight that a Franco-Russian pact of mutual military aid in case of aggression will be signed in Moscow after the Stresa conference to "backstop" the French proposal for a general European accord which Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin is taking to Italy tomorrow.

The proposal to be submitted to Italy and England at Stresa, described as tentative, was disclosed as seeking to put teeth into the League of Nations in the form of military pacts for "automatic" punishment of any aggressor nation.

The Franco-Russian agreement, which official circles said would be signed by Foreign Minister Pierre Laval and Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff on the former's visit to Moscow, calls for military aid, it was understood, but only if the mutual assistance terms of the general pact fall down.

Approved By Litvinoff.

It would be effective if the nations in the larger accord are unable to decide upon the aggressor in case of conflict.

On the eve of the Stresa meeting Laval and Russian Ambassador Potemkin conferred for more than three hours, and the latter was said to have received a telegram from Litvinoff approving the terms of the pact. The two foreign ministers will put the finishing touches to it at Geneva during the session of the league council, which is to consider France's protest against a rearming Germany.

The Franco-Russian accord is based on paragraph VII of article 15 of the league covenant, which gives members the right to "act as they judge necessary" when the council's report is not accepted by the members.

The pact, it was said, was drafted only after realization that an eastern Locarno agreement is impossi-

Il Duce Masses 3,000 Police To Protect Peace Conferees

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Stresa, Italy, April 9.—An "army" of 3,000 police, detectives and Carabineers was concentrated in and around Stresa tonight to protect the lives of statesmen from France and Great Britain, meeting here with Italy Thursday to discuss German rearmament.

Premier Benito Mussolini is taking no chance of a repetition of the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, when he arrived at Marseille, France, last October, on a good will visit.

Correspondents, arriving from Rome, found every road to this village on the side of picturesque Lake Maggiore, in the mountains of northern Italy, guarded heavily. The railroad is patrolled every 500 yards by Carabineers and railway military.

Hydroplanes are ready to police the air during the historic parley, if Il Duce thinks it necessary.

Fast motor launches will guard the statesmen as they go to and from Hotel Borromo, in Stresa, to Isola Bella, the tiny island 200 yards off shore, where the conferences will be held—aloof from the world—and the press.

Every new arrival is closely catalogued after registering at the hotel. Roads into Stresa are so heavily watched by Carabineers, who have placed rails across them at intervals to check motorists, that persons arriving are forced to halt fre-

Jews Hide in Homes As Bucharest Riots

Bucharest, Rumania, April 9 (U.P.). Jews remained locked indoors tonight as anti-Jewish riots broke out for the fourth consecutive night in the city.

Jews, panic-stricken, huddled in their houses. Scores have been beaten in the recurrent riots, and three were tossed into a river during fighting earlier this week.

Demonstrators, most of them students, attacked any one who resembled a Jew. Patrols of gendarmes, carrying rifles with fixed bayonets, could not maintain order.

Added Privacy On Income Tax Senate's Hope

Conferees Would Postpone Giving State Officials Use of Records.

The cloak of secrecy thrown around income tax returns by House and Senate votes for repeal of the "pink slip" publicity law, was drawn closer yesterday by congressional conferees.

Following a complete conference agreement, Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, disclosed modifications postponing until next year the operation of an amendment giving State officials access to tax records.

Gross income, net income, deductibles and total tax paid, written on pink slips and filed by taxpayers with the Treasury under the old law, will not be open to the general public under the bill.

The report goes to the House and Senate for final action. Harrison, chairman of the conferees, anticipated little or no opposition.

Conference changes in the measure were in line with a Senate amendment offered by Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), of Colorado, making tax data available to State officials. Harrison said this provision will not be operative except on the next returns, due to probable "congestion" if State officials were given access to the data this year.

Further safeguards were thrown around the amendment by stipulating that "inspection shall be permitted only upon written request of the Governor," designating specific officials to examine the records. The information may be used only for Administration of State tax laws. An officer who divulges this data to others would be guilty of a misdemeanor, and subject to $1,000 fine.

Under the present law, Federal tax records may be made available to officials only of those States having income tax laws, and on the written request of the Governor.

Probability that taxpayers may have to file returns in duplicate next year was held out by Harrison. The Treasury was given authority to require filing of "copies" of all returns. These could be filed in States where taxpayers claim residence.

Kidnaper Again Appeals for Life

McGee Says Only McElroys Can Spare Him.

By the Associated Press.

Jefferson City, Mo., April 9.—Action was renewed before the Missouri Supreme Court today to save Walter H. McGee from the gallows, but the condemned girl-kidnaper, regarding the appeal as futile, clung to the hope that his victim, Mary McElroy, of Kansas City, would come to his aid.

"My only hope for life lies with them (the McElroy family) and the Governor," McGee said in his death cell in the Jackson County (Kansas City) Jail, where he is awaiting execution set for May 10.

City Manager H. F. McElroy, of Kansas City, who paid $30,000 for his 28-year-old daughter's release, made no comment.

McGee's attorneys applied for a rehearing. Previously the supreme court upheld the conviction. McGee said yesterday that Miss McElroy had promised him she "would do what she could" for him.

McGee's reference to hope in the Governor pertained to Gov. Guy B. Park's power to commute the sentence to life imprisonment.

Between You and Me

Laggard Congress Speeds Up; Tammanyite Calls Professor; Georgia Out of Line.

By Raymond Clapper

No sooner had word reached Washington that President Roosevelt was starting for home than Congress began to buckle down to business. Its record during the presidential fishing vacation was growing worse and worse. Little had been done aside from passing the works bill and the handling of that was accompanied by so much fumbling that Congress could hardly claim earned credits on the basis of that performance.

But when the word came that Mr. Roosevelt was on his way back to Washington, Congress went into action. By the time Mr. Roosevelt returned to the White House yesterday, a number of things had happened. House and Senate leaders will be able to welcome the President back and report everything well in hand.

The House finished the McSwain bill to take the profits out of war and prepared to consider social security legislation. House and Senate conferees completed work on the pink-slip repeal and on the enlargement of HOLC borrowing power. Those two measures can be sent to the President shortly. The Senate passed naval authorization legislation carrying about $40,000,000 worth of minor projects close to the hearts of Senators and Representatives from districts in which naval bases or Navy yards are located. Bus and truck regulatory legislation was brought out of committee ready for Senate consideration. Tonsils and a few bad-looking teeth were being removed from the AAA amendments by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

* * * *

Representative O'Connor, of New York, received a letter from a Dartmouth College English professor who was indignant that the House Rules Committee was attempting to throttle the Lundeen bill which would boost the proposed payments in social security legislation.

O'Connor replied sharply in part as follows:

"I know the President would be happy to know that you voted for him and would greatly regret that any of our college educators were disappointed in him.

"As to the rules committee submitting 'suppinely' (your spelling, not mine), you are mistaken.

"I know in your letter you did not intend in another place to split an infinitive.

"Yours very truly,

"JOHN J. O'CONNOR."

That English professor probably will be surprised today when he receives the letter and discovers that a Tammany Representative has called him on a split infinitive.

One time O'Connor received an insulting letter from a man at Marblehead, Mass. He replied that the writer was living in the right place.

Of course he writes agreeable letters too, but most of those go to constituents in his New York City district.

Looks as if it is about time Mr. Roosevelt went down to Georgia—which he calls his other State—and pulled them into line. Senator George, of Georgia, has been mauling Secretary Wallace around over the processing tax. He placed the fearful amendment in the works relief act which authorizes the President to dip into the $4,880,000,000 relief appropriation to pay farm benefits, the purpose being to kill off processing taxes and finance the farm dole for not raising crops out of borrowed money charged up to all taxpayers, not merely consumers of the commodities which are benefited.

Now Gov. Talmadge of Georgia has pitched into the fray, challenging the right of Wallace to make a Jefferson Day speech in Georgia. Talmadge says somebody who is more in sympathy with Jefferson ought to have that honor. Not long ago the Georgia Legislature invited Huey Long to make a speech as its guest.

Earlier Talmadge tangled with Harry Hopkins, charging his relief organization was encouraging idleness among Georgia farmhands. Peeling off his coat and snapping his red suspenders, Talmade ran for reelection last fall denouncing the Administration's "orgy of spending," and won in a landslide.

He's supposed to be preparing to run for the Senate against Senator Russell next year.

Opponents of the Nye and McSwain bills to take the profits out of war are divided into two groups.

One group says the legislation is futile. It would be swept aside the instant war was imminent because it would get in the way of efficient preparation for victory. Such legislation would be merely a scrap of paper and it is sheer nonsense to be seriously writing laws that everybody knows would not be tolerated by a nation determined to fight.

The other group says it is ridiculous to consider such legislation as a means of keeping the country out of war, because it is just exactly what a war party would want. The bills would make it infinitely easier to launch a war because it would provide a war party dictatorship. Senator Nye, so interested in preventing war, thinks he is waving an olive branch when actually he is handing a big fine sword to the war babies.

Can't they just take one argument or the other and stick to it instead of confusing everybody this way?

President Roosevelt was delighted to return from Florida and find Col. Louis McHenry Howe, his old adviser and political secretary, calmly ensconced in his little oxygen tent in the White House sick room as proud as the King of Siam.

Col. Howe, who has been at death's door time after time in the last month, is now given a reasonably good chance of getting better. He has been in an oxygen tent a good deal of the time for the last three weeks. The apparatus feeds in 60 per cent oxygen.

He sits up in bed. Visitors in the sick room can peer in and see him reading the newspapers. Sometimes they let him have a cigarette.

He even uses the telephone occasionally. The other day he called up Harry Hopkins and asked him to come over for a conference. At other times he sits up scribbling notes for various officials. Day after day he lies among deep, soft pillows, safe in his own little supercharged world although the doctors had checked up with the medical books and insisted that according to them he couldn't possibly be alive.

Eagle Has Day As Its Friends Come to Fore

Continuation of Lumber Code; Support in Senate Cheers NRA Backers.

By the Associated Press.

Support from Senate committee witnesses and an agreement for continuation of the lumber code yesterday heartened the beleagured friends of NRA continuance.

The Government's decision to drop the Belcher case before the Supreme Court allowed an unfavorable decision against the lumber code in the lower courts to stand.

Asserting they had been abandoned, many members of the code favored suspension but NRA officials yesterday announced after conferences that the agreement was to be continued but that compliance would be voluntary.

However, word came from Little Rock, Ark., yesterday that United States District Attorney Fred A. Isgrig had filed suits there seeking injunctions to prevent four Arkansas lumber companies from departing from wage and hour provisions of the code.

In the meantime, a series of witnesses friendly to the Blue Eagle agency appeared before the Senate Finance Committee which is investigating NRA.

Warns of Blow to Industry.

One of them, Henry P. Kendall, cotton manufacturer and a representative of the Commerce Department's business planning and advisory council, told the committee business would be given a "very bad jolt" if NRA were discontinued.

Although lumber code compliance is to be voluntary, NRA officials said that only those firms living up to its terms would be given Government contracts.

In addition, NRA and the industry are to make a joint effort to obtain compliance by use of Blue Eagle labels or stamps.

The NRA Governing Board is to submit amendments to the industry to permit the Government, instead of the code authorities, to allocate production. These are to apply in any division of the industry which approves them. Production allocation by the code authorities was one of the provisions of the code which led the Justice Department to drop its prosecution of the Belcher case.

Kendall said discontinuance of NRA would result in "chaos" so far as his industry was concerned.

He recommended some changes in the law, but said the agency was "such a constructive move" that its extension for two years would give industry "the heartening it needs to go forward."

During that time, he testified "a lot of the errors" could be corrected.

W. E. Fenner, of Greenville, N. C., speaking for the Auction and Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Code Authority, also urged extension of the law. He said it was "an unmixed blessing" to his industry.

Dr. John A. Ryan, of the NRA Industrial Appeals Board, testified that no charges of monopoly had been filed before that group, created as a result of the Darrow Board's criticism of NRA. Small business men, he said, complained that they could not live up to the minimum wage provisions of the code, but not against monopoly.

Follows Days of Criticism.

Another plea for continuation of the codes came from Charles E. Sands, representing the hotel and restaurant employes union, but the American Hotel Association, in a brief filed with the committee, asked exemption from the code structure.

This favorable testimony followed days of criticism of the recovery agency. The only attack yesterday came from Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the people's lobby.

Marsh said the bill to extend NRA was "a device to protect, maintain and increase fictitious and unwarranted property prices for the benefit of property owners and at the expense of the consumers of the Nation, without even fair protection to the workers in the industries affected."

Kendall recommended that the President have authority to cancel codes outright, but should not be permitted to modify them except with the consent of the industry affected.

Kendall read a memorandum he presented to President Roosevelt three weeks ago, recommending removal of the processing tax against cotton mills and substitution of a 10 per cent wage increase.

Roper Declares Business Must Grasp Initiative

Recovery Must Not Danger Reforms, Commerce Head Cautions.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 9.—The Federal Administration, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper asserted today, wishes to be relieved "of those functions which business can and should perform of its own initiative."

Business brought its problems to the Administration in 1933, he said, and requested Government participation.

Sees Evidence of Recovery.

"But the memory of a man is shortlived," Roper added, "and as soon as the first encouraging evidences of improvement were registered, the cry was raised that there was too much Government participation in business . . .

"In connection with this tendency to belabor the Federal Government for its present relationships with business and industry, let me point out two significant factors that are usually disregarded:

"1. The Federal Government is desirous of being relieved of responsibilities which it was forced to assume as a result of a national emergency.

Stresses Reform Program.

"2. The Federal Government at the present time faces the problem of resisting innumerable pleas and demands which it is receiving for additional Government help and cooperation."

He said many demands for elimination of certain regulations and restrictions are received, but rarely are they accompanied by concrete or workable recommendations of what private business will do to correct abuses the regulations sought to alleviate.

Roper warned that "the necessities of a quick recovery must not be allowed to overshadow the initiation of those measures which will function to prevent a repetition of the disastrous cataclysm of 1929."

U. S. Abolishes Restraint Upon Liquor Output

Cry of 'Whisky Trust' Leads FACA to Relax Code Restrictions.

By the Associated Press.

Complaints of a "whisky trust" and protests from States which joined repeal ranks, caused the Federal Alcohol Control Administration to relax attempts to control liquor production late yesterday.

Suddenly reversing its policy, FACA, with President Roosevelt's approval, amended the distilled spirits code to allow present permit holders to increase the capacity of their plants.

The modifications also provide for new permits to plants with a capacity of 1,000 gallons or more a day, or smaller plants producing solely brandy or certain special types of distilled spirits.

Changes Follow Conference.

The changes in the code established under the recovery act followed a conference with distillers at which production restriction was sharply criticized.

States which repealed prohibition after FACA assumed control 16 months ago said limitation on output was particularly unfair to them.

Chairman Joseph H. Choate, jr., of FACA, said the former regulations "operated unfairly by preventing citizens of States which have recently become wet from entering the industry."

Under its former policy, FACA has refused permits to 170 distillers, officials said. They added that probably many of these now would be able to qualify by establishing sufficient "business experience, financial standing and trade connections * * * to be a potential legal member of the industry."

Aimed to Check Speculation.

Choate said the original restrictions were "to keep out of the industry in its early stages an anticipated swarm of speculators, seeking quick and easy profits."

As a precaution against future overproduction, the new amendments provide for a strict quota production set-up, if FACA finds, after a code hearing, that "the present or potential production of distilled spirits of any class or type thereof is larger than the probable demand.'

Kansas City Orchestra To Close 'Test Period'

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 9 (AP).—The Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra, which draws crowds of sporting-event size and enthusiasm, closed a two-year "test period" tonight in triumph.

The 85-piece organization directed by Karl Krueger found this Midwestern region responsive from the start. More than 5,000 appreciative listeners thronged Convention Hall for the season's final concert. This season's attendance exceeded 100,000, as contrasted with slightly more than 55,000 last year.

District Is Only U. S. Division Showing Drop in Eating Costs

Local Prices Fell 1.3 Per Cent in March, Statistics Bureau Reports.

The cost of eating is coming down in Washington, while it is remaining steady in the rest of the country, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced yesterday.

On March 26, the bureau said, food prices were 1.3 per cent lower here than they were on March 12 and one-half of 1 per cent below the level of February 26.

Comparisons with previous years, however, are another story. On March 26 prices were 13.2 per cent higher than a year ago and 33.2 per cent higher than in March, 1933. They were 16.9 per cent below the level of March, 1930.

Fo rthe country as a whole prices were 12.6 per cent above those of a year ago and 34.4 per cent above those of two years ago. The Nation's food-price level was 18.9 per cent below that of March, 1930.

During the two-week period covered by the report, cereals, meats, fruits and vegetables showed price increases, while dairy products, eggs and the "miscellaneous group" decreased.

Egg prices showed the largest drop, 4.7 per cent, but they were still 13.6 per cent higher than a year ago and 52 per cent higher than five years ago.

While prices of other meats went up, those of leg of lamb and pork chops dropped. Next to eggs, pork chops showed the largest drop, 3 per cent. Cabbage and onions showed the largest increases, 18.3 per cent and 10.6 per cent, respectively.

Buses Won't Become Red, White and Blue

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., April 9.—New York's Legislature had some fun today at the expense of sponsors of a proposal to paint school buses throughout the State red, white and blue.

Senator George R. Fearon, examining a picture postcard showing one of the buses, said:

"Well, this bus is painted orange—orange from the north of Ireland (dryly, with a glance at Dunnigan). I'm not in favor of that. If that's his idea of red, I'm against the bill."

"Why not let them use any old color, but make school buses carry a flag?" suggested Senator Benjamin Feinberg.

"That wouldn't help any unemployed painters," Fearon objected.

$30,000 Bond Ordered For Burglar Suspect

Allegedly wanted for various offenses in nine States, James Farnsworth, charged with housebreaking, was held for the grand jury in bond of $30,000 by Police Court Judge Ralph Given yesterday.

The bond was the largest—for a similar charge—in the history of local courts. Police accused Farnsworth of breaking into the home of George Huguely, 5631 Western avenue northwest, last month. Silverware valued at $1,500 was stolen and later recovered in Baltimore, police reported.

Accessory Firms Expect More Auto Business

New York, April 9 (AP).—On the basis of the expanded production of automobiles during the first quarter, Wall street circles are counting on a substantially increased business and larger profits for the automobile equipment and accessory companies.

It is estimated that the business volume available to the accessory industry during the first three months was about 40 per cent greater than a year ago.

Virginia Floods Claim One Life; Cold Ends Here

No Danger of D. C. Rise; Double Cherry Blooms Due in 3 Days.

Rising Virginia streams, swollen by rain and snow, claimed one life yesterday, while in Washington the Weather Bureau reported King Winter's April comeback definitely was ended.

As farmers in the Old Dominion watched rising waters and began to check crop damage by incessant rainy weather, predictions for the district today were for clear skies and temperatures in the low fifties.

Washington is in no danger of a flood, although Rock Creek and other tributaries of the Potomac coursed in muddy torrents toward the river.

No Flood Threat Here.

"Rain here, although heavy, is insufficient to cause floods of any sort," W. J. Moxom, acting chief of the river and flood department of the Weather Bureau, said last night. He called condition of the Potomac's tributaries "no more than seasonal."

Snow, which fell in the District early yesterday before dawn, melted as it struck the ground, except in outlying sections.

Yesterday's minimum temperature was 33 degrees at 7 a. m., while the maximum was 43 at 6 p. m.

In South Albemarle County, Va., Arthur H. Mallory, 60-year-old bachelor, was drowned with a horse when the animal fell in a flooded stream.

Struggled Beneath Horse.

Persons in the neighborhood, the Associated Press reported, said Mallory was found beneath his horse and that there were evidences he had struggled fiercely to free himself. Handicapped by near-sightedness, apparently he had ridden his horse into the stream without knowing how much it had been swollen by steady rains.

For the third consecutive year, the apricot crop in Franklin County, Pa., has been wiped out by severe weather conditions. A 2-inch snowfall yesterday froze blossoms, orchardists reported today after a survey, while it was feared that a large part of the cherry crop also is ruined.

Apricots and cherry trees were in full bloom when the storm hit. Peaches had not advanced to the extent that the snow hurt them.

Double Blossoms Unhurt.

Word that wet weather was proving highly unfavorable to Eastern Shore produce crops came from Onancock. Constant rainfall and low temperatures have threatened severe loss to Irish potato plantings, beans and newly bedded sweet potatoes.

Tobacco farmers of Southside, Va., were said to be worried lest excessive moisture damage their plant beds by causing inferior seedlings.

The James River still was rising at Richmond. Snow and sleet which covered the upper part of the valley and highlands of Southwest Virginia Sunday and Sunday night was swelling streams as it thawed rapidly.

Meanwhile the National Capital Parks Bureau announced double cherry blossoms around Hains Point had been unhurt by cold. With three warm days, officials said, the blooms will be out in full glory.

Garner to Choose Senate Conferees

pant of the chair might have dragged on for days.

In addition, he has frequently served as White House contact man on Capitol Hill, with some results. He played a leading role in breaking the recent works bill deadlock, and sat in with House and Senate leaders on preliminary conferences that broke the impasse.

Outgrowth of Works Jam.

Yesterday's announcement was the direct outgrowth of the works bill tangle. Following the custom, Chairman Carter Glass, of the Senate Appropriations Committee, had designated ranking members of his group as conferees. It so happened that four out of the five Senators named were opposed to the bill. Senate Majority Leader Robinson, later protested, but Glass stood his ground.

Yesterday Garner spoke his mind, and the Senate listened.

"So far as the record shows," he said, "the chair appoints the conferees, whereas as a matter of fact he does not even see their names.

"Hereafter, the present occupant of the chair expects to xercise some discretion in the matter of electing conferees, if the Senate authorizes hi mto make the appointmnts.

Expcid to Speed Legislation.

"The chair mentions this now, so that no Senator in the future may think he is slighted or otherwise discriminated against if he asks unanimous consent that the chairman appoint conferees and sends his list and those names on the list are not approved."

With his intimate knowledge of parliamentary strategy, gleaned from years as House floor leader and later Speaker, the Vice President is now in a position to do much to hurry the log-jammed New Deal program to final enactment, and he knows it.

But the Senate is ever jalous of its own powers and of prerogatives assumed by the chair. Every now and then it gives its vice presidents a real dressing down. The astute Mr. Garner knows that too.

Copeland Bill on Food, Drugs, Dies in Senate

By the United Press.

The Copeland pure food and drug bill, on which the Senate started heavely in response to President Roosevelt's request for food and drug legislation this session, is dead.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, the author, yesterday said he would wait "for a more friendly Congress" to enact the measure.

Nearby Bladensburg Is Again Under Water

Fed by recent rains, the Eastern Branch rose again yesterday and flooded the Baltimore boulevard and the Defense highway, main highways to Baltimore and Annapolis. The Army engineers turned down a flood-control scheme because the damage annually was not enough to pay the interest charges on the flood-control project.

Million Graft In Alien Fixing Bared by U. S.

"grave irregularities" was revealed when the former independent bureaus of immigration and naturalization were combined under Commissioner Daniel W. MacCormack in August, 1933.

Sought Higher-Ups.

"A preliminary study," the department announcement said, "indicated that two previous investigations in 1931 and 1932 into conditions in the New York district had failed to uncover proportions of the activities of racketeers or the extent of their dealings with persons who have been connected with the service.

"As a result of evidential data disclosed in hte preliminary survey, the Commission of Immigration and Naturalization instituted the present investigation to apprehend the alleged 'higher-ups,' as well as to round up those who might be involved with them in immigration irregularities or naturalization frauds in the New York district."

It was stated that charges against Hogan, who was employed in the office of the New York collector of customs from June 16, 1930, to February 28, 1934, involved three fraudulent registry cases. The other two indicted are Umberto Migliaccio and Isador Lake, both charged with violation of the naturalization laws. Migliaccio was described as a deserting seaman and Lake as an alien smuggled into the United States. Both men have pleaded not guilty.

Extortion Charged.

Two separate investigating units have been conducting the inquiry. One, which has included at times as many as 46 men, has been at work uncovering frauds connected with naturalization procedings. Another force of 15 inspectors was assigned to New York to supplement the regular Ellis Island staff in investigating the cases of aliens who have entered or remained in the country illegally.

Since the second force began its work November 1, 1934, it has completed 1,600 investigations, the department announced. The investigation thus far has resulted in 391 warrants for arrest and the arrest of 328 aliens, in addition to 83 deportations. Sixty-seven aliens still are in custody and 178 have been released on bond or otherwise pending completion of hearings in their cases.

"The inquiry into racketeering in immigration and naturalization cases," the Labor Department said, "has developed evidence that large sums of money have been extorted from aliens seeking naturalization or the regularization of their status following an original illegal entry, and that many substantial bribes have been paid by criminals engaged in this traffic to persons now or formerly in the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"Sums ranging up to $100 are alleged to have been paid in cases involving false witnesses or passing of an applicant who had failed in his test of knowledge of the Government or his ability to speak English."

$300 to $1,300 Paid.

It is alleged that fees ranging from $300 to $1,300 were levied in cases involving fradulent or altered manifest records, where it was desirable to obtain a record that would safeguard an alien from deportation or procure citizenship status by showing his legal admission at the Port of New York for permanent residence.

The Labor Department said a special night force of 11 men spent several months on examination of 5,000 volumes of lists of passengers, or "manifests," on file at Ellis Island. The examination covered approximately 4,000,000 individual alien arrivals.

Among other papers examined were naturalization records in New York and Washington and court records in Brooklyn and New York. This examination was made for the purpose of determining discrepancies, forgeries and substitutions on which charges will be based. The examination covered in detail 150,000 naturalization petitions and files extending over a period of nine years.

"The preliminary checkup," the Labor Department said, "revealed that manifest records at Ellis Island had been altered, official documents were missing, and files relating to cases of fraud had been stolen.

"These revelations started the investigators on a search which disclosed that bribery, racketeering and deception had flourished for years in the New York district.

"Revelations so startling in character have come to light that investigators believe that the actual extent of corruption and fraud has been but partially disclosed."

Japanese Smuggling Charged on Coast

By the Associated Press.

San Diego, Calif., April 9.—Eight persons were jailed today after Federal immigration officers captured an alleged smugglers' car containing four Japanese aliens on the coast highway near San Clemente. The car was overtaken by officers after a 10-mile chase. The aliens crossed the border at Tijuana yesterday, police said.

Senate Group Reshapes AAA Licensing Bill

Amendments Modified, but Opposition to Them Remains Firm.

After two years of backstage controversy, the ill-fated AAA amendments, designed to broaden the Secretary of Agriculture's licensing powers, were slightly modified by the Senate Agriculture Committee and groomed for presentation to the Senate.

Uncompromising opposition to the changes, which has raged against them on both sides of the Capitol, will break out again on the Senate floor. It was learned that prominent Senate opponents of the legislation are not satisfied with the committee modifications.

The alterations provide that consent of two-thirds of the producers of a farm commodity must give their consent before the Secretary of Agriculture can impose a license on its processors and distributors. The original amendments would have permitted the secretary to impose a license, with White House consent, whenever the price paid the farmers sagged greatly.

Wallace Agrees to Changes.

Secretary Wallace, who attended the committee session, was said to have agreed to the changes; not so, the outsanding Senate opponents of the legislation. One of them said last night that any farmer who packs his own products still can be arbitrarily subjected to license.

Formal action reporting the modified amendments is expected to be taken today. The amendments still are snarled in the House Agriculture Committee, however, where they were recommended after strong House opposition.

Meanwhile, agitation for repeal of processing taxes, with which AAA officials are counting on paying out $550,000,000 to farmers who cooperate in the 1935 adjustment program, continued in House and Senate, and threatened to project itself into the AAA amendment fight.

Textile Operator Hits Tax.

Richard P. Kendall, Massachusetts textile operator, who yesterday told the Senate Finance Committee that the entire textile industry is "facing bankruptcy," in a special memorandum to the President asked the lifting of cotton processing taxes from cotton mills. In return, Kendall said, the industry could be asked for a 10 per cent wage increase.

Under the works bill, the President has authority to pay farm benefits from the $4,880,000,000 works fund, in lieu of processing taxes.

During the first two hours of its circulation yesterday, a petition calling on the President to lift the processing tax was signed by 46 House members.

French Accord On Trade Laid To Crack Down

Treaty With U. S. on Dual Taxing Viewed as Fruit of New Policy.

effect of clearing the road to additional economic and trade relationships that will be mutually profitable.

Conversations between French diplomats here and the State Department regarding alleged discriminatory actions against American commerce are still going on. The belief prevails that the French will agree to grant the nationals of this country equitable treatment in the matter of import quotas and other trade barriers.

Secretary Hull a week ago let it be understood that any country which did not treat the United States on a basis of equality with other nations in the matter of trade and foreign exchange restrictions could not expect to enjoy trade concessions granted by the United States.

So far no country has been denied the concessions given to Belgium, although President Roosevelt listed Germany, Italy, Denmark and Portgual as countries to which these concessions would be given only until existing most-favored-nation agreements with them could be terminated. Czechoslovakia escaped being denied the Belgian concessions by signing a provisional most-favored-nation agreement with this Government.

Effective January 1.

The agreement concluded at Paris yesterday by an exchange of ratifications between American Ambassador Isidor Straus and French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval becomes effective next January 1. The pact was negotiated April 27, 1932, but since has remained ineffective.

Under the French law, the State Department explained, in addition to the various French taxes imposed on the income and dividends of the French subsidiary, through which American business concerns are operating in that country, an additional tax is assessed against the American parent corporation based on the dividends which it has declared.

Under the new convention France will not collect this latter tax when the American subsidiary concerns in France comply with certain procedural conditions.

Chain Store Tax Drive Subsiding

New York, April 9.—With 44 State Legislatures in session this year and a flood of antichain store tax measures introduced thus far, it has been believed that a further heavy burden of discriminatory taxation was about to be imposed on chain stores, says the Standard Statistics Co.

Radical measures have secured little support from the State governing bodies, however, and with the adjournment of 17 legislatures thus far, antichain taxation has been passed in only one State—South Dakota.

Commission Orders Inquiry of Raid Involving Capt. Morgan, Headley.

secretaries of influential members of Congress who just happened to be caught between bets in the Little raid. The success of the Little raid led to a charge by Hugh Fred, who conducts the Ugly Duckling Tea Room at 115 B street southeast, that he had been informed at 10 a. m. of the raid made by Salkeld at 2 p. m. on the day the fruitless raid was made.

Salkeld Denied Charge.

Before the crime committee, Capt. Morgan testified that Fred had told him of hearing at 10 a. m. of the impending raid at 2 p. m., but had made no effort to follow up the statement. Inspector Headley said he hadn't believed the story and had done nothing about it officially. Salkeld vehemently denied any possibility he had given a "tip-off." Fred said he had just got information about the impending raid "out of the air," as he may have been walking up the street or just standing in the doorway of his tea room.

Appointment of the special committee was made by the Commissioners in an effort to absolve them of any responsibility for their final action. It is no secret that several police privates and high-ranking officers believe Inspector Headley and Capt. Morgan should be forced to retire. So do several District officials outside the Police Department.

Inspector Bean, in his report, is said to have censured Inspector Headley, but to have refrained from any recommendation about him. Commissioner Hazen refused to make public the Bean report. The report, he said, will be turned over to the special committee. Inspector Bean did, however, recommend transfer of Capt. Morgan from the Fifth Precinct and general overhauling of the precinct, it was said. The reticence of Inspector Bean was explained on the grounds that he felt himself under constraint. Under the so-called "gentlemen's agreement" with Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, Inspector Bean was to be forced to retire so that Inspector Headley could be promoted to be Assistant Superintendent of Police.

The special investigating committee was the second named within two days by the Commissioners as a result of testimony and disclosures before the House Crime Committee. Another committee is to consider changes in the basis of promotion for members of the Police and Fire Departments.

Student 'Strike' on War Hailed by Group Head

New York, April 9 (U.P.).—Roger H. Baldwin, chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union, tonight hailed the projected student "strike" against war as a "most hopeful public demonstration."

Baldwin, who will address Columbia student pacifists during their demonstration Friday, said: "Only by getting mass demonstrations against war is it possible to dramatize an opposition to war far vaster than the war-makers figure. The student movement is only an indication of the deep ferment now stirring in response to the unprecedented preparations for war which the Roosevelt Administration is making."

Leaking Ship, 32 Aboard, Safe; Hope for Schooner Abandoned

Cabin Cruiser Lost in Soun 'Worst' Northeast Gale Perils Shipping.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—The storm-lashed freighter Tower Bridge tonight apparently had won her fight against pounding seas and was expected to reach St. Johns Newfoundland, by tomorrow noon.

Wireless messages from the vessel, which earlier had flashed distress signals and reported one hold filling rapidly, said she was not in need of immediate assistance. The ship has 32 men aboard.

The liner Newfoundland, which rushed to the freighter's assistance in response to her S O S, was asked to stand by in event the leaking vessel's pumps were unable to control inflow of water.

The Tower Bridge, of British registry, was 200 miles offshore when she requested assistance.

With what mariners called the worst northeast gale in years whipping the Atlantic Coast, reports of other casualties began coming in.

An unidentified cabin cruiser was feared to have gone to the bottom in Long Island Sound with three or four persons aboard.

The two-master schooner Arthur G. Story, missing since March 3 with a captain and six fishermen aboard, was given up as lost by her Gloucester (Mass.) owners.

The steamer Fairfax reported sighting three large pieces of wreckage, believed to be the deck and deckhouse of a sunken vessel, 19 miles off the Maryland shore.

The freighter Volusia was driven aground in Delaware Bay by thunderous rollers which threatened beach cottages along the New Jersey and Long Island shores.

The steamship Charles Pratt reported to the Coast Guard here that she was standing by the fishing boat J. Martin, in distress off the Jersey coast. The J. Martin usually carries seven men.

The leaking Tower Bridge, a vessel of 5,161 tons formerly known as the Badagry, was bound from Blyth, England, for St. Johns, to pick up a general cargo for Capetown.

Aboard the Newfoundland, which went to her aid, was the Governor of Newfoundland, Sir David Murray Anderson, who was returning from a trip to England.

Search for the cabin cruiser which was feared to have sunk in Long Island Sound was abandoned by the Coast Guard after an all-night patrol.

N. Y. Senate Votes Bill for Jobless

Killgrew Measure Requires Employers to Donate.

By the United Press.

Albany, N. Y., April 9.—The New York Senate passed the Killgrew bill tonight creating a State unemployment system.

The measure was passed in amended form and must be returned to the assembly for concurrence before being sent to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman for signature. The vote was 30 to 16.

Several attempts to amend the proposal to delay its effective date until after Congress had adopted a Federal plan were beaten down.

Republican opponents charged passage of the bill without the amendment would "drive" industry from the State.

Under terms of the bill, employers will be required to contribute from 1 to 3 per cent of their pay roll into a State fund. Contributions would be paid on March 1, 1936.

$24,000 Salary Top For Crosley Radio

By the Associated Press.

The top salary of the Crosley Radio Corporation, of Cincinnati, was shown by its report to the Securities Commission yesterday to be $24,000 paid to Powel Crosley, jr., president.

Crosley held 28 per cent or 152,699 shares of the company's common stock and Gwyndolyn Crosley, Cincinnati, held 24 per cent or 130,910 shares. Lewis M. Crosley, vice president, received a $15,000 salary.

The largest salary reported yesterday went to Claire L. Barnes, Detroit, who received $34,500 as president of Houdaille-Hershey Corporation. Barnes held 11,800 shares of the company's class A stock.

Salaries of officials of S. S. Kresge Co. were not reported, but S. S. Kresge, chairman, Detroit, was shown to hold 23 per cent of 1,286,584 shares of the company's common stock.

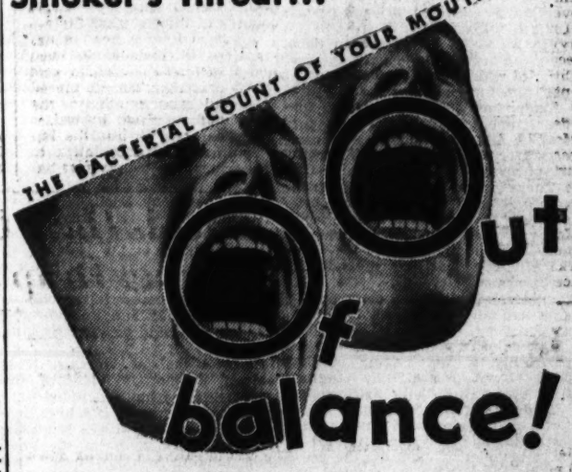
Smoker's Throat..?



Get it back quickly, and safely, with LA LASINE

... the DOUBLE-ACTION Antiseptic

Over-indulgence in smoking results in tiny particles of carbon and deposits of "tobacco tar" becoming imbedded in the mouth mucus. Irritation may start. Germs breed... too rapidly for Nature to kill them with her own antiseptics... Then the bacterial count of your mouth is thrown out of balance. And sore throat, even catarrhal inflammation may develop.

Gargle with La Lasine mixed with water half-and-half. Or use it full strength. A double-action takes place.

First, the antiseptic foam of La Lasine surrounds the particles of irritating foreign matter. Your mouth feels clean as they are expelled. Simultaneously, the special La Lasine membrane-restoratives bring back to par the salivary glands. Quickened to action, these glands release antiseptic enzymes and ferments. The bacterial count of your mouth and throat returns to balance.

La Lasine is safe—even if you should swallow it. Get a bottle from your druggist today. La Lasine is economical. The $1 size makes 2½ pints. La Lasine International, Inc., N. Y.

Ludendorff's Ovation Fails To Convert Him

Nazi "Outsider" Reiterates Views as Reich Honors His Birthday.

By the Associated Press.

Tutzing, Germany, April 9.—The Third Reich, of which he is an outsider by his own choice, today paid signal honors to the doughty World War fighter, Gen. Erich Ludendorff, on the occasion of his seventieth birthday anniversary.

On every side an effort was made to forget past quarrels. The former kaiser sent a hand-written message of congratulation. The former crown prince, who for many years had no contact with the former quartermaster-general, personally came to Tutzing to felicitate the warrior.

Richsfuehrer Adolf Hitler so far swallowed his pride as to visit Ludendorff before his birthday. He probably would have come today except for Ludendorff's own action refusing the title of field marshal general and emphasizing his anti-Christian position at a time when Der Fuehrer is trying his utmost to assure the churches that his government is rooted in Christianity.

Gen. Werner von Blomberg, defense minister, and Gen. Werner von Fritsch, chief of staff, came personally to congratulate Ludendorff on behalf of the nation's armed forces.

Laudatory articles about the soldier were written all over the Reich and Hitler commanded that public buildings display flags.

Despite all of this effort to woo Ludendorff, the uncompromising Prussian insisted upon pursuing his own course and his own ideas. He seemed to have been unaware of the word "diplomacy" which makes other men on certain occasions refrain from provocatively emphasizing ideas to which his fellow men take exception.

Standing on his veranda and ostensibly replying to Von Blomberg's warm words of tribute, but at the same time eyeing his followers in the garden below, the general reasserted his anti-Christian beliefs. He was a gallant figure in full dress uniform with spiked helmet and decorations.

"The racial realization of God is essential as a backbone for the state and army," said Ludendorff. "I know I caused the greatest disappointment to many of my friends and followers when I began publicly to attack the prevailing Christian faith, but I am convinced this faith is not apt for regenerating our peoples.

"My wife, Mathilde Ludendorff, has supplied a philosophy for a new racial religion. Every race must have its own indigenous conception of God."

Old Army Recalled.

Speaking of the military matters, he said:

"In this hour I am thinking of the old army, whose garb I have once more put on, and I am also thinking of the new army whose liability to conscription has made me so happy.

"Conscription, however, is not enough—we need also national unity. My wish for the German people is a strong army, a healthy procreative people, unity and peace. Long live liberty."

His followers in the garden then sang the anti-Catholic song, the refrain of which goes: "Save our people from the power of the priests."

Ludendorff's views, at least for the moment, halted all plans for making him a sort of super-general organizer of Germany's new conscript army.

There were many little things seen by observers at the Ludendorff premises that indicated a tense feeling exists between the Ludendorff followers and the dyed-in-the-wool Nazis. The Nazi correspondents, for instance, were given the cold shoulder, while foreign correspondents had an easy access to information.

Ludendorff's men also cut off any possibility of the singing of the Nazi "Horst Wessel," by singing their own anti-Catholic battle song.

Two squadrons of Germany's air force roared overhead during the festivities and seaplanes dropped a large bouquet of roses for the general as the celebration reached its height.

Thousands of Germans came here from Munich and other cities on special trains and shouted "Heil," as the tall, erect, white-haired Ludendroff greeted them with "Heil kameraden." He saluted reverently as his former regimental flag passed in the honor guard. He appeared to struggle with his emotions.

British Stage 'Raid' By 'Enemy' Planes

Citizens Dash to Ancient Caves to Elude Gas.

By the Associated Press.

Chislehurst, Kent, England, April 9.—Great Britain staged a realistic air raid rehearsal today despite the statement of Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council, last night, that the English "are not a people who will take with any pride and enthusiasm to the wearing of gas masks."

Hundreds of residents of Chislehurst participated in dramatic war-like scenes as "enemy" bombs burst in gardens and on wooded hillsides, engulfing the region in thick yellow clouds of deadly "prosgene gas." In reality, they were harmless "stink bombs."

Sirens wailed the alarm, Red Cross nurses hastily donned anti-gas garb, and men, women and children dashed for the ancient Chislehurst caves, where the early Britons sought shelter from their enemies 2,000 years ago.

The caves, which extend for 22 miles and are considered absolutely bombproof, have ben converted into gasproof shelters by means of air locks.

differences when they meet the Italian and French statesmen at Stresa on Thursday to consider united action against Germany's threat to peace in Europe.

"Germany is prepared to accept a system of military supervision," Sir John told Commons in his long-awaited pronouncement on the Berlin conversations, "provided it applies to all powers equally. Germany favors the idea of an air pact among the Locarno powers.

"Germany would not continue to participate in the league (from which she has withdrawn, effective in October, if she must remain a country of inferior rank."

It was in this connection that he revealed Hitler demanded restoration of at least some of the colonies seized from her during the World War, ending her position as an "inferior rank country" abroad.

Sir John said Hitler dwelt on the difficulties of identifying the aggressor.

Sir John, summarizing the talks of Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, in Moscow, said Russia contended the proposed Eastern pact was not aimed at the isolation or encirclement of any state, but the creation of equal security for all participants. Moscow felt participation of Germany and Poland—who rejected it—would be the best solution.

He said that at Warsaw, Eden learned Poland, in view of the agreements she has concluded with Russia and Germany, is asking herself whether any new proposals would improve or harm the good understanding which those two agreements already have established.

Dust Storm Closes Southwest Schools

Mrs. Vanderbilt's Trip Is Delayed by Gales.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 9.—Severe dust storms, behind which lingered a teasing promise of rain, closed schools in parts of Oklahoma today, continued a siege of more than 24 hours at Liberal, Kans., and halted the motor car trip of a Vanderbilt in Texas.

The long-harassed area gathered some solace from reports that dust storms in the Denver sector were routed late today by rain and, in most parts of the Rocky Mountain region, snow.

At Amarillo, Tex., Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., the former Helen Varner, of Clarksburg, W. Va., was compelled to halt her motor car trip to join her journalist-husband at Albuquerque, N. Mex.

Dust, driven by a 40-mile-an-hour wind, caused the closing of schools at Boise City, Okla. Business men escorted the head-bent pupils home.

Byrd Visits Costa Rica On Way Back From Pole

San Jose, Costa Rica, April 9 (AP).—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, who arrived today on his way back to the United States from the South Pole, disclosed that he intends to "hole up" in Boston for three years and write the story of his explorations in ten volumes.

His immediate plans include a week's stay with his wife in Costa Rica. He will go to a country farm near San Jose. He plans to fly to Panama April 20 and rejoin the expedition's flagship en route to New York.

House Passes Ban On Profits of War

in order to organize various new corps and units such as the Air Corps.

Quarters Now Available.

"2. There are two strengths of the fundamental units in the Army—peace strength and war strength. War strength, fixed by tactical requirements of combat averages 250 enlisted men per company troop or battery. Peace strength, fixed by the necessity for efficient training and for reasonable readiness, should average 120 enlisted men. In recent years, however, this peace strength average has been whittled away until it now barely averages 70 enlisted men per company troop or battery. This law restores to these basic units their peace-time strength. In the great majority of Army posts barracks were originally constructed for peace-time strengths so that quarters are already available."

The War Department appropriation of $402,000,000, including $61,000,000 for nonmilitary projects such as harbor improvement, compared with a grant of $276,000,000 last year.

Indications were, the items authorized in the $38,098,000 Navy building program, previously approved by the House, would be financed out of public works funds. Projects included stretched from the Boston navy yard to Hawaii. The largest improvement would be a $10,000,000 floating drydock in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

Radio Station Here Included.

Included were $175,000 for a radio receiving station near the District; $1,941,000 for new Marine barracks at Quantico, Va., and $500,000 for barracks and a mess hall at the Norfolk (Va.) Naval Air Station.

The Senate also passed bills which would increase the number of students at the Pensacola, (Fla.) Naval Training School by 498 and would raise the number of West Point Cadets from 1,200 to 1,919. The House earlier passed the former measure and will act later on the latter.

Consideration of the 1936 naval appropriations bill will be delayed until the House acts on social security legislation. The measure would carry an appropriation of $488,000,000 as compared with $303,000,000 for 1935.

While the bill has not been formally reported out of committee it was understood to contemplate an immediate increase of 5,000 in Navy enlisted personnel and to clear the way for an ultimate increase of 11,000. The present enlisted strength is 79,700.

Meanwhile, there was growing agitation in Washington for legislation which would insure American neutrality in case of another war. Peace societes have been unusually active on Capitol Hill since new war clouds have appeared in Europe.

Il Duce Masses Police to Guard Stresa Parleys

Stresa was alive with activity tonight as the advance men of the various delegations began arriving. The Hotel Regina, where the press is housed, already is half full, while Hotel Borromo, where the British and French delegations are staying, also is filled, chiefly by Italian officials assisting in organizing the conference.

Duce Arrives Today.

Mussolini arrives tomorow. He will stay at the Castle Isla Bella.

Several hundred boys in the Fascist Balilla training outfit paraded through the streets, wearing the uniforms of sailors. These lads will be used as ceremonial detachments during the parley.

Flags are selling by the hundreds, mostly the British Union Jack and the French Tricolor. All stores, hotels and public buildings, as well as most of the houses, will be decorated Thursday with French, British and Italian flags.

The agenda so far is incomplete, other than it is known the statesmen will examine Germany's conscription law and rearmament plans from the various viewpoints involved. The delegates probably will try to agree on some united form of action, but observers doubted the numerous peace pacts being proposed on all sides would figure heavily in the discussion.

Apparently the parley chiefly is intended to exchange ideas and reach some united front at Geneva.

By the Associated Press.

A close, but carefully unofficial, watch on developments last night represented the United States attitude toward the tri-power conference opening tomorrow at Stresa.

Though not directly concerned, this Government was interested in the discussion of schemes for a collective security system in Europe, the League of Nations attitude toward disarmament and proposed revision of treaties affecting Germany and other central European countries.

Secretary Hull has let it be known he sees no reason for direct American participation in the meeting. But American envoys in London, Paris, Rome and Berlin are expected to maintain close contact with the Governments to which they are accredited.

Hugh Wilson, minister to Switzerland and an experienced observer at the League of Nations, was in one of the most advantageous listening posts in Europe and was expected to make comprehensive reports on the conference.

ble because of Hitler's refusal to join it. It is composed of three articles applying the provisions of articles 10, 16 and 17 of the league covenant to the mutual relations of the two nations.

Thus, under the provision founded on article 16, if either nation is attacked by Germany she would have a right to call upon the other for specified military, naval or air assistance.

France and Russia, it was said, will ask the league council at the coming session to reaffirm and reinforce the articles upon which their mutual pact is based. This is to be the gist of the French proposal at Stresa, which was embodied in a memorandum discussed by the cabinet during a three hour session along with the draft of a resolution intended for signature by the French, British and Italian delegations.

Proposal Favored.

The British were understood here not to be averse to the two-point French proposal for a general non-aggression accord and mutual assistance pacts as a second line of defense against war, while Russia, to which France is looking for eventual aid, is understood to favor the idea.

Laval conferred with the British and French ambassadors, and met the Soviet envoy again.

The French plan, which contemplates enabling the powers within the new agreement to meet hastily at some place other than Geneva in case of a sudden attack and decide upon military and economic action against an aggressor, would be negotiated within the framework of the league if approved at Stresa.

It would supplement the league covenant and be designed to avoid delay.

Premier Flandin will entrain for Stresa at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow (4:30 a. m., Eastern standard time).

Prison Torture Charges Made Against 2 More

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlotte, N. C., April 9.—Dr. C. S. McLaughlin, Mecklenburg County physician for the past 32 years, was charged today with having "assaulted and maimed" two colored prisoners while they were in the "torture cells" of a State Prison Camp near here.

Charged jointly with McLaughlin is Camp Superintendent T. S. Brown, who is also accused of such brutal treatment of the prisoners that the feet of each of them had to be amputated after a confinement in the solitary cells.

Torture Charged.

The charges allege that both McLaughlin and Brown "assaulted, maimed and tortured Woodrow Wilson Shropshire and Roberts Barnes, who underwent a double amputation of the feet as the alleged result of those members having been frozen while in solitary confinement in Little Camp, near this city, during January."

Soon after the testimony of colored prisoners, Solicitor John G. Carpenter ordered the name of the physician included in the list of persons already charged.

Dr. McLaughlin took the stand before Judge Don Phillips who is sitting as a committing magistrate, to deny that he had ever tortured the prisoners or that he had neglected them after their confinement in the dark cells.

Prisoners' Stories.

Earlier in the day a procession of colored prisoners told of being dragged from their cells in the middle of the night to be beaten for minor infractions of the regulations.

They told their stories reluctantly and timidly—stories of being kicked and beaten while serving road sentences.

Oscar Cunningham and Ed Biggers, both colored, told of having been beaten for trivial offenses by Prison Guards R. C. Rape, J. W. Eudy and T. M. Gordon, all of whom have been charged previously with brutality.

Biggers said he was pulled from his cell in the early morning hours to be beaten by the guards after he had accidentally cut another prisoner on the previous day.

The State's case neared a close as the defense attorneys prepared to summon a host of witnesses o rebut the charges. Indications are that the judicial hearing will not be completed for several days.

Whitney Won't Run For Exchange Post

Rumors of Independent Race Are Spiked.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—Richard Whitney tonight publicly withdrew from the race for presidency of the New York Stock Exchange and set to rest Wall street rumors that he might seek re-election as an independent candidate.

He issued a statement saying that Charles R. Gay, announced yesterday as the choice of the nominating committee, "has all my good wishes," and adding that "unity of action is essential."

Whitney's silence for more than 24 hours after the formal announcement that the nominating committee had failed to propose him for re-election had led to rumors that supporters were trying to persuade him to run on an independent ticket in the election May 13.

U. S. and State Probe Dead Broker's Firms

Boston, April 9 (AP).—Five firms, controlled in part by Bowen Tufts, millionaire Boston and Winchester investment banker who committed suicide Sunday, were under investigation tonight by Federal and State agencies.

A Boston real estate broker was cleared of blame in Tufts' death by District Attorney Warren L. Bishop, of Middlesex County.

Bishop attributed Tuft's suicide to "financial troubles" after conferring with Howard W. Lang, of Boston, named in a note left by Tufts. The note said Lang could "take full credit for my death." Lang, Bishop said, could not be linked to the suicide.

Skyline Drive Parley Slated Here Today

Richmond, Va., April 9 (AP).—Gov. Peery, Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley and Attorney General A. P. Staples will go to Washington tomorrow to confer with Senator Harry F. Byrd and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes on resumption of work on the Skyland Drive, designed to link the Great Smoky and Shenandoah parks.

Work on the drive, which will run on the crest of the Blue Ridge Range, has been suspended because of disagreement about procurement by the State of scenic easements on each side of the road.

2 Are Injured As Automobile And Bus Crash

Driver of Sedan Near Death; Operator of Lorry Is Held.

Two persons were injured, one seriously, when an interstate bus and a sedan collided on the Crain highway near Upper Marlboro yesterday. Police held the driver of the bus.

"Mac" McLaren, of Clinton, Md., the most seriously injured, and Mrs. Olive Berger, of Pittsburgh, Pa., were removed to Emergency Hospital, Annapolis. McLaren, with a possible skull fracture and internal injuries was not expected to live through the night.

Mrs. Berger, said by police to be the driver of the sedan, was treated for a sprained hip and severe lacerations. Her husband, Andrew Berger, was uninjured.

Witnesses said the bus attempted to go around a parked car and that the sedan, unable to pass on the narrow concrete strip, applied the brakes and skidded rear-end-first into the bus.

The sedan was demolished against a telephone pole. The bus continued approximately 100 feet, then ripped up several yards of a parallel barbed wire fence, before lunging 50 feet into a field, where it was mired.

$7,200 Gas Tax Levied by State Due Hyattsville

Town Council Passes Act to Force Renovation of County Jail.

The town of Hyattsville will receive shortly $7,200 as its share of the State gasoline tax for the last fiscal year, it was announced at a meeting of the council Monday night by H. Winship Wheatley, jr., corporation counsel.

Wheatley recently has been in conference with officials of the State roads commission and Prince Georges County commissioners regarding the town's allotmet. The money has been due for some time and streets are badly in need of repairs, officials say. Part of the money will be applied on the town's bonded road indebtedness.

An opinion was read from State's Attorney Alan Bowie holding that county police have authority to enforce town ordinances in Hyattsville along with all other law violations for which warrants are held, or for violations that occur in their presence.

The opnion, subject of which has evoked much controversy in the town, has been referred to County Police Chief J. J. Crowley. County officers have held previously that their jurisdiction did not cover local municipalities.

An ordinance was approved by the council providing that jails maintained within the town shall be sufficiently above ground to permit natural ventilation and sunlight, with each cell having adequate air space.

This action was construed as a blow at the Prince Georges County Jail maintained in the Metropolitan District Building, at Hyattsville, in which cells are on a level below the street. The building has been termed "unsuitable" by Dr. H. T. Willis, Hyattsville mayor.

Adequate bedding, heating and ventilation and separate quarters for male and female prisoners must be provided and the jail shall be subject to medical inspections at discretion of the town health officer, the ordinance provides. It was adopted along with a complete set of recodified ordinances, compiled by Corporation Counsel Wheatley and passed by the recent session of the State Legislature.

Mayor Willis and Councilman T. D. Jarrell were designated to appear at a hearing before Gov. Harry W. Nice at Annapolis tomorrow in an effort to have the Governor veto a bill providing for a referendum at Hyattsville on a 5-cent tax for a town library.

Goering to Wed Actress Today; Nazis Celebrate

Nuptials Will Rival in Pomp Fetes Staged in Days of Royalty.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 9.—Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering marries Frau Emmy Sonnemann tomorrow, and tonight Germany's Nazis already had begun celebrating.

The air minister's wedding will be the first among high ranking Nazi chieftains since the Hitler regime came to power.

A 500-mark trust fund (about $200) was established by Nazi insurance companies today for the first 50 girls born in Germany after the ceremony.

Simultaneously Goering himself issued a six-page, closely typed program for the nuptial festivities complete in such minute details as incidental music and kinds of wines to be served.

Electors went from house to house asking contributions for a wedding gift to the Prussian premier and his handsome 37-year-old actress bride-to-be.

No rehearsal for the wedding ceremony was necessary, since Goering yesterday was best man at his adjutant's wedding.

What royal weddings are for other countries Goering's will be for Germany and orders have been issued for a vast turnout of Nazi leaders and uniformed bodies of every sort, especially those groups which the portly Goering himself heads.

Festivities began at 4:30 p. m. today with a tea given for a select few at the air minister's official mansion and presentation of Johannes Strauss' "Egyptian Helen" at the State opera house at 8 p. m.

Among those invited to the latter affair were members of the Diplomatic Corps, guests invited to the wedding, Prussian councilors, leaders of the army, navy, Storm Troops and Black-Shirt guards, members of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's bodyguard, chieftains of the Nazi Motor Corps, the Civil Air Corps, Labor Service, Hitler Youths and women's organizations and National Socialist party leaders.

Two Burned to Death In Aircraft Carrier

Newport News, Va., April 9 (AP).—Two workers were burned to death here today in the bottom of a well in the hull of the aircraft carrier Yorktown, when fire, apparently caused by a leaking acetylene line, trapped them.

The victims were Henry W. Emory, shipfitter, and Daniel R. Holloway, his helper.

The two were known to be working in the well, but fellow workmen believed they had left for lunch. Coroner G. Colbert Tyler said the men probably had died in a few moments after the fire flared up.

$810 in Easter Finery Taken From 2 Stores

Easter finery, totaling $810, was included in loot from two Connecticut avenue stores early yesterday. Police were told that thieves smashed plate glass show windows on Nos. 1825 and 1207.

Silk hosiery valued at $600, gloves valued at $25, and assorted women's sweaters valued at $60 were reported stolen from the first address by Miss Martha E. L. Falke, manager.

At the latter store, two fur neck pieces valued at $125 were said to be missing.

Tugwell Calls Work Program Third Economy

Scheme Neither Socialism Nor Capitalism, Says New Dealist.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., April 9.—Rexford Guy Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, tonight described the Administration's $4,000,000,000 work program as "a third economy—the sphere which belongs neither to private profit nor to State socialism as it is generally understood," and declared the program is needed "if we are to avoid another war or a destructive upheaval of social resentment at home."

As one of those destined to help spend the huge fund, the one-time Columbia professor defined the new work drive as "standing aside from and supplementing * * * a co-ordinated economy for major commercial production and an unplanned, unregimented individualist economy in every other field."

Tugwell, in an address before the Rochester Teachers Association, further described his "third economy" as "represented by such enterprises as the work-relief program, the CCC, the gigantic problem of providing decent housing for the American people, the checking of soil erosion, the resettlement of the underprivileged, the provision of sanitary and recreational facilities and the development of power and recreation projects."

Unemployment a "Resource."

Instead of being a liability, Tugwell said unemployment "is the greatest of our potential resources" which, if unused, could lead the Nation into war or a social revolution. He added:

"Had we utilized the unemployed alone during the depression, we could have given every family in the country a brand-new $5,000 house, or we could have scrapped and rebuilt the entire system of railroad, industrial and utilities properties in the Nation on more modern and more efficient lines. This is an appalling waste and one which challenges statesmanship."

Referring to damage done natural resources by "uncontrolled profit-taking" and the "throttling of demand" for housing, Tugwell said "we realize that there is work here for at least 5,000,000 men as far ahead as we can see."

Most thinking to date, Tugwell added, has been on two alternatives—complete Socialism or return to "untrammeled private profiteering," with no appreciation of a third one which he defined as "an area which has been neglected by both private initiative and by socialistic theory and practice * * * a category of public works, of necessary and unprofitable measures which must be taken to preserve the values of our national patrimony."

Regimentation Cry "False."

Striking at outcry of "so-called regimentation" as a "wholly false issue," Tugwell said the third economy "belongs neither to private profit nor to State socialism," but can be "invoked on the basis of sound historical experience to justify enthusiasm for the program of public works and rehabilitation by which the present Administration is combating the depression."

"I shall not attempt to prophesy the changes in our social and economic life which might come as a result of utilizing the present program of work relief for cultivation of the third economic system," Tugwell said. "Yet it is altogether possible that this system will be the means by which we reconcile and assign the respective spheres of what we call socialism and what we call individualism."

spread through the community, a posse of irate citizens joined the police and the Bladensburg Fire Rescue Squad in a serach for Green. He was hunted through the woods until dawn.

It was learned that Mrs. Green is expecting another baby. As she is destitute, she says that if her husband is jailed she will be dependent upon either the succor of friends or on the emergnecy relief.

Green was not drunk when he beat Norma Jean, Mrs. Green said. He had never struck her, and his mistreatment of the child was a very recent development, she said.

According to police records, Green is a paroled convict from Lorton Reformatory, where he was sentenced for two years. On September 2, 1934, he forfeited $15 collateral on charges of being drunk and disorderly.

Not only toys and dolls were given to Norma Jean at the hospital, but many persons brought clothes. One caller asked her size and promised a complete wardrobe as a birthday present.

Boyce Bank Vault Outwits Robbers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boyce, Va., April 9.—Burglars made an attempt to open the vault of the Boyce State Bank here early today, but fled when the automatic burglary alarm was touched off.

The burglars, who left no clew to their identity, gained entrance by breaking the front door glass and releasing the lock. It is believed they were tampering with the outer door of the vault when the alarm sounded.

The burglars had fled by the time citizens were aroused. C. Van Devanter, cashier, said nothing was missing.

distribute the vast sum, but some officials are jittery as to their precise places in the new plans. In one quarter, the delay was taken as further evidence of an internal struggle among several of the President's subordinates.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes has been mentioned in particular as disgruntled over rumored advancement of others over his head. Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator; Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, and Admiral Christian P. Peoples, the Treasury procurement officer, all will have important roles in the new plans, and there will be many others named to the proposed board, it is said.

Meantime, Ickes announced that he is working for a "decentralization" of the PWA by the creation of "miniature PWAs" in States with projects which warrant them. Supporters of Hopkins were quick to point out that the FERA has been "decentralized" all along, disbursing most of its money to States.

Cause of Criticism.

This is advanced as one reason why the Relief Administration has been able to pour out more than $2,000,000,000 so hastily while Mr. Ickes, requiring Washington approval for all of his projects, has been criticized by some for slowness. Under his new plans, Ickes said he intends to set up legal, financial and engineering divisions in the States to pass on projects before forwarding them to headquarters here.

The Department of Agriculture also was busy with new plans. A congressional delegation headed by Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), of Texas, called on Secretary Henry A. Wallace and obtained his approval, they said, of an effort to obtain $150,000,000 of the works fund for soil-erosion control work in the drought-stricken States.

The group, with Wallace and H. H. Bennett, director of soil-erosion control work, plans to make its appeal directly to the President in the next few days. Control of soil erosion is expected to be one angle of the new rural works job slated for Dr. Tugwell, who made a speech in Rochester, N. Y., last night justifying the works program as a "third economy."

CCC Rejuvenated In 3d Corps Area

New Quota of 10,641 Will Be Inducted May 1.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 9.—Allocation of $30,000,000 to the Civilian Conservation Corps has served as a lifeline for thousands of workers in the Third Corps Area.

Since April 1 the corps has had no money. Clerical workers and enrollers have continued in their offices and camps, but there was no prospect of being paid. They held on hopefully.

Now the War Department has ordered enrollment to begin on April 15.

It is expected "new life" will not begin for the CCC before May 1. On that day new members are to begin their trek to camps.

In the Third Corps Area immediate enrollments are to total 10,641. State quotas are: Pennsylvania, 7,073; Virginia, 1,029; Maryland, 1,858; District of Columbia, 681.

Mystery Farm Doctor Is Held On Drug Count

Office Searched for Clew to Fate of Missing Woman Patient.

By the Associated Press.

Lancaster, Pa., April 9.—Sneering and defiant, Dr. H. E. Zimmerly, 67-year-old surgeon, was held for court today on four narcotic charges, while his squalid farm was searched further for Mrs. Gladys Lawson, missing patient.

The village doctor of Mechanic Grove, already charged with performing illegal operations, was unable to furnish the $12,000 bail.

His handy man, Richard Parker, also under a narcotic charge, was detained in a hospital, his hearing postponed indefinitely. He is held in default of $1,000 bail.

State police and county officers thumbed through the litter of papers and bottles in the doctor's dingy office for a clew as to where they might find the body of the slender Maryland blonde, who, they are convinced, died and was buried after an operation.

Zimmerly maintains he took her to Lancaster March 16, after he had operated on her for a tumor. District Attorney Paul A. Mueller expressed the belief that others have died in the farmhouse-hospital and were buried on the farm.

State police and health authorities also checked narcotics purchases by the physician which they assert he has failed to account for.

Agents investigating reports of a Maryland - Pennsylvania narcotic ring said to be active in racing centers also made inquiries in the case.

Two Insurance Suits Moved to U. S. Court

Lynchburg, Va., April 9 (AP).—Suits to collect $11,300 insurance on the life of the late James Adkins, 59-year-old Lynchburg salesman, who was killed by a holdup man in Charleston, W. Va., last November, were removed today from the Circuit Count to the United States District Court.

Petitions for the removal were filed by the United Commercial Traveler, which is being sued for $6,300 and the Travelers Protective Association, which is asked for $5,000.

Counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue must file an answer as the next step; proceedings of the board usually require months more for assignment for a hearing and for the taking of testimony. After that, the parties are allowed up to 60 days on each side to file briefs and replies, necessitating another three or four months before the matter is referred to the board for decision.

Hauptmann was assessed income taxes totaling $5,400 for the two years, penalties totaling $4,050.72 for failure to file an income tax return and for alleged fraudulent attempt to evade income taxes and interest of $226.64.

Describing Fisch's departure for Germany, the petition said:

"Isador Fisch, on the eve of his departure from New York City for Germany in December, 1933, being obviously convinced after almost two years of partnership dealings with the petitioner, Bruno, that he was honest, reliable and loyal * * * came to the petitioner's, Bruno's, residence on East 222d street, the Bronx, New York City, and left everything with him. These belongings consisted of his two trunks, his suitcase and last but not least, that diabolical shoe box.

"Unfortunately for the petitioner, Bruno, he made no examination of the contents, either at the time nor later, except that he was informed by Fisch that the trunks contained some 400 Hudson seal skins. * * *

"Freakishly Concealed."

"But unwittingly to the latter, the tubercular furrier had freakishly concealed some $14,600 of Lindbergh ransom money in gold notes in the shoe box which Fisch, with his implicit trust in his partner, intrusted to him.

"The equally freakish, but accidental discovery by the petitioner, Bruno, of the contents, behooved him to take steps as he considered most necessary to make the moneys safe and secure, in keeping with the trust imposed in him by Fisch, and the petitioner Bruno * * * in his great excitement and dilemma, ingeniously concealed the gold notes in his garage.

"Unfortunately for the petitioner, Bruno, this very concealment led to his apprehension, and all the world knows the rest of the story."

Zihlman Condition 'Decidedly' Worse

Sleeping SicknessSpecialist Called to Cumberland.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 9.—Former Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, Sixth Maryland District, once chairman of the District committee, ill at Memorial Hospital here, has been in a coma for two days. Reports are his condition has taken a decided change for the worse. Zihlman is suffering from sleeping sickness and this afternoon Dr. Charles R. Austrian, Baltimore specialist, came here to consult with Drs. Lee B. Matheas and William F. Williams, Zihlman's physicians.

Dr. Thomas W. Koon, former mayor of Cumberland and warm friend of Zihlman, has offered to go to St. Louis at his own expense to consult specialists in hope of helping Zihlman. St. Louis has had many cases of sleeping sickness in past months, it is stated, which have been successfully treated, while the disease is new here.

First Argument Mars Marathon Bridge Contest

Ely Takes 18 Minutes to Decide on Lead, and the Simses Simmer.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—The temperamental Culbertsons and Simses clashed in their first serious argument today as Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson ran up their lead to 15,280 points for a new high mark in their 150-rubber bridge match.

The battle started when Ely pondered 18 minutes in the first rubber before he made a lead and ended temporarily when Hal Sims threatened to make an official protest to Referee Walter Beinecke.

Bitter words resulted from a Culbertson remark characterized as "misleading" by Sims. A radio broadcast saved the day and tempers cooled while they were on the air.

Pair Standings.

	Culbertson	Sims
Advantage	15,280	.....
Rubbers won today	3	2
Total rubbers won.	66	51
Total points.....	99,950	84,670
Total aces held....	1,336	1,348
Total kings held...	1,321	1,363
Total queens held.	1,327	1,357

The long delay occurred on the last hand of the 113th rubber. Culbertson took the 18 minutes to decide on leading the spade jack from the dummy in a five-heart contract.

Poker-faced Mrs. Culbertson didn't move a muscle during the long interval, but the Simses fidgeted and sighed. Finally Mrs. Sims made a remark and Ely, lost in his analysis, looked up in despair.

He suggested Mrs. Sims should get a magazine and catch up on her reading. That didn't work so Culbertson asked her to "take a walk." Mrs. Sims left the table and came back when Ely announced he was ready.

They Argue Again.

"What's it all about, what caused the delay?" Mrs. Sims asked.

"It was a question whether I go down one or two," Ely said.

Ely shook his head sorrowfully and announced he must start his analysis over again. Finally play was resumed and Culbertson, aided by an error by Sims, made the contract, winning the rubber.

The argument broke out again, Hal declaring that Culbertson's remark about going down was "misleading." Ely said it wasn't and Mrs. Sims threw in:

"He does it just to get my goat!"

The tension lessened somewhat when Ely advised Hal:

"Hal, you should handle your partner as well as I do mine."

The kibitzers laughed, Mrs. Culbertson blushed, and it was decided finally that if Sims wanted to protest he must do it in writing within 24 hours to Referee Beinecke.

Sims said he would think it over. Meanwhile, the hand was sealed for final action by the five referees headed by Beinecke in case the threatened protest is made.

Accident Policy Suit Nears End at Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., April 9 (AP).—Jesse T. Meadows' suit against the New York Life Insurance Co., in hustings court here, neared its close today as the defense rested and the plaintiff ended direct examination of the first witness.

Meadows, a lawyer and pharmacist, is suing to recover disability payments on an accident policy. The loss of a foot and one hand in what he asserts was a hunting accident is the basis of his claim. The company asserts Meadows' mutilations were self-inflicted.

209 Youths to Join CCC In West Virginia Area

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 9.—To fill out the ranks of the Civilian Conservation Corps, now almost depleted by expired enlistments, 209 youths in 14 central West Virginia counties will be enrolled for duty within a few weeks.

Principal and alternate candidates will be chosen by county relief administrations, with examinations made by army personnel at selected centers. Of the quotas assigned, Harrison County will send 37.

Tests Sped on Midget Airplane, Auto-Powered, to Sell CHEAP

U. S. Orders First of New Craft to Cost Less Than $2,000.

By the Associated Press.

Marshall, Mo., April 9.—A little airplane that builders hope may meet the demand for one a man of moderate circumstances can afford is nearing completion here.

The craft—a small, high-wing monoplane powered with a relatively inexpensive six-cylinder automobile engine—is being built by the Fahlin Aircraft Co. on order of the United States Department of Commerce.

Ole Fahlin, head of the company, said today he hoped to be able to give the ship its first test flight within ten days.

It is designed to sell under $2,000—even with small production. Fahlin said it probably could be flown 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline at 100 miles an hour, the cruising speed.

Maximum speed will be 115 miles an hour. A similar plane, just announced by the Soviet government as in production there, has a speed of only 70 miles an hour.

"Equipping the plane with a motor car engine reduces the first cost greatly," Fahlin explained. "It also lowers the operating cost. Purchase of the plane by the Government is in line with a policy to stimulate manufacturers to build new planes at reasonable prices.

Fahlin declared the plane would be unusually stable under any flying conditions and in favorable weather would virtually "fly by itself."

An innovation is a flap arrangement designed to reduce landing speed, shorten the take-off and climb, and aid in maintaining the minimum speed in the air.

The plane is a two-place, side-by-side cabin type with deep mohair cushions and roll windows, to give cockpit comfort in hot weather. It has dual controls.

The weight is 1,050 pounds, the span 32 feet and the length 21 feet. Construction is a steel tube fuselage covered with fabric. Front wheels are equipped with brakes and flexible landing gear. The propeller has one-half the crankshaft speed, a gearing which makes possible the use of a high-speed motor and which reduces the propeller noise.

Auction to Dispose Of Rare Antiques

Leed's Manor Collection to Be Sold Next Week.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 9.—The auctioneer's hammer will fall next Tuesday on one of the largest private collections of antiques and art treasures in Virginia when the entire effects of Leed's Manor will be offered for sale.

Announcement of the sale, which was scheduled for today, but was postponed because of impassable roads, was made by J. Donald Richards, commissioner.

Leed's Manor, perhaps one of the most famous show places in Virginia, includes many pieces of early Spanish and English furniture. Several original Chippendales and Spanish pieces, considered museum objects, will be included in the auction.

Stores Are Warned Of Spurious Currency

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., April 9.—Business houses here have been warned to be on the lookout for counterfeit $10 bills.

Several of the spurious bills have been stopped at banks here this week an dit is believed that others have been circulated in this week and it is believed that tected at the banks were sent in with deposits by firms here.

The notes, said by police here to have been good reproductions, were imitations of Federal Reserve bills bearing the initial "B."

Winchester Guardsmen Third in Rifle Contest

Richmond, Va., April 9 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Samuel Gardner Waller, adjutant general of Virginia, said today that Company I, 116th Infantry, Winchester, scored a third-place tie in the National Guard Bureau's annual indoor rifle shoot.

The Winchester unit, first-place winner a year ago, earned the third-place tie with 2,822 points.

Thousands Mass at Bier as Mayor Asks Stores to Close for Rites.

By the Associated Press.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 9.—Residents of this city, silently passing the flower-banked bier of Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, today joined newspaper leaders of the world in paying tribute to him.

Mr. Ochs died late yesterday from a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 77.

The body of the publisher lay in state at the Julius and Bertha Ochs Memorial Temple. A guard of honor from the Mizpah Jewish Congregation stood watch.

Outside the temple, erected by Mr. Ochs to the memory of his parents, a special detail of traffic officers was required to handle the crowds.

Casket Massed With Flowers.

Draped over the bier and around it were scores of floral offerings from friends and associates here.

One came from the Chattanooga Press Club. It was a circular wreath of white roses and lilies of the valley with a "30"—the traditional newspaperman's designation for the ending of a story—centered in red carnations.

All walks of life were represented in the procession that passed the casket, and it included young and old.

The Chattanooga Times Building and the city hall were draped in mourning and flags flew at half-staff.

Throughout the night the guard of honor will keep watch.

Burial In New York.

Funeral services will be held at the temple tomorrow morning at 9:30, Central Standard Time. The body then will be placed aboard a train for New York for final rites and burial, planned Friday.

Rabbi Abraham Feinstein will conduct the Chattanooga services, assisted by Dr. T. S. McCallie, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Mayor E. D. Bass issued a proclamation asking business houses to close during the hours of the funeral. It read:

"Best Friend" Lost.

"His passing has brought a great weight of sorrow to the hearts of our people. We are sad because Chattanooga has lost her best friend.

"It is peculiarly fitting, therefore, that the people of this city, who honored and cherished him, should pay appropriate respect to his memory.

"Therefore, I, E. D. Bass, mayor of the City of Chattanooga, earnestly ask our people that where possible business be suspended during the hour appointed for the funeral services of Mr. Ochs at 9:30 Wednesday morning. Let us in this manner express our gratitude for the memory of our friend."

Banks also will close for the funeral. City commissioners today recessed their meeting until Monday in respect.

Macon Officer's Widow Gets Help

2 Senators Aid Mrs. Dailey in Job Quest.

By the Associated Press.

Wellsville, Ohio, April 9.—The widow of the radio officer who was killed in the crash of the dirigible Macon has found help in her quest for a Government position.

United States Senators Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio, and Hiram Johnson, of California, and Lieut. Comdr. Herbert V. Wiley joined today in a movement to obtain Government aid for Mrs. Lucille Dailey.

She is the widow of Chief Petty Officer Ernest E. Dailey, 28, one of two men killed when the Macon, commanded by Wiley, crashed off the California coast February 12.

Mrs. Dailey, who taught school in Akron before she married Dailey at North Bend, Ore., his home, about two years ago, will leave here Friday for Washington to confer with Navy officials regarding an executive position.

Estate of $61,000 Is Left by Griffiths

An estate of $6,000 was left by David Griffiths, of Takoma Park, Md., when he died March 19, his will, filed for probate in the District Supreme Court, disclosed.

The entire estate is to go to his widow, Louise H. Griffiths, and on her death is to be divided between John David Griffiths, a son, and Elizabeth G. Lash, a daughter. The estate is made up of real estate valued at $12,000 and personal property valued at $49,000. Attorney F. S. Moise filed the will.

Annuity Is Willed To Mrs. Behrend

Children to Share Estate After Her Death.

Directing that his entire estate be set up as a trust estate, with the income to go to his widow for life, Edgar A. Behrend, who died November 23, named his four children, Nellie M. Bonwit, Laura B. Heidingsfeld, Rebecca B. David and Rudolph B. Behrend, to share equally in the residue when their mother dies.

The estate is comprised chiefly of realty holdings in commercial sections of the city. For taxation purposes the property controlled by the estate is valued at $101,802. In addition, Mr. Behrend left promissory notes aggregating $13,650.

The will specified that $100 be given the Hebrew Home for the Aged and the Jewish Foster Home, and $50 to the Associated Charities. The son, an attorney, represented the estate.

Mellon's Gifts Of 2½ Millions Cited by Hogan

Counsel Says Large Charity Funds Given Besides Museum Donation.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 9.—Andrew W. Mellon's charitable and educational gifts from 1931 to 1933 amounted to more than $2,500,000 in addition to vast gifts to his projected National Art Gallery, his bookkeeper, R. Stuart Scott, testified today.

Frank J. Hogan, Mellon's counsel, asked for the information to refute Government's claims that the financier was making huge gifts to the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust so as to escape taxes. Hogan says the trust was formed to sponsor the art gallery.

Scott listed Mellon's contributions:

Year	Amount	Deduction claimed
1931.....	$580,078.29	.....
1932.....	1,308,941.94	$208,396.01
1933.....	701,578.74	173,198.36
Total...	$2,590,598.97	$381,594.37

In protesting the $3,089,000 extra assessment on his 1931 income, now being heard by the tax appeals board, Mellon in a counter claim asked a $139,000 rebate largely because of a gift of $3,000,000 in pictures to the trust.

He can not claim this deduction, however, unless the Government succeeds first in proving his income exceeded the $10,000,000 which he reported because of the regulation permitting only a 15 per cent deduction from income in one year for gifts.

Mellon's gifts reported in 1931 had taken up that 15 per cent allowance, but the Government claims he did not report, as income, some $5,000,000 which it asserts was income.

Hogan announced as the hearing ended, that he expects to complete his direct evidence after a few minutes tomorrow, ending seven weeks and one day of testimony.

Clashes between Hogan and the Government counsel, Robert H. Jackson, about the art gallery project furnished the high lights of today's evidence.

We Threw Away the Dipper

IN many rural communities the milk farmer is more in evidence than the dirt farmer.
Milk is a cash crop that must be harvested twice a day.
Dairying has become a highly specialized business for the farmer and his family.
Milk intended for city folks has to win the O. K. of exacting health authorities.
They represent the consumers. They take nobody's word for it. They test it for all it is worth. To get into your home it has to stand on its own.
For his part, the dairy farmer has to conform to strict standards.
Cows, stables, equipment, workers—all must be convincing testimonials to the diligent practice of sanitation.
Sterilized containers, concrete floors in stables, tuberculin-tested cows and clean milkers are everyday standards.
From the farm to your doorstep, alertness to safeguard your health never lags.

The can, the dipper (and their germs) all have been regulated away.
Now the handling of milk is clean in the hospital sense of cleanliness.

Roosevelt Joins Other Notables At Envoy's Rites

President Occupies Front Pew at Services in N. Y. for Robbins.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—President Roosevelt ended his Southern vacation with a hurried trip to New York today to attend the funeral of his cousin, Warren Delano Robbins, United States minister to Canada.

Heavily tanned and with an expression of deep sorrow on his face, the President occupied a front pew in the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Incarnation. With him were members of his family.

As he listened to the short burial service in the flower-filled church, hundreds stood outside in the cold, drizzling rain waiting in vain for a glimpse of him. The President was driven in a closed car to a side entrance of the church and left the same way.

Met by His Mother.

The President arrived at Pennsylvania Station at 9:30 a. m. and was on his way back to Washington before noon. Dressed in top hat, morning coat and striped trousers, he emerged from his private car on the arm of his oldest son, James Roosevelt.

Waiting to greet him at the station were his wife, his mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, and his daughter, Mrs. Anna Boettiger. A heavy police guard of 125 men stood watch as the President was taken in a flag-bedecked elevator to his automobile.

Services Are Brief.

The services were short. There was no eulogy, and a mixed choir sang the Processional and Recessional.

From the church, the President went to the home of Kermit Roosevelt, son of the late Theodore Roosevelt, for a brief rest. Then he went on to the station, where he was joined by Postmaster General James A. Farley. James Roosevelt and Mrs. Boettiger saw them off.

Notables at the funeral included Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador at Large; Col. E. M. House, William D. Herridge, Canadian Minister to the United States; R. C. Matthews, minister of national revenue, representing the Canadian government, and Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Robbins body was later taken by special train to Fairhaven, Mass., for burial.

By the United Press.

Fairhaven, Mass., April 9.—The body of Warren Delano Robbins, United States Minister to Canada and cousin of President Roosevelt, was interred today in Riverside Cemetery beside that of his father, Charles Albert Robbins.

A northeast gale whipped the fir trees on the Delano plot as a group of 20 mourners, including Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, heard the Rev. William H. Parker, of the Unitarian Memorial Church, read the burial ritual.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 9.—Judge Nicholas H. Green, 63, of Annapolis, associate judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit of Maryland, comprising Anne Arundel, Howard and Carroll Counties, died early today at Hialeah, Fla., where he has been vacationing for the last several weeks in the hope of regaining his health.

He suffered a cerebral hemorrhage a few weeks prior to the last November election, when he was elected to the full term of 15 years on the bench. The attack left him partly paralyzed. While his condition had improved somewhat, Judge Green asked to be retired from the judiciary, and the recent Legislature passed an act providing therefor. He would have been entitled to the statutory pension of $200 per month.

Member of Old Family.

Native of Annapolis, Judge Green was a member of one of Maryland's oldest families. He was a son of the late Dr. Richard H. Green and Harriet Kent Green. His father was a prominent practicing physician and one-time mayor of Annapolis. He was a direct descendant of Governors Joseph Kent and Daniel Martin, and of Jonas Green, provincial printer and publisher of the Maryland Gazette, one of the oldest newspapers in the United States.

A graduate of St. John's College, Annapolis, he studied law in the office of James M. Murnoe and taught in Annapolis public schools for several years. He practiced law over 35 years and was one of the leading attorneys of the local bar. A lifelong Democrat, he served several terms as State's attorney of the county, at one time was counsel to the county board of education and was chairman of the district draft board during the World War. He was actively identified with other business and civic activities.

He was appointed to the bench in December, 1932, and served the unexpired term of Judge Robert Moss, who retired. He was elected for the full term by several thousand majority over Linwood L. Clark, Republican.

Judge Green is survived by his widow, Mrs. Frances B. Green, and three daughters, Mrs. Sarah Green Baker, New York; Mrs. Eleanor G. Brown, Coronado, Calif.; Miss Clare Green, Annapolis attorney; two brothers Dr. T. Kent Green and John M. Green, and a sister, Mrs. Bowers, wife of Commander John T. Bowers, of the Navy (retired), of Annapolis.

Suzanne Landreth, 4, Dies; Services Today

Suzanne Landreth, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Landreth, 315 Maple avenue, Falls Church, Va., died Sunday at her home after an operation. Mr. Landreth, her father, is the Washington manager of the Allis Chalmers Manufacturing Co.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence of her parents at 10:30 a. m., today with the Rev. R. A. Castleman, rector emeritus of Falls Church Episcopal Church, officiating.

H. A. Lamborne Is Dead at 47 In Fort Worth

Former District Broker Survived by Brother Living Here.

Word was received here yesterday of the death of Harry A. Lamborne, who began his career here as a board boy with the brokerage firm of Hutton & Co. Mr. Lamborne died at his home in Fort Worth, Tex., where he was associated with Bache & Co.

A graduate of the old McKinley Technical High School here, Mr. Lamborne was a brother of Malcolm D. Lamborne, Washington advertising writer. He was born in Mobile, Ala., July 13, 1887.

Since leaving Washington, Mr. Lamborne had also been associated with Strandberg, McCreevy & Co., and Bennett & Co., in Kansas City, Mo. When America entered the World War he volunteered for the air service and was assigned to active duty in France.

Surviving Mr. Lamborne are his mother, Mrs. Clara M. Lamborne; his widow, Mrs. Evelyn Lamborne; a stepson, Ralph; his brother here and another brother, William P. Lamborne, of Harrisburg, Pa. Funeral services will be conducted by the American Legion, with burial at Fort Worth.

AMOCO HOLDS MORE OFFICIAL WORLD'S RECORDS THAN ANY OTHER GAS!

Read the letter from the Contest Board of the (A.A.A.) American Automobile Association! It says Amoco holds more world's records than any other motor fuel or gasoline. That's official!

And now that same great Amoco-Gas has been improved to become GREATER Amoco-Gas. It took some improving to better the Amoco that holds more official world's records than any other gas.

Only our new refinery and new processes made this improvement possible. Out of them all comes a new basic gasoline into which more available energy from the raw crudes is being put than was ever before possible. In addition, we have increased the percentage of the most costly of Amoco's exclusive ingredients.

WHAT THIS MEANS TO YOU!

1. GREATER Amoco-Gas, among other superiorities, sets a new world's high in calorific★ value.
2. It contains more heat units per gallon than any other gasoline or motor fuel.
3. This definitely means more power and more miles per gallon.
4. It takes less fuel to get more results. It's the biggest gallon of motor fuel on the market today.
5. There is nothing else like GREATER Amoco-Gas. It is distinctive; it is different!

CONTEST BOARD OF THE
PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE AT SEVENTEENTH STREET
WASHINGTON, D.C.
February 1, 1935.
The American Oil Company,
American Building,
Baltimore, Maryland.
Gentlemen:
In reply to your inquiry, our register of records shows that at this date a total of fifteen World's Unlimited Records and thirty International Class "B" Records are held by cars which used Amoco in their record attempts. A total of forty-five World's and International Class Records may, therefore, be said to have been established with your product. This total is larger than the number of similar records established with the use of any other gasoline or motor fuel in this country.
Very truly yours,
T. Z. Miles, Secretary.

GREATER AMOCO-GAS now!

DO THIS:

No matter what gas you are using today, you owe it to your pocketbook to try this new GREATER Amoco-Gas. GREATER Amoco-Gas costs us more to produce, but is sold to the motorist on the same basis as the previous Amoco-Gas. Prove to yourself that GREATER Amoco-Gas is the biggest gallon of motor fuel you can buy. Sold from Maine to Florida and inland.

ALWAYS GREAT . . . NOW GREATER THAN EVER

Adolph S. Ochs.

No American newspaper worthy of the name failed yesterday to give prominent mention to the death of Adolph Ochs, publisher of the New York Times. His remarkable achievement in rising from an obscure printer's devil to proprietor of one of the leading newspapers of the world in itself commands attention and respect. But over and above considerations of the loss of a great executive, the sorrowful news has a broader implication. To a very large extent the insistence of factual accuracy as a basic standard of reputable journalism in the United States was due to Adolph Ochs. A democracy in large measure dependent on the press for its information therefore owes him a debt of undying gratitude.

Half a century ago news in general was trimmed in a quite open-faced way to suit the dictates of assorted extraneous influences, both commercial and political. Bias and distortion were the common rule.

In 1896 the Times, then a moribund institution, carried announcement of a change in ownership and management which pledged itself "to conduct a high standard newspaper, clean, dignified and trustworthy." It marked the beginning of a new journalistic era.

Promptly adopting the famous slogan, "All the News That's Fit to Print," the publisher proceeded to eliminate the objectionable features that had characterized not only his own new acquisition but the columns of the greater part of his contemporaries as well. Step by step a fine tradition of impartial and temperate news presentation was built up. Simultaneously a censorship was imposed on the paper's advertising. In the end success smiled on this unheard of technique and a good proportion of the publishing world soon took the tip and followed suit.

Today such practices are looked upon as commonplace in respectable newspaper offices, but until the coming of the young publisher from Tennessee they had been the exception.

Laying The Foundation.

In the future Washington policemen will be judged more on their ability to cope with hard-boiled criminals and less on their aptitude for cross-word puzzles. This announcement by Commissioner Hazen is especially pleasing because it represents, along with the proposal to increase the police force by 141 men, the first fruits of the crime investigation by Representative Randolph's committee.

Some police officers who are doing the most effective work could not be promoted under the old system because they failed to pass "mental" tests. The so-called "intelligence" tests are doubtless effective in the initial choice of personnel for the Police and Fire Departments, if supplemented by other criteria more closely related to the training, experience and actual work performed by the candidates. But it is an unsafe guide in making promotions within an organization where the performance of one man against that of another may be daily tested.

The new emphasis upon actual work performed is merely a reversion to common sense. It should have an important psychological effect within the Police Department. Officers and men can now anticipate advancement in accord with service rendered. The new system of promotion should afford a basis for effective reorganization of some branches of the Police Department, if the Commissioners ever get through investigating the investigators and settle down to the essential business of placing the most capable officers where they are needed most.

Tradition Vs. Travesty.

A church at White Plains, N. Y., has accepted a report by one of its committees condemning certain practices which are termed a "travesty" of the Easter-tide. Easter rabbits, candy eggs, greetings and new togs are referred to as purely "commercial," and the committee suggests that something more appropriate be substituted.

The sincerity of the committee's report and the church's adoption of these resolutions is unquestionable. Yet it raises a formidable series of questions. The committee believes that undue emphasis on the necessity for new clothes on Easter will prove a decided hardship and unhappiness to the majority of people. Have widespread unemployment and stagnation in the textile industry been overlooked? Furthermore, the distribution of toy rabbits and candy eggs to children is frowned upon as having no relation to the Resurrection. The committee hopes to "substitute for these childish tokens some experience with human life or growing nature which will teach the Easter lesson in a thoughtful way."

Taking the profits out of Easter is one way of looking at it. But when a world-wide custom becomes a time-honored tradition, the commercialism associated with it is a secondary consideration. Human beings are so constituted that they like to have something tangible to symbolize their beliefs. To a grown-up, the purity of a lily or the rendition of choral music may be sufficient to signify the peace and hope of Eastertime. But to a child, that same spirit is invoked by little, yellow chickens, squirming rabbits, with pink ears and gaily colored eggs. To take these symbols, however absurd and insignificant they may appear, away from children is to take away at the same time their interest in a sacred event.

It would be interesting to know what, if any, other symbol the church at White Plains would consider more in keeping with the meaning of the Resurrection than the egg, which has meant the beginning of new life since life began.

And Now To Spend It.

It is impossible to exaggerate the enormous responsibility which rests on the President now that the $4,880,000,000 work-relief resolution has received his signature and become law.

The amount of public money entrusted to executive discretion by this single measure is greater than the total annual outlay of the Federal Government in any year from 1922 to 1931. Indeed the magnitude of the sum is scarcely comprehensible to the average individual. To get through the appropriation in a year would require the expenditure of approximately $155 for every second, day and night, workdays and holidays, of that period. In the history of the world no legislature has ever before entrusted a single individual with a blanket spending authority of such magnitude.

The law which appropriates this money makes no provision for raising it. But the debt about to be contracted will none the less have to be paid, with interest. It is, of course, slipshod government to lay burdens of this magnitude on the taxpayers of the future. The Administration is only the temporary trustee of the Nation. Nothing but the most serious public emergency can justify dissipation of its trust funds on current needs. Only the most scrupulous care in the expenditure of this uncovered appropriation can justify the debasement of responsible government which it involves.

Moreover, the first move of the President in meeting his vast responsibility is not encouraging. In a statement issued as the bill was signed he attributed to "delay in the Senate" responsibility for the recent diversions of PWA funds to direct relief. This is an unfair criticism. The time spent by the Senate on the new law was in the first place none too long, considering its tremendous public importance. And, furthermore, delay was primarily occasioned by the necessity of improving the amateurish and intolerable bill originally introduced by the Administration.

Overlooking this unpleasantly self-righteous executive observation, the country now awaits precise information on the program under which the unpredecented appropriation will be expended.

Officials of the PWA yesterday estimated that, as reported by the Associated Press, "$1,140 will be spent under the bill during the coming year for each of the 3,500,000 destitute persons to be put to work." This gets us nowhere. The figure is obviously derived from dividing the number of people whom it is assumed will be set to work into the sum ($4,000,000,000) to be applied to work-relief projects. What is wanted—and lacking—is reliable information on how the expenditure of four billions can be made to insure work for 3,500,000 able-bodied unemployed.

Fortunately one agency of the Government is in a position to give real assistance in solving this problem. The National Resources Board has for some time been encouraging and coordinating the work of those State planning agencies which have been preparing local public works programs. These State planning boards, whose activities were examined in an article in The Post of January 20, hold promise for the intelligent expenditure of at least a part of the work-relief fund.

Secretary Ickes yesterday said that these State planning councils will be called into close cooperation in the allocation of spending projects. That is essential. For without the most careful review and coordination of undertakings already given scientific local appraisal, the country can expect nothing more than a repetition of the CWA anarchy, on a larger and more disastrous scale.

Defining War Policy.

Almost unopposed passage by the House of Representative McSwain's bill to take the profits out of war is an impressive illustration of the antiwar spirit in Congress. To what extent it will go beyond mere declaration of a worthy principle, however, remains to be seen.

Mr. McSwain's bill has been much revised since it first reached the floor. At that time it was considered by many as a means of increasing the United States fighting strength rather than taking the profits out of war. But the section authorizing the President to draft men into the military establishments upon the outbreak of war was eliminated. Moreover, a drastic general tax provision was added, making it possible for the Senate to include specific levies for incomes and industrial profits in war time.

As it stands, therefore, the bill is little more than a general declaration of policy. The Military Affairs Committee properly decided that "it would be a serious mistake to seek now to legislate as to details, perhaps many years in advance of the outbreak of war, when the conditions, economic and social, that may be prevailing at that time, can not now be foreseen." Following this sound logic, the House accepted a bill containing no mandatory provisions, but broad discretionary powers to be exercised by the President when, as and if necessary.

Prices, rents, wages, etc., would be "frozen" at a fixed level upon a declaration of war. But the President would have authority to make adjustments upward, or downward, and to close the stock and commodity exchanges, if he should deem that advisable. Likewise he could license all manufacturers and business men, except publishers of newspapers, periodicals and books, and fix schedules in accord with which commercial orders would have to be filled. Governmental boards and bureaus to meet war emergency could be created or transferred as the President might choose.

All of these powers, it will be noted, are permissive. They could not serve as a strait-jacket for the Nation in the event of sudden war, for the application of each provision would be contingent upon an executive order. In this respect the McSwain bill is in sharp contrast with the more drastic, but less well-considered, measure approved by the Senate Munitions Committee.

A Bungling System.

As passed by the Senate the provisions of the District appropriations bill were almost the same as when it was approved by the District Commissioners. After the budget had been prepared with elaborate care by the officials responsible for administration of the District's affairs, it was trimmed by the Federal Budget Bureau and the House of Representatives in accordance with policies that have only a remote relationship to the municipal needs of Washington. Accepting wiser counsel, the Senate decided that the Commissioners ought to be permitted to govern the District without being handicapped by unreasonable obstruction in Congress.

In his argument for adoption of the bill Senator Thomas, chairman of the sub-committee on District appropriations, outlined a philosophy of local government that is far more important than the specific terms of this measure. Responsibility for municipal expenditures, the Senator believes, should be lodged in the local executive body. If the Commissioners "are not competent to judge the wisdom of these matters," he said, "then something should be done to replace them."

Apparently acting on this theory, the Senate approved a budget shaped to the pressing needs of the community. The House was more interested in saving a few dollars for Federal taxpayers, even though its action would force children in the Nation's Capital to attend schools that are overcrowded, poorly heated and, in some cases, hopelessly antiquated.

Members of Congress are able to make political capital at the expense of the District only because of the unsystematic way in which its finances are handled. Washington is a separate and distinct political unit. Yet the local government is treated as if it were nothing more than a Federal Bureau. There is no more logic in commingling District and Federal funds than there would be in amalgamation of the budgets of Alaska and Hawaii with that of the central Government. Laurence F. Schmeckebier and W. F. Willoughby, experts for the Brookings Institution, pointed out several years ago that this system "does violence to correct principles of public administration and is productive of confusion in determining and making provision for the financial needs of the two governments." Virtually every student of local government concurs. Yet Congress continues muddling through year after year without attempting to remove the cause of this friction.

Perhaps more serious than the duplication of service and diffusion of responsibility, involved in preparation of the budget, is the handling of local supply bills in Congress. The District committees which devote their time to consideration of local problems have no control whatever over appropriations to carry out the policies they formulate. In any other political unit this situation would be considered intolerable, which it is.

Senator Thomas and other members of Congress who are trying to give the District a square deal have been frustrated by these impediments for several years. They should unite their efforts in a vigorous campaign to straighten out the crooked and unnatural channel through which District appropriation bills must pass.

All Wet!

The buds are out, new hats are out, sightseers are out. In fact, just about everything is securely out that goes to make a perfect spring, except the sun. For days and days now, it has hid its light under bushels of clouds, making all the other harbingers look a trifle silly. The calendar says spring is here and so do all the advertisements. But dat ole debbil sun continues to act cagey and the poor misguided man in the street, who shed his heavies at sight of the proverbial robin, is shivering and sniffling.

Man likes to think he is master of all he surveys—the sun, the rain and the earth. With pride he points a puny finger at his harnessing of the elements; his damming of mighty rivers; his hundred and one ways to defeat the ravages of climatic conditions.

But in the long run, nature has the last laugh. For there is no more futile, pathetic, impotent sight in the world than that of a human being, clad in new togs, caught unexpectedly in the toils of April's misguided frivolity.

Another thing this country needs is a watch that will shift into double-quick time when an after-dinner speaker lays it on the table.

"Too Damned Dumb."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I inquire just why the "damned dumb" of Mr. Hopkins has not been given wider publicity?

Aside from a quotation from his speech and the brief editorial in The Post, I have failed to find any notice of this most objectionable, hysterical, stupid statement of Hopkins, Prince of Newmania.

That the people of the United States, because of their objection to the asinine spending of their money, should be subjected to abuse and should be accredited with "no appreciation of the finer things of life" is as childish as the whines of Johnson, Richberg, Wallace and Tugwell and their namecalling when criticized.

They are the "damned dumb." They can not know the meaning of honesty, integrity, truth—the fundamentals—the really finer things of life.

Great Granddad.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post in an editorial, "Granddad of the Forum," confers such distinction on the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences, of neighboring Philadelphia.

It may surprise our not too well informed editorialist that some 20 years before the birth of the alleged "granddad of the forums" an open forum was functioning at this Capital City, founded by the liberal scientist and philosopher, Lester F. Ward. The Washington Secular League, "formed for the advancement of its members in the study of the truth and for the promotion of the highest interests of society," had an unbroken existence from 1870 until a couple of years ago, when it found the sledding a bit too rough and folded up.

It was a going concern until friction developed in its ranks over matters of league policy, one element contending that its real mission was to develop in its members an antireligious complex and the other that communizing America was a more worthy object. The irresistible force of antireligious bigotry colliding with the immovable mass of communism developed such heat that both elements were consumed and the league with it.

Some of us who attended its meetings when it functioned as its founders intended it should look back on its orderly meetings on Sunday afternoons at Pythian Temple, when knowledge certainly was attained by lectures by informed ones on scientific, social, political, and even religious subjects and the at times critical and caustic discussions that followed.

The Secular League, as it was until the last decade of its existence, proved, if proof is necessary, that a real open forum can function in this Capital City if those back of it are sufficiently liberal to listen even to those who may entertain and express opinions on current questions radically different from their own.

We Don't Support Either.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper of April 4 contained an editorial headed, "Standing by Principle," which refers to a decision arrived at by the executive committee of the American Legion, concerning payment of the veterans' bonus. The gist of your statement is that the officials of the American Legion will support the Vinson bill, but not the Patman bill.

To my mind you place a rather peculiar interpretation upon the statement of the commander of the American Legion, after this meeting of the executive committee. The statement as reported in various newspapers was to the effect that the executive committee favored the Vinson bill, but that the main purpose was to pass and pay a bonus bill at this time. The members of the American Legion voted for the passage of a bonus bill; the vote was neither for a Vinson nor a Patman bill. Therefore, the officials have no alternative but to support any bill passed by the Senate.

My thought is that if a bond is issued, we borrow money from bankers at interest and retire the bonds through money received from taxation. On the other hand, if the money is printed, it is retired the same way but without paying millions to bankers as interest. Now if my idea of the difference between the issue of bonds, and the printing, or inflation as you choose to call it, of money is correct, won't you tell the public why the printing of money is worse, bearing in mind that it will be retired over a period of time, the same as the bonds.

Don't say it will lead to more inflation, because so could the bonds.

History And Justice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: M. D'Heriot compliments a recent article in The Post, but begs for the authority regarding England's anxiety to neutralize the Black Sea and limit armament in adjacent waters. He also questions the connection between Gortchakoff's sensational denunciation of the Crimean War peace treaty and England's settlement of our Alabama claims. As to the Black Sea, England's attitude was self-evident. If this was not the object of the war, why did she insist upon such humiliating conditions in the treaty?

As to the Alabama claims, the case is again crystal clear. For five long and dreary years England refused to consider the subject. Then comes the Franco-Prussian War, with uneasiness to England. Follows the Gortchakoff note in November, 1870. Then follows in December, President Grant's stunning message to Congress deploring England's attitude, asking an appropriation and authority for the Government to take responsible control of all demands against Great Britain.

Read Morley's "Gladstone," Earl Russell's "Memoirs," Childers, Disraeli et al. Top off with the essay of our own James G. Blaine, who devotes a chapter in the second volume of his "Twenty Years in Congress" to this matter. Secretary of State Blaine had access to all the archives from which he quoted so freely in deciding the case.

A delicate irony surrounded the suggestion that France and England would hurry in the present climax to pay their debts to the United States. Leaders in both those countries shudder as they estimate the billions necessary to meet present conditions and their iron hearts are sickened at the measure of their ingratitude to America, as they helplessly grope for new and profitable loans.

M. D'Heriot is right in saying peace treaties are usually written by battle victors. He might have added, the heat of battle encourages error when imposing humiliating conditions on the defeated.

Do justice to Germany.

Antique Theology.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Father Coughlin appeals to his radio audience to agree with him in his economic theories touching agriculture, because God likewise disapproves of AAA. As proof of this he says that God is warning the people of this error by sending a drought. If the Administration does not change its tactics and rethink its economics, God may send a plague of locusts. This might be expected after an excessive dry season according to nature's law, but this would be overlooked by Father Coughlin in his zeal to prove that God wanted the President to remove Wallace from his place of authority.

Thousands of people in Kansas will have nothing to do with the New Deal because "it is not mentioned in the Bible." And Huey Long and Father Coughlin take great delight in playing upon the credulity of these plain, God-fearing people. One does not have to be an unbeliever to resent introducing God into the argument, as these two radio speakers so frequently do. It is this attempt to blame God for drought and dust-storms that drives so many right thinking people away from the church.

Father Coughlin has many excellent ideas, but they did not came as a special revelation from God. He learned them from books and by exercising his mental powers while a brilliant student of sociology and economics at a Canadian university. His heart is in the right place; many of his ideas are progressive and humanitarian, but his theology harks back to the Middle Ages.

The Lost Art Of Spanking.

Dr. Murphy, specialist in psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, believes the ideal method of spanking stubborn children is with the back of a hairbrush. In his address at one of the sessions of Schoolmen's Week he intimated that the modern parent spanks scientifically. This conflicts with the belief of many laymen who have come to the conclusion that spanking is a lost art, and that with few exceptions it has ceased to be practiced.

It is interesting, however, to know that Dr. Murphy believes in spanking—that is, in a scientific method of spanking. And it is right here that the hairbrush comes into the picture. The efficacy of this is proved by the fact that it has been utilized ever since the hairbrush was invented. The learned authority on the subject is careful to tell the teachers that not they but the parents should do the spanking. To his mind the hairbrush is more beneficial than the rod or the old-fashioned switch. The brush is not damaged, nor the child unduly hurt.

In the faraway days it was the custom for father to take the unruly child out to the barn for a secret session at which the rod was not spared. That method has declined, possibly because there are not enough barns to supply the demand in these times of youthful independence.

The Post Impressionist

"Why Did You Do So?"

Post Office, Wednesday.

THAT egregious Post editorial-writer who imitates the style of the Post-Impressionist—or tries to—wrote an editorial, the other day, on "Crusoe's Isle." We had always wondered what people meant when they said they "deprecated" something. We know now. We deprecate that editorial.

So we propose to tell you—whether you already know them or not—some of the truths about Robinson's island which were suppressed, or evaded, by the writing gentleman in question.

As, however, you may just possibly have failed to read his piece, we'll begin by summarizing it.

He said "an accusation of literary sacrilege" was launched against Chile because that country meant to make a public park of the Island of Juan Fernandez. He seemed afraid lest, save for a timely warning from his typewriter, the lovers of Defoe's most famous work would shed as many bucketfuls of tears over the alleged desecration as Thackeray counted when he gauged "The Scottish Chiefs." Our confrere therefore hastened to assure the world that Chile was really trying to protect Juan Fernandez as "in some sense a memorial to Selkirk, perhaps even as a monument to Crusoe."

Now, of course there are lots of monuments to lots of heroes at places on which those heroes never set foot. Of course, also, the editorial-writer will declare he never quite said that Defoe had Juan Fernandez in mind when he composed "Crusoe."

But the facts remain that the editorial was headed "Crusoe's Isle" and that its phrase about the monument would lead an unsophisticated reader toward agreement with the popular belief which places "Crusoe" on Juan Fernandez.

Fernandez lies some 500 miles off the Chilean coast. To its then uninhabited shores went the living Alexander Selkirk in 1704.

He had been sailing-master of the more or less good ship Cinque Ports. He quarreled with his captain, a person misnamed Straddling, who definitely marooned Selkirk out there in the Pacific, where he remained for over four years—until he was rescued by Capt. Woods Rogers.

Cowper wrote a poem about the episode, which Macaulay's "every schoolboy" used to know by heart.

Moreover, Selkirk's adventure does appear to have inspired Defoe to "Crusoe"—which is alone enough to make Selkirk worth while.

Nevertheless, Defoe did not imitate Selkirk to the extent of choosing Selkirk's island for Crusoe's exile. When later schoolboys than Thomas Babington's sang:

"Poor old Robinson Crusoe, Why—oh, why—did you do so?"

they were thinking, not of perils on the Pacific, but of actions on the Atlantic.

Chile can't reasonably claim Robinson. He is Venezuela's. Every hint he gives of that classic shipwreck's whereabouts indicates an island somewhere off the mouth of the Orinoco River.

Never mind his savages. Never mind his illustrators. William S. Walsh says:

Selkirk's narrative was published in 1712. "Robinson Crusoe" appeared in 1719. During the interval between these two events, Defoe met Selkirk and had at least one long talk with him—probably several. There is little doubt but that then was struck the spark which became the immortal light of "Crusoe:" like an almost equally great French author, Defoe always "took his own where he found it." On the other hand, Walsh is justified in noting that, in those days, Selkirk's "was only one of many instances of mariners wrecked or purposely abandoned on uninhabited islands."

Dawson—W. J., the critic; not J. W., the geologist—thinks Defoe was a matter-of-fact man and Crusoe "a sturdy, plain-minded seaman, who sets himself to solve the problem of how to live under conditions which would have overwhelmed a more sensitive mind."

* * *

Assert, if you will, that Selkirk the man was just like Crusoe the man. You will still have a hard time proving that Selkirk's narrative shows any of those qualities which give Defoe's narrative immortality.

Selkirk did exist. Crusoe never did.

But Selkirk is dead forever, so far as this world is concerned. Whereas Crusoe, in this world, will never die.

Middle West Awaits New Political Leader

By Hilding Siversen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Des Moines.

THE proposal to hold a preliminary Republican "national convention" in Kansas City in May is but one of a number of significant symptoms observable on the political horizon of the prairie States.

Fact No. 1 is that the Republicans of the Middle West are not satisfied with the present prospects for national Republican leadership as personified in such gentlemen as Fletcher, Mills and their fellow-conservatives. Naturally they can not rally around the so-called Progressive group personified by Norris, Nye, Frazier, La Follette, Johnson, Borah and various in-betweeners. They do not believe that Hoover will run again, and feel that the burden of defending the Hoover Administration would be too great even if it were generally acknowledged that he was just a "hard luck President," not responsible for his share of the depression.

Fact No. 2 is that there is a healthy Young Republican movement. George Olmsted, of Des Moines, is president of the National Young Republican League, and has made a favorable impression where he has appeared. He is independent and would not mind splitting with the Old Guard if conditions should develop favorably in that direction.

Fact No. 3 is that Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas has made a favorable impression. In some miraculous way he has managed to get prompt action from Federal relief authorities at different times, and when he recently visited Washington to obtain a Federal grant to finance the plowing of scattered furrows to halt the ravages of the dust storms, he was given quick consideration by the Democratic Administration.

• • • •

LANDON was the only Republican candidate for governor west of the Alleghanies to weather the Democratic tornadoes of the New Deal. He is not a dramatic personality, but he has made a good business governor in a pivotal State, and there are those who contend that the people of the United States would be glad to relax from the heroics and ballyhoo and spectacular rabbit-pulling of the New Deal and vote for a man who is just a plain, simple administrator without any frills or pretensions to superman stature. To argue this, they cite a somewhat similar situation after the excitement of the World War, when people rallied around the negative philosophy of "normalcy" as contrasted with the dramatics and emotionalism of the national crisis.

John D. Hamilton, of Kansas, a member of the Republican National Committee, favors the Kansas City convention. He has generally been regarded as fairly conservative, though of the younger element. William Allen White, of Emporia, is understood to be favorable to this sort of a pow-wow. There will be 1,200 delegates, from all the Mississippi Valley States, and it is anticipated that some important medicine will be made, if, when, and as the convention is held.

The Midwestern Republicans are almost unanimous in the conviction that the leadership of the Republican Party nationally should be shifted from the East to the West or Middle West. They seem quite convinced that Republican leadership during the past two years has been rather weak and ineffective.

• • • •

ONE significant factor in this particular ferment is that there is now a distinct and definite disposition to come right out in meeting and name names—in other words, lay the failure of the New Deal program squarely on the front doorstep of Franklin D. Roosevelt, without the circumlocution which has characterized the opposition to New Deal measures on the part of both Democrats and Republicans in Washington. Hitherto the formula has always been: "I consider Franklin Delano Roosevelt a great President, but I can't stand for some of the major policies of the New Deal." From now on, it is understood, those who oppose the New Deal will come out frankly and call a spade a spade.

Added to the ferment concerning Republican affairs are several important factors outside that party. One of them is a gentleman named Milo Reno, of Iowa, president of the Farm Holiday Association and a leader in the Farmers Union. In his weekly radio talks he has continually and openly denounced the New Deal, with especial emphasis on Secretary Wallace. He makes a plausible radio speech and has a considerable following. A few months ago he made a temporary alliance with Father Coughlin, who came to Des Moines and spoke from the same platform as Reno.

It is now announced that on April 27 Senator Huey Long will come to Des Moines and join hands with Milo Reno in an anti-Roosevelt demonstration.

Townsendism is also more or less rampant in this part of the country, and that is another factor to be reckoned with.

The part played by Gen. Hugh Johnson in this strange and paradoxical melee is not so clear, as it affects the Middle West. Gen. Johnson never did make much of a dent in the Midlands, for the NRA was never popular here—whether under Johnson or Richberg. When New York was going into a frenzy of enthusiasm over the Blue Eagle, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and neighboring States were entirely self-possessed, if not cynical. And so, when Coughlin or Long attack Johnson, it is a battle in which midlanders hope each of the three will be the loser.

• • • •

IN Iowa the Democratic State administration is having heavy going. A number of liquor scandals and other affairs of the kind have kept the Democrats in hot water and a reaction is setting in.

What is the significance of all this turmoil—this sound and fury—this beating of tomtoms and gathering of clans? Nothing just like it has ever been seen before. There are strange signs and portents in the air and nobody knows in just what direction the cat is going to jump. One rather sure thing, however, is that the New Deal is losing ground. It is being attacked by a number of rather active and ingenious opponents.

Huey Long clubs are being formed in many Mid-Western communities. Father Coughlin is getting many members for his own organization. Townsend has his legions. There is such a ruction that the La Follette-Johnson-Norris-Borah element is rather crowded out of the picture, as far as a valley-wide dramatization of issues is concerned.

It is a great day for demagogues. Leaders who promise every voter a lump sum of $5,000 or a monthly income of $200, to be gotten out of thin air, can get a hearing almost anywhere these days. But the sickening futility and insincerity of such promises will soak into the general consciousness before the 1936 election rolls around. And when the demagogues are all washed up and hung out to dry, there will still be a big question mark in the minds of the voters.

• • • •

PERHAPS the situation can be best dramatized by picturing what would take place if Theodore Roosevelt the First should suddenly come to life and start campaigning. It is for that sort of a man that people are yearning now—especially the people of the Middle West, who understand his kind of language.

They will soon be ripe for a gospel of the simple varieties and simple virtues, for a revival of civic consciousness, for a rebuke to the theorists who spend the people's money like water, for a philosophy of progressive action without the lunatic fringe of socialism and communism, for a return to constitutional government and the preservation of sound money and a balancing of the budget.

Who will be the man to lead them out of the wilderness? Who is there that is strong enough, forward-looking enough, statesmanlike enough, dramatic enough, wise enough, fearless enough to bring them out of the present labyrinth of reckless experimentation and suffocation of individual initiative? Who will again preach the valiant doctrine of the strenuous life as opposed to that guaranteed economic security which has made people flabby-minded? Who will restore the glorious tradition of courage?

Perhaps it would take a combination of the best qualities of Carter Glass and Chief Justice Hughes and Mr. Moses, of New York, and Senator Vandenburg, of Michigan, and Gov. Landon of Kansas and Elihu Root and former Budget Director Douglas.

The people of the Middle West are optimistic. They think that possibly such a man will arrive on the scene—either as a Democrat or as a Republican. And so they still peer patiently over the horizon.

Patriots' Society Holds Annual Banquet Today

Mrs. Thaddeus Milton Jones, president of the National Society of Founders and Patriots of America, will preside at the annual banquet at the Washington Hotel today, at 7:30 p. m.

Principal speaker will be Kenneth Chorley, of New York, who will describe the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg. Mr. Chorley is vice president of the Williamsburg Restoration Council, and has been associated with the Rockefeller interests for a number of years.

Sinclair Calls Rally Of State EPIC Clubs

Los Angeles, Calif., April 9 (AP).—Upton Sinclair, who announced plans five days ago to extend his "end poverty in California" movement nationally, called today a State convention of the EPIC Club delegates to "put our movement upon a completely Democratic basis."

The convention is to last three days, starting May 17.

In calling the convention, Sinclair asked EPIC Club secretaries to meet him here April 20 to work out a program for the convention, the main object of which, he said, is to "discuss and settle problems of the league."

Keep The War Profits.

THE fact that the same gentlemen in Congress who are for the veteran's bonus are also behind the movement to eliminate the profits from war should cause the veterans to pause and study just whether they are their friends or not. With their bonus votes the congressmen and senators loudly proclaim their friendships for the boys who went out to make the world safe for democracy. Nothing is too good for them, they say. Payment of the bonus is the least that can be done for them.

BARGERON.

Then they prepare to take the profits out of the next war, the one in which the veterans will be the stay-at-homes and by all the rules of the game, it would seem, have a right to the breaks which the profiteers of the last war enjoyed. Payment of the bonus in return for the elimination of war profits would be selling the veterans short.

• • • •

There would be some measure of justice in the proposal had the profits been eliminated from the last war but to eliminate them now when the veterans have all attained an age whereby they can cash in on the next war is downright unfair. It just goes to prove that while the elimination of war profits is a laudable objective it is as difficult of attainment as periodical legislative reapportionments or of the attempts to place all Government employes under civil service and remove them from politics.

Sitting legislators always want the reapportionment to come, and understandingly so, when it will not affect them. Similarly the Republicans would have a fit if the Democrats were to place all the present Government workers under civil service. It would mean, generally speaking, giving the jobs permanently to Democrats.

• • • •

Now, the profits have never been eliminated from any war in the past. History is that every generation has an opportunity, or more correctly, can't get out of shouldering a gun. The rule has always been that this generation had its whack at the profits of the next war. To change these rules now when they would apply to the boys of the last war would be manifestly unfair.

The plain truth is that some of us are impatient over the postponement of this next war. We have accepted the situation, however, on the assurance that it would ultimately come and during our lifetime.

Much is heard of the War and Navy Departments' plans for mobilization in the next war. It is nothing as compared with the veterans' plans of mobilization to get at the profits.

• • • •

It is no great collective plan, of course. It is a case of every veteran having in mind just what he intends to do. Regardless of their plans by day they all intend to get together at night and make 3-minute speeches.

The annual conventions of the veterans have given some light on the individual plans and an alarming number have to do with going to work for the Veterans Bureau and selling defective bed sheets to the Perryville and other veterans' hospitals. It is not likely that any of the boys will try to peddle embalmed beef. That is a racket which the survivors of the Civil War practiced upon the boys of the Spanish-American War. But it is now looked upon as passe.

War racketeering has gradually improved over the years. That is, it has been steadily lifted to a higher plane. The veterans of the World War are pledged not to lower this plane in the next war, but this high-mindedness on their part is not to be confused with sissiness, or any willingness on their part to let the next war be called off, or the profits taken from it.

• • • •

The war rules were set up in the beginning. They should be adhered to. Complaining veterans in the last war were promised they would have full opportunity to profit from the next war. It was one of the things which sustained them.

There is no objection to improving the war profits situation. In view of the large number engaged in the last war it might be advisable to broaden the war profiteering field. That's what really will be done, laws or no laws.

No End of Books

Notes From A Book-Reviewer's Secretary To Her Boss (With A Bow To The Columnists).

By Theodore Hall.

IS your face red! So you told the lady over the phone you'd never heard of a novel called "Timberline." Get your brain limbered up! It wasn't a novel, but, of course, she meant Gene Fowler's "Timberline," that high-spun yarn of the old days on the Denver Post . . . Kay Boyle writes from the Tyrol to remind you of the book of short short-stories she and Laurence Vail are putting together, wants you to contribute one. Now when did you last write a short story? . . . On page 439 of the John Hays Hammond "Autobiography" you say you're reading, there are some words on Baroness Burdett-Coutts. "After my mother," said King Edward of her, "the most remarkable woman in the kingdom." Also notes on her famous house at No. 1 Stratton street, Piccadilly. Does that ring a bell? Well, wasn't it in the swindler biography yesterday that "Lord Jim" Manes said the great gambling establishment of Jinks was housed in the Burdett-Coutts mansion, leased all unknowingly to the rascals? Do you want me to check?

YOU'D better be glad you aren't trying to make your living as a reporter! Here's Leadbelly's day come and almost gone, and all New York wild over the Negro killer whom John Lomax got out of the Louisiana pen for the sake of his grand singing voice and his skill on the 12-string guitar—there were big stories in The Times and the Herald-Trib, and William Rose Benet wrote a poem on Leadbelly for the New Yorker, and the boy himself appeared in the March of Time. And you never cracked a line on how John Lomax came through town on his way north Christmas Eve and phoned you and asked you to come over and hear a little concert. Now it's April and all you can do is to get down Lomax's "American Ballads and Folk Songs" and hum over some of the songs there which Leadbelly sang for you. Only don't try "The Boll Weevil" on me again—I'm tired of hearing you warble that you "ain't got no home!" . . . Houghton Mifflin wants to know if you'd like to apply for one of their Literary Fellowships. I've written them that you're quite literary enough already. Though I did hear your fine critical taste at the movies the other night—an old gink was whacking somebody over the head with a bottle (one of those nice fresh ideas)—and then loud and clear came your sufficiently recognizable guffaw. Even my Boy Friend blushed.

• • • •

HERE'S a blurb note you missed. It's Louis Paul (did you ever see anybody who looks less the way he writes?) talking about his "Pumpkin Coach"—"Men have longed to lie naked upon a sandy beach of some undiscovered tropical isle and dream . . . I might have written that story, loving sky and earth as I do . . . There was nerve, then, and courage, in making whatever I knew of American fields an undiscovered place to dream. Courage, and splendid faith." I know you'll throw up your hands and cry: "Icky!" but can't you see the good man means it? . . . When are you going to have another bookish questionnaire? People have been writing in . . . Lewis Mumford came in, touch and go on his way through to Baltimore, and where was our book-reviewer? Nowhere . . . Here's a book bill from Brentano's. I once worked for a postmaster who collected stamps, but he was nothing on you.

• • • •

I SEE now why your hair's coming out. These books came in for your delicate attention—"Handy Office Book" (Ronald Press, N. Y., $1.95) and "The Office Supervisor," by Niles & Niles (Wiley, $2), all about making out invoices and how to get more work out of a stenographer—and "Anchor Contract Bidding," by Anker Jensen (Oxford U. Press, $1), you not even being able to make a Scotch finesse. And also—here's your chance to try to write like a medical journal—"Sex Practice in Marriage," by Dr. C. B. S. Evans, and "Marriage and Sexual Harmony," by O. M. Butterfield (both Emerson, N. Y., $1.95 and 50c respectively). Well, I did take a peek, and if I do say it as I shouldn't, the second is better than the first for one-quarter the price . . . This should please you. Cliff Fadiman, reviewing Donald Peattie's "Almanac for Moderns" in the New Yorker, went as high in the air about it as you did, and picked out the same passages to quote . . . Look in the last issue of the same mag for a portrait of yourself. It hasn't got exactly your noble features, but it shows a daily reviewer in the midst of his chores, with books tucked everywhere about him but over his ears. I thought I'd die!

• • • •

ISA GLENN liked your squib on "The Little Candle's Beams," but she writes in: "Of course Cecilia was stupid, essentially so. But if you could only see her face you wouldn't mind! No man wants a young woman to be intelligent—if he can look at her, and she's worth looking at. And always they wish their wives to be dumb. Men, actually, 'play dolls.'" The next time you get superior over my spelling, kind sir, I'm going to quote that back at you! . . . Somebody came in and tried to sell you a "Joe Miller Joke Book." I said, remembering what passed for a column two days ago, that you seemed sufficiently stocked . . . Capt. Bob Bartlett wrote that you needn't bother to answer his last, but I think you'd better. After all, you didn't have to go out and buy the second ed of "Sails Over Ice" to get the map of the Morrissey's travels he sent . . . If you want to see some good book-reviews, look up Mary Colum, the Irish poet's wife, in the Forum, I'm not saying you couldn't learn a thing or two . . . Why don't you mention some good not-so-new books, like Mumford's "Technics and Civilization" or John Chamberlain's "Farewell to Reform" or Ring Lardner's "First and Last," instead of letting the smell of fresh printer's ink go to your head? . . . Even if A. W. Smith, that British ex-officer and writer, is the husband of the sister of your third cousin's wife, that doesn't make him any relation to you! Zany!

A MAGNIFICENT picture is "Sequoia." I am told it required several years of preparation and I am willing to believe it. This is one of the pictures that can be safely and enthusiastically recommended to old and young, male and female, educated and ignorant—it is for all people and for all tastes.

Perhaps the surest sign of an advanced civilization is shown in the attitude toward and treatment of animals. One reason why savage races have to give way to those more civilized, even though the methods adopted by the latter may be neither equitable nor gentle, is that most savages treat animals with cruelty. Francis Parkman in "The Oregon Trail" mentions the abominable cruelty of little Indian children toward animals. The more stupid the human being, the more pleasure they take in hurting animals.

• • • •

Now everyone who loves animals will delight in "Sequoia," though how they managed to bring up the puma and the fawn together must remain a mystery; what happens after these two animals grow up is even more astounding. And this picture from beginning to end is so filled with marvelous natural scenery and with terrific fights that everyone who sees it is spellbound.

• • • •

I have never yet discovered why Mr. Wilson is never given any credit by American critics or literary historians. He is an artist in his way, and it is a very good way. He knows how to tell a ripping story, he can create original and yet life-like characters, he has a style all his own. And yet, although his novels, "Ruggles," "Lone Tree," "Bunker Bean," "The Man From Home," and "The Boss of Little Arcady" (published exactly 30 years ago) have given delight to many highly intelligent people and are in themselves so dramatic that most of them have been successfully transferred to the stage and the screen, the author is seldom mentioned in books on American literature. I am glad he is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Well, "Ruggles of Red Gap" is a motion picture that is enormously, howlingly funny; I imagine the British must like it fully as much as we do. And there is one thrilling incident. When Ruggles repeats Lincoln's Gettysburg speech in the American saloon, the scene is overwhelming.

The Cut Rate War.

Boston, Mass.—There was increased activity in this sector during the night, the enemy, due to his superior equipment and supplies, being able to deliver smashing attacks at the American forces and inflict heavy damage. "We can not do much about it," said the commander of the U. S. forces here, "until the U. S. Senate and its economic experts determine what is a fair price for badly needed ammunition."

• • • •

New York.—Enemy planes flew over our lines, shelling us heavily and inflicting great damage on this city this morning. The foe is splendidly equipped with the most modern war planes and doesn't seem to be at all hampered by any regulations prohibiting the most competent manufacturers from turning out fighting equipment rapidly.

The enemy has at no time stopped his attack to argue whether the inventor of the latest bombing plane, revolutionizing aerial warfare, is entitled to $10,000 a year or not.

• • • •

Philadelphia, Pa.—American forces retreated all along this front today in the face of overwhelming odds. We had more troops, but the foe had more ammunition. Any successful movement by the U. S. forces is impossible pending an investigation of the income taxes being paid by the officers of the ammunition corporations. Fergus T. Quince, a framer of the munitions bill, has demanded that the war be stopped until it is determined whether the president of the Repeating Arms Co., inventor and producer of a new type of rifle, superior to anything the enemy can produce, is getting $10,000 a year or $10,275.50 and a box of cigars.

• • • •

San Francisco.—An entire American division was wiped out in this sector last week during a Cabinet debate on how to save 2 cents on every rifle.

The soldiers are quite disgusted. They are inclined to think that the need of the moment is guns, regardless of cost.

• • • •

Chicago, Ill.—Six enemy dirigibles bombed this city today. The American forces had no antiaircraft guns or pursuit planes. It developed that most of the aircraft gun manufacturers and plane builders drafted by the Govrenment under the Nye bill had been exempted for flat feet.

Intelligence Prevails In Councils Of NRA

Desire To Square With Constitution Is A Mark Of Prudence, Not Confusion.

By Elliott Thurston.

IT is perhaps unfortunate that the Supreme Court is not permitted to render advisory opinions as does the Canadian Supreme Court. Then the major dilemmas which confuse the outlook for the NRA might be resolved in advance instead of ex post facto. The essential question is how far the commerce clause can be stretched, even by a court desirous of allowing the greatest latitude compatible with the fundamental law.

"The principal question presented today," said Donald Richberg, testifying before the Senate Finance Committee on extension of the NRA "is not what is desirable, but what can be legally accomplished. There is little disagreement among well-informed persons as to the desirability of eliminating all forms of unfair competition in business or labor conditions. But the problem now before the Congress is primarily this: In what manner and how far can the authority of the Federal Government be exerted to accomplish these ends?"

The numerous lower court decisions adverse to the NRA are not necessarily significant, since the last word rests with the Supreme Court. Nevertheless, however far a majority of the highest court might be willing to go, there are definite limitations, as the so-called "hot oil" reprimand to Congress for exceeding proper boundaries in delegating its powers illustrated. And some of the ablest judicial minds have already expressed a conviction that the commerce clause can not be stretched to cover all or perhaps even a large part of the area embraced in the original conceptions of NRA.

IT is not altogether fair to charge that the Government decided to drop the Belcher case because of confusion at Washington. It is not so much confusion as awareness of the legal difficulties mentioned by Mr. Richberg, and a proper prudence in not rushing ahead with a case that experience—not with the courts but with cold facts of an industry—indicated to be unsuited to a fair test of the law even before a sympathetic, understanding court. Doubtless the defects in this case should have been seen earlier, and it should not have been pushed to the very edge of hearing before the Suprm Court. Even so, the fact is that an earnest, disinterested and intelligent effort is being made by Mr. Richberg and others to find that extremely difficult middle ground, within the sanction of the law, which will best promote the purpose of minimizing unfair competition in business or labor conditions. As he says, with that objective of the NRA there is—and can be—little disagreement among the well-informed.

However, it is far from certain that the so-called poultry case is any better adapted to a test on the issue of wages and hours provisions which were held to be unconstitutional in the lumber code by a lower court. For in the poultry case, one of the Nation's most eminent jurists Learned Hand, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for New York, has clearly shown why he and a majority of his court with him can find no constitutional sanction for the vitally important wage and hour provisions. That Judge Hand is far from being an opinionated hostile critic may be fairly inferred from these words of his opinion:

"It is always a serious thing to declare any act of Congress unconstitutional, and especially in a case where it is part of a comprehensive plan for the rehabilitation of the Nation as a whole. With the wisdom of that plan we have nothing whatever to do, and were only the fifth amendment involved I should be prepared to read the powers of Congress in the broadest possible way."

• • • •

"BUT," he continued, "the extent of the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce is quite another matter and goes to the very root of any Federal system at all. It might, or might not, be a good thing if Congress were supreme in all respects, and the States merely political subdivisions without more autonomy than it chose to accord them; but that is not the skeleton or basic framework of our system. To protect that framework there must be some tribunal which can authoritatively apportion the powers of government, and traditionally that is the duty of the courts.

"It may indeed follow that the Nation can not as a unit meet any of the greater crises of its existence except war, and that it must obtain the concurrence of the separate States, but that to some extent is implicit in any federation, and the resulting weaknesses have not hitherto been thought to outweigh the dangers of a completely centralized government. If the American people have come to believe otherwise, Congress is not the accredited organ to express their will to change."

His opinion went on to hold, in effect, that the wage and hour provisions of the code in question could not be construed as within the province of the Federal power to regulate or dictate; that if anything is to be left of the State framework the courts must hold that in the case of the handling of poultry, at least, wages and hours must be considered as a "part of the general domestic activities of the State" and hence immune "from Congressional regulation."

• • • •

FREQUENT charges that the backers of NRA are trying to sneak by the courts, or are indifferent to the law, or mean to sweep all before them, including the Constitution, in a ruthless march to universal regimentation and dictation over industry can not, in any fairness, square with the truth.

Mr. Richberg and various others, on the contrary, dealing with an immensely difficult, intricate task are trying reasonably and prudently to find rules of reason consistent with the law. And a first, all-important and extremely difficult question is to find a rule of reason, in the light of experience, covering wages and hours provisions of codes that can be reconciled with the fundamental law by fair-minded, high-minded jurists who, perforce, like Judge Hand, can not strike down the Constitution under pleas, however appealing, of emergency or desirability in the light of changed economic conditions.

There was, perhaps, blundering in the pressing of the test cases, but this does not mean that statesmanship and intelligent forethought have been or are now absent from the counsels striving to preserve general national welfare through principles which the NRA seeks to apply.

Catholic Charities Mark Anniversary

15th Year to Be Observed at Meeting Tonight.

Marking the fifteenth anniversary of the organization, the Catholic Charities of Washington will hold their annual meeting at the Willard Hotel today at 8 p. m.

Founded in 1920 by the Rev. John O'Grady, D. D., with the help of a few stanch supporters, the Catholic Charities group is now one of the many agencies affiliated with the Community Chest.

Jealousy, Devotion Seen Back of New Orleans Mystery Case.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, April 9.—Love letters revealing jealousy, suspicion and devotion, together with a diary containing chapters of heart throbs and romance, were studied today by police in their investigation of the reported suicide of Mrs. Grace Wolfe Gonzales, 21-year-old divorcee, while she was in the company of Steve Macaluso, 32, her sweetheart, and himself divorced.

Macaluso, a bank clerk, told officers that the young woman snatched a pistol from the dash compartment of his car Saturday afternoon while they were out riding, and shot herself in the right breast.

Frightened, he said, and fearing scandal and loss of his job, Macaluso said he stuffed her body in the luggage compartment of his car and drove around, off and on picking up members of her family, until yesterday afternoon, when he drove the death car to the police station and reported the suicide.

100 Love Letters Scanned.

Nearly 100 love letters written by Macaluso to Mrs. Gonzales were turned over to the police today by Mrs. John E. Wolfe, mother of the dead woman.

Mrs. Wolf, her daughter Madeline, 17, and son, William, 10, were accompanied to New Orleans from their home at Kiln, Miss., by Detectives Thomas Whalen and Louis Martinez while Macaluso was held for further investigation by District Attorney Eugene Stanley.

These letters told of love and jealousy and contained excerpts from the personal diary of Macaluso which he had sent to the girl as proof of his love.

In one of the letters he told her that he had purchased a pistol and intimated that he was contemplating suicide because he believed she had been "unfaithful" to him.

Promised Marriage.

In another letter Macaluso declared he had given up his wife and children that he might be free to marry Mrs. Gonzales.

Officers today escorted Macaluso into Jefferson Parish where he said he disposed of the pistol with which he said the girl shot herself.

Michael E. Culligan, assistant district attorney, and Alfred Malone, chief of detectives, who accompanied Macaluso to the spot, about three miles beyond the city limits, said they failed to find the pistol but discovered an empty catridge shell there.

Malone said the shell was fired from a .38 caliber pistol and Macaluso claimed that his pistol was a .32 caliber weapon, which served to deepen the mystery.

Stephens City Now Subject of Action

Affairs of Defunct Bank Aired at Winchester.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 9.—Testimony revolving around the fiscal affairs of the old Farmers Exchange, of Stephens City, now defunct, occupied Frederick Circuit Court today where a suit entered by H. K. Benham, receiver for the Peoples Bank, Inc., of Stephens City, for recovery of a note for $3,000 is being heard. The case was begun yesterday and it is believed improbable a verdict will be returned before Thursday.

It is alleged that the note was given to cover an alleged overdraft due the bank, and that it was signed by David C. Petrie and James Russell Shryock and was indorsed by Ollie L. Grim, president, and I. W. Sothern, secretary of the Farmers Exchange.

Approximately 60 farmers of the Stephens City section are interested as stockholders in the exchange. The defendants are represented by four attorneys, including State Senator T. Russell Cather, Donald L. Weems, Harry R. Kern, jr., of Winchester, and Judge F. S. Tavenner, of Woodstock.

Seven Found Guilty Of ABC Violation

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., April 9.—Seven were convicted here for violation of the ABC law before Trial Justice M. L. Walton, marking the largest number of ABC cases in over a year.

Those convicted included Harrison Clendinst, Edinburgh, possession and destroying evidence, fined $10.25, four months' suspended jail sentence, Grant Turner, Newmarket, possession of illegal liquor, fined $11.25 and costs, six months' suspended jail sentence; Joe Hite, Woodstock, possession of illegal whisky, $25 and costs, six months' suspended jail sentence, and Hunter Lloyd, Newmarket, possession of illegal whisky, $10 and costs, 60-day suspended jail sentence.

$7,500 Allowance Suit Of Mrs. Vallee Quashed

Los Angeles, April 9 (AP).—By stipulation of lawyers, Superior Judge Dudley S. Valentine today dismissed Fay Webb Vallee's application for an order requiring Rudy Vallee to show cause why he should not pay her $7,500 a month, pending trial of her separate maintenance suit again him.

The dismissal does not affect the separate maintenance suit, which yet has not been called for trial. In addition to the dismissal, an order restraining Vallee from disposing of his property was disolved, except as it applies to the couple's Holmby Hills home.

Mrs. Vallee's attempt to have her temporary allowance of $100 a week from the orchestra leader increased was denied recently in New York.

Huge Assembly Plant of Chevrolet Motors Opened at Elaborate Ceremony in Baltimore

Will Produce 80,000 Cars Yearly, Employ 1,500 Men.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, April 9.—As evidence of its faith in the future of business, Chevrolet Motors Co. dedicated here yesterday an assembly plant capable of producing 80,000 automobiles a year.

The first automobile plant ever to be erected in Baltimore will employ 1,500 men and will supply cars to a territory including Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, and parts of Delaware, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and North Carolina.

Formal opening of the plant was in the nature of a civic holiday here. Opening with a parade through the downtown srteets at noon, the celebration continued with a flag raising at the plant in the afternoon and a banquet was given in honor of Chevrolet officials by the Association of Commerce in the evening.

Senator Millard E. Tydings was toastmaster at the bnaquet and the speakers included Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors; W. S. Knutson, executive vice president; M. E. Coyle, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Company, and Adam Hazlett, president of the Association of Commerce. As a part of the dedication exercises, Gov. Harry W. Nice was presented with the first automobile built at the new plant, and incidentally the first automobile ever made in Maryland. It will be used as a State police safety car.

Shows Faith in Future.

"The most tangible evidence Chevrolet can give of its faith in the future of American business is the opening of this plant," said William E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of the company. "Our going ahead with expansion of manufacturing facilities shows our confidence.

"In addition to the favorable effect it will have upon employment in this era, the operation of the new plant will provide facilities enabling all Chevrolet dealers served from this source to get better distribution of cars and trucks, thus making deliveries available to the buyer when orders are placed."

With the automobile business better than it has been at any time since the beginning of the depression, the Chevrolet company is preparing to serve the Baltimore and Washington district on the present basis of high demand.

The new plant is a modern structure permitting efficient assembly and ideal working conditions. Under one great roof, covering acres, are the plants of the Fisher Body Co. and the Chevrolet Motors Co. Workers assemble the cars in surroundings designed for comfortable working conditions. Except on the darkest days they work in daylight.

The new plant represents the company's first major building development since 1929, and, according to officials, represents the result of everything that has been learned about quantity production and efficiency since that time. Chevrolet engineers and production authorities say the new plant is the most efficient in the industry.

Overhead Galleries Used.

The Baltimore plant is the tenth that has been erected by Chevrolet engineers. Here, for the first time, utilization is made of overhead galleries (served by conveyors) either for the storage of materials to be fed continuously to sub-assembly lines immediately below them, or for the final operations on bodies preliminary to mounting them on chassis.

Visitors enter the plant by the two-story administration building (50 by 242 feet), facing Camp Holabird on Broening highway. Immediately back of the administration building lies the main shop, 600 feet wide and running 980 feet toward the west. One-third of this building, on the south side, is the Fisher body plant, separated by a brick partition from the Chevrolet side, except for the portal by which bodies roll on conveyors to the car-assembly line.

Farther west are the car conditioning shop, 80 by 245 feet, where cars fresh from the assembly line are given their final tune-up and inspection preliminary to shipping; a loading dock, 50 by 315 feet, and a power house, 50 by 90 feet.

Trainloads of arriving material are backed directly inside the Fisher and the Chevrolet buildings on tracks along the north and south sides of each building. The two Chevrolet spurs are each 940 feet long.

To the Fisher platforms come trainloads of steel stampings from Cleveland, and wooden parts from Seattle and Memphis. To the Chevrolet platforms come assembled motors and sheet metal parts from Flint, transmissions from Toledo, steering gears and castings from Saginaw, carburetors and other small parts from Bay City, and springs, axles, gears, forgings, wheels and bumpers from Detroit.

Trains Serve Units.

Trains are made up in the plant yard so that each freight car may be spotted directly opposite the section of the plant where its cargo is to be added to the stock of similar units in storage. In general, the flow of materials is from the railroad tracks toward the middle of the building, down which runs the series of conveyors that comprise the passenger car assembly line, 675 feet in length, which is separate from the truck chassis and assembly lines.

Body and chassis assembly lines are synchronized, so that bodies are lowered through a well in the floor as they are needed. There is no halt in the conveyor line as the bodies are lowered in place. At the end of the line, a driver mounts in the seat, tests the controls, touches the starter and there is one more car ready for delivery.

"The Washington-Baltimore area," Mr. Holler said, "is not only an automobile manufacturing section, but it is also the location of the most complete and modern assembly plant in the world."

All King's Men Needed To Rescue This Horse

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 9.—George Dean's horse for five hours today presented a problem in "engineering" after he had crashed through the covering of a storage cellar and fallen to the bottom.

The animal refused to walk up a narrow and steep flight of steps and there apparently was no other way to get him out except by demolishing a foot-thick concrete roof.

Finally some one suggested manpower and 25 men united efforts to haul out the animal, only slightly injured, with ropes via the steps.

New Rules Out For Registering Utilities Stocks

SEC Allows Exemptions on Data Required From Certain Companies.

Regulations for the permanent registration on stock exchanges of the securities of railroads, telegraph and telephone companies making annual reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Communications Commission were promulgated yesterday by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The SEC ruled that such registration shall be made in conformity with its "form 12," effective today. Due to the fact that these public utility corporations are subject to the regulation of Federal agencies they will not be required to submit as detailed information as corporations not under other regulatory agencies.

Copies Only Required.

Railroads, telegraph and telephone companies, under the new rules, will be required to file with the SEC copies of annual reports made to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Communications Commission as well as the annual report of all subsidiary carriers.

In addition to this material, these carriers are required to file a description of the securities being registered, information as to bonus arrangements and certain material contracts of the registering carriers and a financial statement for any noncarrier subsidiaries. Statements for the latter must be filed in the form required of ordinary corporate issuers.

The SEC also amended its rules to provide that any railroads, telegraph or telephone companies or other carriers which do not make annual reports to the Commerce Commission or the Communications Commission must apply for registration on the same form used by ordinary corporate issuers—form 10.

Withdrawal Hearing Set.

The commission ordered hearings for April 19 and 20, respectively, on applications for the withdrawal of listing from the Baltimore Stock Exchange of securities of John E. Hurst & Co., Inc., and Houston Natural Gas Corporation.

The Hurst Company sought to withdraw its stock listing because of "market inactivity and the fact that the company has practically liquidated, there being no remaining assets except real estate." The Houston Company also assigned "market inactivity" for its desire to withdraw its listing.

Virginia Annual Editor Is Named

P. D. Fowlkes, Richmond, Succeeds David Owen.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 9.—Paschal D. Fowlkes, of Richmond, a third-year student at the University of Virginia, has been elected next year's editor of Corks and Curls, student annual. He succeeds David Owen, of Charlottesville.

Douglas T. Yates, of West Islip, N. Y., was named assistant editor, and Lige H. Weill, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was chosen business manager to succeed Charles W. Carnan, of Baltimore, Md.

This year's edition of Corks and Curls is expected to be released within a few weeks.

Fredericksburg Names Police Commissioner

Fredericksburg, Va., April 9 (AP). Capt. Gunyan M. Harrison was elected last night by the city council as director of public safety and police commissioner to succeed William S. Chesley, who asked to be relieved.

Capt. Harrison, a World War veteran, has been postmaster here for 12 years. His term expired recently, but he is continuing in office until a new appointment is made. He is an applicant for a new term as postmaster and if named will be ineligible to accept the office of police commissioner.

"FULL of PEP!"

If pep is what you lack, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Its tonic action may be just what you need to overcome that draggy, tired, irritable feeling! Mrs. Herbert Cox of Cleveland, Ohio says: "I was all run down. Now I have gained needed weight. I eat and sleep better and feel full of pep."

Get a bottle from your druggist NOW. You will be pleased with the results.

Try Lydia E. Pinkham's VEGETABLE COMPOUND

A $10,000 Rolls-Rough stops before a 60-story building and Madame Highnote, the famous soprano, trips across the carpeted sidewalk to a special elevator, which whisks her to the 57th floor. There, while a fiddler saws away at a $50,000 Stradivarius, and a $1,500-a-week announcer whispers into a microphone, the soprano reaches for high C while a 50,000-watt radio transmitter hurls her voice across space to little Willie Jones' $10.98 radio receiver.

And if little Willie doesn't happen to like sopranos, he can twist a dial and pat a foot to Cab Calloway's hi-dehos. But it's a sad, sad evening for little Willie if he doesn't know whether Cab Calloway's orchestra is being broadcast from Station NERTZ or Station WHOOPEE, and, in tuning a radio, it's dangerous not to know. Willie might be looking for Jack Benny and bump into a politician or a boop-a-doop crooner. That's why Willie Jones and 99,999 other radio listeners appreciate Katherine Smith, The Washington Post's radio editor and log-keeper. Katherine can tell you where to find Bing Crosby, or Stoopnagle and Bud, or Beatrice Lillie. After reading her column in The Post for a few days, you'll know so much about radio programs that when they broadcast an "amateur night" you can tell the professional performers from the amateurs.

She tells you about short-wave programs, too, so if you have an all-wave receiver and boast to all the neighbors that last night you tuned in on Bangkok and Moscow and London, she can show you where and how to tune in on Berlin and Valencia and Honolulu tonight. Study her short wave log, and you'll know everything about short wave reception except how to understand what the foreign announcers are saying.

Of course, just showing you where to tune your set to pick up your favorite radio program is only part of Katherine Smith's job. Besides that, she tells you interesting back-stage (or back-microphone) news about radio personalities; she selects from each day's offerings the better programs to recommend to her readers, and, on her Sunday radio page, she lists the complete programs of symphony orchestras, dramatic groups, and cultural programs. With her help, you can choose either a program to please yourself or to annoy the neighbor in the next apartment.

Whether you like Toscanini or Duke Ellington, Lawrence Tibbett or Rudy Vallee, Amos 'n' Andy or Will Rogers, you'll profit from a daily study of Katherine Smith's radio feature, "On the Air Today." You'll find it every morning in

The Washington Post.

The De Laboulayes Are Hosts at Afternoon Reception.

Instrumental Quintette of Paris Presents a Program.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

One of the most delightful afternoon parties of the Lenten season was given yesterday afternoon by the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye in the embassy on Sixteenth street. Guests were invited at 5 o'clock for music, and more than a hundred members of official, diplomatic and residential society heard the concert of chamber music given by the instrumental quartet of Paris.

Many of the guests had heard M. Rene Le Roy, flutist, and M. Pierre Jamet, harpist, in recitals both at the embassy and at the White House, and some had heard the entire quintet, which includes M. Rene Bas, violinist; M. Roger Boulme, violoncellist, and M. Pierre Grout, who plays the viola.

The program included "Concerts royaux," by Couperin; Variations libre et finale (opus 51), by Gabriel Pierne; a sonata by Debussy, and the first movement of "The Concert at Five," by Joseph Jongen.

Daughters Assist.

There was a buffet in the dining room for those who arrived early and where ladies of the embassy staff and the two young daughters of the hosts, Mlle. Marie Therese and Mlle. Agnes de Laboulaye, assisted. Mlle. Marie Therese wore a frock of navy blue and white printed silk, and her sister was in a frock of coral pink crepe with finely pleated jabots. Both will leave Saturday with Mme. de Laboulaye and the Ambassador for France. The Ambassador and his wife will remain abroad only a few weeks, but the two young girls will not return until next autumn.

Mme. de Laboulaye received at the head of the winding staircase, and was greeted with regrets for her early departure for Europe. She wore a gown of dark plum-colored satin fashioned with a long tunic. Over her shoulders she wore a stole of sables.

Wives of members of the Cabinet present were Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, wearing a spring costume of navy blue and white polka dots and a large straw hat to match, trimmed with white flowers; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, in a gray crepe frock trimmed with navy blue, and a smart little hat of blue; Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper. The Senate was well represented by wives of members, including Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, handsome in black; Mrs. William E. Borah in a beige coat trimmed with leopard skin, and a soft brown hat; Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, Mrs. Robert Cary, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg and Mrs. Charles L. McNary. Senator and Mrs. Robert Bulkley were also present, and Representative Caroline O'Day, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, and Representative and Mrs. George Burnham with Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom represented the lower house of Congress.

Others at Reception.

Others glimpsed were Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. John H. Russell, wife of the Commandant of the Marine Corps, in a navy blue costume.

Mrs. Truxtun Beale wore a gown of red crepe with a black velvet hat and nearby were Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the former Secretafy of State, in black, with Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts, and Mme. van Kaathoven. Mrs. William R. Castle was there, as were Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, and Mrs. George Barnett.

From the Diplomatic Corps there were the Ambassador of Belgium, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz; the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Don Guillermo Patterson; the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Calderon, the latter in a smart tailleur of covert cloth; the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted; the Minister of Austria, Mr. Edgar Prochnik; the Ambassador of Argentine and Senora de Espil, the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troynaovsky, the Italian Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso; the Minister of Rumania, Mr. Charles A. Davila, and Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden.

Also the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther; Mme. Munir, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, with Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Ambassador of Mexico.

Other interested listeners were the rector of the Catholic University of America, the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, Bishop of Modra, and the Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president of Georgetown University.

MissMcCormick To Be Married Here Next June

Daughter of Late Senator Will Be Bride of O. D. Barnes, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms, of New York, Washington and Albuquerque, N. Mex., have announced the engagement of the latter's daughter, Miss Katrina McCormick, to Mr. Courtlandt D. Barnes, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes, of New York, and Nonesuch House, Manhasset, Long Island.

Miss McCormick, the daughter of the late Senator Medill McCormick, attended the Fermata School in Aiken, S. C., and Holton Arms School here. She was presented to society here in 1930 at a large reception given by her mother at the Carleton Hotel. Miss McCormick is a granddaughter of the late Senator Mark Hanna, and the late Mrs. Hanna, and of the late Mr. Robert S. McCormick, one-time United States Ambassador to Austria, Russia and France, and the late Mrs. McCormick, whose home on Massachusetts avenue now is the Brazilian Embassy.

Prominent Publishers.

The bride-elect comes from a family long prominent in newspaper publishing. Her great-grandfather, Joseph Medill, was the founder of the Chicago Tribune, and her father was also publisher of the same paper before he entered the political field. Col. Robert R. McCormick, now president of The Tribune, is her uncle, and Mr. Joseph Medill Patterson, publisher of the New York Daily News, and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald, are her cousins. Her mother, Representative-at-Large for Illinois during the administration of President Hoover, is publisher of the Rockford Consolidated Newspapers, Inc., which controls the Rockford (Ill.) Morning Star.

Miss McCormick entered the newspaper field in 1930 when she began writing a column for the Rockford Morning Star. An ardent horsewoman, she owns a small stable on her farm near Middleburg, Va., where she spends the hunting season each year.

Fiance Graduate of Yale.

Mr. Barnes prepared for college at Groton and later was graduated from Yale University with the class of 1929. He is a grandson of Mrs. Charles Tracy Barney and the late Mr. Barney. On the paternal side he is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Barnes. Mr. James W. Barney and Mr. Ashbel H. Barney are his uncles. Mr. Barnes is a grand nephew of the late Mr. William C. Whitney. He is a member of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity of the Elihu Club and the Racquet and Tennis Club. Mr. Barnes is now a partner in a brokerage firm.

The wedding will take place in June at the home of Mrs. Simms in Washington.

After the ceremony there will be a reception at Stockdale, the Belair home of Col. and Mrs. Munnikhuysen.

Miss Burke will be attended by Miss Nancy Richardson as maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Alice Merrick, of Parktown, Pa., Miss Mary Rushton, of Philadelphia; Miss Marjorie Pearson, of Kansas City; Miss Virginia Hall, of Washington, and Mrs. Taylor Kenney, sister-in-law of the prospective bridegroom, of Baltimore.

Mr. Kenney will have as his best man Mr. Ridgely Baker, of Baltimore, and the ushers will be Mr. James Symington, Mr. Taylor Kenney, Mr. Russell Hooker, Mr. Frank Keetch and Mr. Edward Richardson, all of Baltimore.

Mrs. Neitah King Will Be Hostess

Spring Ball to Be Given for Younger Set.

Among the many parties taking place during Easter week is the spring ball which will be given April 25 at the Congressional Country Club by Mrs. Neitah King for the members of the Capital younger set. The guests will include, in addition to the Washington debutantes and their escorts, the members of the younger sets of Baltimore and nearby Virginia.

Miss Mary Patterson, daughter of Mrs. Samuel Patterson, is chairman of the dinner dance and Miss Sylvine Clagett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. B. Clagett, of Upper Marlborough, Md., is vice chairman.

Bartletts Have Hoyts, Of Chicago, as Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher Hoyt, of Chicago, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Miller Bartlett in their home on Argyle Terrace. Mrs. Bartlett entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in honor of her guests.

Mrs. Hoyt is nationally known as Phyllis Fergus who has composed several well-known pieces. She has just returned North after attending the convention of the American Pen Women. With Mr. Hoyt she is now on her way to Vermont.

Cosmetician Offers Women Soap and Brush

Cleanliness, Stimulation Basis for Unusual Facial Group.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ONE ALWAYS thinks of a cosmetician as being so enmeshed with the intricacies of creams and lotions that he wouldn't deign to tempt his clients with a mere soap. That this assumption is wrong is proved by the maker of a new and utterly delightful line of French cosmetics.

The creator of these planned his products in a peculiar way. For the most part, a man's skin is better than a woman's, he thought. It has more life, is freer of blemishes and not half so prone to become dry and wrinkled. Now, why? he wondered. There must be a reason!

He finally reached a conclusion. Men cleanse their skin very thoroughly with pure shaving soaps. They stimulate it with a shaving brush. Could women attain the same results if they took to a shaving soap and a shaving brush? No, he reasoned. There is more oil in a man's skin and the drying effect of the soap is not bad for him. It would be for a woman.

So he started to work, with the result, that he has produced one of the most unusual groups of cosmetics on the market.

He created first a cream soap that, as far as the eye can tell, might be strawberry icing. It comes in a jar just like a cream, but you use it as a soap, working up a good lather and literally brushing the dirt and impurities from your skin. Incidentally, you can use one of his special little round brushes, your own complexion brush, a shaving brush, or wash cloth, just as you please. After you've washed your face in this manner you'll be amazed at the brand-new appearance of your skin. It's aglow with life and as fresh as a new-born babe's.

There is also a liquefying cream to use immediately before the soap to take off the surface coating of make-up. You have a choice of lotions to use afterward. One is a thin, fragrant oil ideal for the woman with extremely dry skin.

The other is a cooling, milky substance recommended especially for the woman whose sensitive skin is inclined to redness or splotchiness.

These preparations were designed primarily to cleanse and enliven the skin, and that they fulfill their purpose you will see for yourself.

A Jacket for Glasses.

They made a modest debut, those little glass jackets. But shoppers took to them so readily and bought so many that they've become the hit of the season.

They're little knit jackets that fit over the bottom of your highball glass and prevent the glass from making circles on the table. They also keep the heat of your hand from warming your drink and melting the ice.

The new ones featured in a local store come in bright regimental stripes of all colors. There are four to a set, each striped differently to enable you to keep the glasses sorted.

Shirley's Vogue.

A little child had led them. A lovely, laughing little girl named Shirley Temple. One by one the stylists for children's clothes have gotten on the "band wagon," so to speak, with the result that now the shop windows and counters are flooded with dresses, suits and hats such as little Miss Temple has worn in some pictures.

Since the filming of "The Little Colonel" there has been an added deluge of lovely "Little Colonel" clothes. One downtown store, always up on its toes, is featuring a large display of children's pocketbooks—quite "Little Colonel-ish."

Some of these to match "regimental hats" are made of pig grain with zipper fastening across the top. They're available in red, brown, white and blue. There are others in the envelope style made from a novelty leather. These boast Shirley's picture on the clasp.

Some plaid taffetas are as dainty, cute and feminine as any little miss could wish.

Streamlining Bargain.

The woman with surplus curves has an extraordinary opportunity to streamline her figure at a bargain price if she takes advantage of the girdle sale going full blast in a downtown store. A $10 foundation—guaranteed not to ride up—is reduced to $4.85. It's really a prize! Although extremely lightweight, it's firmly woven of novelty batiste with with shadow lastex panels. Sizes 32 to 44. At the same price—reduced from $10—are some inner belt brocade foundations long-lined for medium and full figures. These give exceptionally flattering abdominal control. They also have net-lined uplift, lace bandeaux.

Handy Little Ice Tongs.

Some little ice tongs featured in a downtown store are sure of even greater sales success this summer than last. In the first place, they have been so perfected that just a slight pressure of a litle spring will cause them to open and close. Secondly, they are quite a bit down in price.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Morris House Is Restored to Its Former Beauty; It Will Be on View in Pilgrimages Here This Week

Underwood & Underwood.

A fine view of the Potomac may be had from every room of this old red brick Georgian mansion, known as the Morris House. Restoration of the place was completed only a few days ago. It will be included in the third annual tour of old Georgetown houses.

Georgian Mansion Was Built at Least 150 Years Ago.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THERE'S INVARIABLY a definite charm about an old house which has been a long time aripening through laughter and tears, through gayety and loneliness, living and dying. But sometimes the charm has become so obscured it takes a lot of work to bring it to light.

This was the case with the Morris House, built at least 150 years ago in Georgetwon on a promontory overlooking the Potomac. Today the house, known officially as 3508 Prospect avenue, gazes down through its back windows on Key Bridge and busy M street. But when it was first built its Georgian beauty was surrounded by quiet stretches of grass and woodland with a clear view of the river and the boats plying up and down its murky waters.

Succeeding years dealt rather harshly with the big brick house on the bluff until a few months ago when its most recent owner, Mrs. Edward Macauley, of San Mateo, Calif., decided to have it restored. James W. Adams was the architect chosen for the job.

Little Known of Its History.

Only a few days ago he completed his task. The finished restoration may be viewed by those who go on the third annual tour of old Georgetown houses Friday and Saturday afternoons for the benefit of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown.

Little is known of the history of the Morris House. It probably was built by John Templeman, earliest known tenant, who owned the section of Georgetown surrounding the bluff, then called "Pretty Prospect."

When President John Adams came from Philadelphia, at that time the Nation's Capital, to view for the first time the site of the new Federla City, now Washington, he visited the spacious mansion high above the Potomac. At least a letter to Mr. Templeman from his neighbor, Secretary of the Navy Benjamin Stoddert, seems to bear this out.

Text of Communication.

The communication, sent from Philadelphia on May 29, 1800, said:

"Dear Sir:

"The Pres. will be at Washington by the time you receive this, or a day or two after. He proposes to stay but a little while. I wish he would remain longer. This and other good things will depend on the manner of employing his time. I request, therefore, that setting Bashfulness at defiance, you will urge the Pres. to go to the balls, to ride with you in your coach, and to get Mr. Scott at least to go with you. Let the Pres. be pleased with the attention and with the country.

"I am resp. yrs.

"BEN STODDERT."

Sometime after 1800 the red brick mansion became the home of Commander George Upham Morris, son of Comander Charles Morris. George Morris was a brother of Louise Morris, who married William W. Corcoran, philanthropist who gave to Washington among many other gifts the Corcoran Art Gallery and the Louise Home.

Succeeding generations who inhabited the mansion, by this time known as the Morris House, yielded to almost every style of architecture and decoration. The red bricks were eventually covered with stucco. Fine old Georgian mantels were ripped out and Victorian marble ones were put in. Gingerbread trimmings were spread all over the place.

Pine Floors Restored.

But now Architect Adams has done everything he could to restore the house to its former classic beauty. Once more the venerable red bricks are exposed to view. All the old pine floors have been restored. So have most of the Georgian mantels. A few of the Victorian marble ones remain because Mrs. Macauley likes them.

Of course Mr. Adams added a good many improvements to make the place comfortable according to present day standards of living. He built a service wing, recessed a three-car garage beneath it, cut a lot of windows in the east side of the mansion which had been windowless before the restoration, and added a narrow balcony.

This balcony is one of the most attractive features of the restored Morris House. Bordered and partially hidden by stark white iron grilles in a leaf and grape pattern, it is reminiscent of the buildings in New Orleans' French quarter. At one end it is attached to a gazebo, built by the house's first tenant, John Templeman, so he could watch boats coming up and down the river. The gazebo, or lookout, also has been restored and will make a delightful tea house.

The interior of the mansion is white. Architect Adams has used an oyster shade for the walls throughout, while the ceilings are dead white. The place is now bare. When Mrs. Macauley has filled the rooms with furniture the Morris House, from fourth floor dormers to first floor recreation room, will take its place among the other fine old Georgetown houses that have been restored to their former beauty.

Hope for Game With Major Suits.

While the requirements for an opening bid are three honor tricks unless the hand contains a rebidable suit, natural exceptions must be made on hands which contain major suit strength.

When a hand contains less than three honor-tricks, only a four-card suit or a weak five-card suit and strength in minor suits, it seldom pays to bid on less than the normal requirements. Unless partner has an opening bid, game probably cannot be made and the opponents will hold the major suits and a fair share of the honor-tricks.

But a hand containing strength in spades or hearts, or both, offers some chance of game even if the combined hands of a partnership holds as few as five honor-tricks. On such hands if the trump suit is just barely under the requirements of a rebiddable suit (that is, something like A J x x x or K J 9 x x) an opening bid may be risked with only 2½ plus honor-tricks.

An opening bid on such a hand led to a successful game contract in the following deal.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ Q 10 4 ♡ Q 6 5 3 ◇ K 3 ♣ A 10 6 2
♠ A J 9 3 ♡ 9 ◇ J 9 7 6 4 ♣ Q 7 5	N W E S	♠ 8 7 2 ♡ A 10 2 ◇ 10 8 5 ♣ K J 4 3
	♠ K 6 5 ♡ K J 8 7 4 ◇ A Q 2 ♣ 9 8

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♡(1)	Pass(2)	2♣(3)	Pass
2♡(4)	Pass	3♡(5)	Pass
4♡(6)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South is within a plus value of the regulation three honor-tricks required. With strength in both majors and a five-card suit he should unhesitatingly make a bid.
2—Too weak to overcall.
3—North is a bit too strong for a single raise, and does not hold quite enough for a double raise to three hearts. A double raise would be forcing to game. North temporarizes by bidding two clubs, which is forcing for one round. That gives him an opportunity to raise the hearts later.
4—South is not quite strong enough to bid two notrump, which requires 2½ honor-tricks, so he stretches a point and rebids a suit which is slightly under the required strength.
5—North now raises to show his heart support.

The Play.

South lost a trick to the Ace of hearts, another trick in clubs and conceded a trick to the Ace of spades.

North and South hands fitted so well that game was made without trouble.

Vegetable Platter Popularized By the Soaring Cost of Meat

Mushrooms Are Suggested, With Small Ones Excellent for Creaming and Soups and the Larger Kind for Broiling.

By Dorothea Duncan.

FASHIONS in food are ever changing, but this time it is hardly the fault of the fickle public. Vegetables are being featured as they never have been before. The housewife is lured by the resplendent exhibit of this group of foods. She is turning her back on the more expensive meats and her family as well as her budget are showing signs of approval.

Food authorities have been stressing for years the importance of vegetables, but it has taken more drastic measures than this to bring vegetables in abundance to the table. The high cost of living has accomplished what the nutritionists and doctors have been trying to put over for a long time.

The vegetable plate is now an important feature in the weekly menu. Women are just beginning to realize that the family is willing to accept a meatless dinner, if the dish substituted is an attractive one. As for the daily requirement of protein supplied by the meat course, this may be supplied through egg, milk and cheese dishes.

Let's feature fresh mushrooms for our next vegetable plate. Take your choice of the large or the small ones for they look equally good. Whichever you choose, you will have a good opportunity for the basis of an excellent dish. Remember that fresh mushrooms are white or creamy in color, firm to the touch and moist, not dry or rubbery. The veil on the under side connecting the stem and cap is unbroken. Spotting indicates decay and speckled mushrooms should be avoided. The small mushrooms are excellent for creaming or for soups and the larger ones are favored for broiling.

You might start off your menu with a good cream soup and then consider what can be used to glorify further a vegetable platter that has its beginning with mushrooms on toast. Here is just a suggestion.

Vegetable Dinner.

Cream of asparagus soup with croutons
Vegetable platter
(Mushrooms on toast, minted glazed carrots and peas, fresh, buttered spinach and mashed potatoes)
Apple pie
Coffee Milk (for children)

Prepare the mushrooms as follows:

Mushrooms on Toast.

1 pound of fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter
Juice ½ lemon
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
Buttered toast
Salt and pepper

If the mushrooms are very white they need not be peeled. Remove the stems. The stems may be reserved for soup if only the caps are preferred. The large mushrooms are cut close to the cap because they are used principally as whole mushrooms. Let stand in cold water 10 minutes. Drain thoroughly. Put butter in a frying pan and when hot add the mushrooms. Cover, and let cook slowly 10 minutes, tossing constantly. Add lemon juice and chopped parsley, salt, and pepper, and place on the pieces of buttered toast, which have been arranged on a hot platter.

Mint Glazed Carrots and Peas.

3 medium-sized carrots
½ cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon chopped, fresh mint leaves
2 cups cooked fresh peas
Butter, salt and pepper

Wash, scrape and cut carrots in ¼-inch slices, then in strips. Cook 15 minutes in boiling water, adding salt just before tender. Drain. Cook slowly with butter, sugar and mint until soft and glazed. Add peas. Season with butter, salt and pepper.

When planning your vegetable platter remember the importance of color and flavor contrast. A root, a pod and a green vegetable will be more effective than several vegetables of the same family. A green, a red and a yellow vegetable will do more to put over the vegetable platter from the ever important eye appeal standpoint than one of vegetables of one hue.

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to help you with your culinary problems. Write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

To Kiss Or Not to Kiss Her Boy Friends Goodnight Is Girl's Problem.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am 19, considered good-looking and popular, but I am slightly in a haze. I'll try to state my problem clearly, if possible.

The boys and girls of our "set" are considered the best people and are envied by the people who are not in our "set." They all seem to have the same ideas concerning dates and fun and agree on practically everything

• • • •

They think nothing of kissing and riding around on boys' laps, and that's where I disagree. I am not a prude, but I don't like to ride on boys' laps, and above all, kiss my dates. I always feel low afterward if I do.

I wonder why I am even in this particular crowd. They seem to like me and yet they are continually "ribbing" me about my ideas on different subjects and about holding down my side of the seat.

• • • •

Recently on a double-date with these "good sports" my date asked me to kiss him good night. I refused and my girl friend said, "What have you got to lose? You're young only once." I don't expect to see him any more.

What do you think, Miss Haworth? Should I keep my standards and hope eventually to meet some one who comes up to them, or should I forget them and be "just one of the crowd?" Please help me out. I don't seem to get anywhere in thinking out what to do myself.

Sincerely, PEGGY.

• • • •

DEAR PEGGY: By all means keep to your standards. Answering your girl friend's question, "What have you got to lose?" You might have told her, "My self-respect." As a matter of fact, it's an undefined feeling of self-contempt which makes you feel so depressed the morning after the night-before kiss given a casual male acquaintance.

• • • •

I know it's modern logic to reason a kiss is an inconsequential gesture, no more significant than a handclasp. And perhaps isn't to those who feel that way about it. But it's definitely more than that to a fastidious girl endowed by birth or rearing with intrinsic dignity of a body, mind and spirit.

• • • •

Perhaps it will strengthen your determination to stand or fall by your own particular code of social ethics to know what one man, the idol of women all over the world before his death a few years ago, said on the subject of kisses lightly given. He said:

"I would not care to kiss a woman whose lips were mine at our second or third meeting. The greatest asset to a woman is dignity."

• • • •

The girls who make up your set may belong to our so-called "best families," but, even so, they are committing an inexcusable vulgarity in making a practice of sitting in boys' laps when automobile riding, or on any other occasion for that matter. To have foresworn dignity and restraint to that extent is, indeed, to have made a kiss seem an innocuous salute.

When you are a few years older, you will realize the one thing a really distinctive, charming and attractive woman never permits herself to be or seem is "just one of the crowd." She is herself—a personality and a personage in her individual right. And I should say you already show marked symptoms of becoming such a woman, providing you do not permit the crowd to raze your ethics to its lesser level.

• • • •

Remember that men are incurable sentimentalists and idealists where women are concerned, and that if these boys seem content with a measure of promiscuity in their girl friends' conduct, it is because in their ignorant adventurousness they have not yet developed any basic standards of comparison.

M. H.

How To KEEP WELL

How to Gain Weight.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE is an old saying that is at least partly true: "A lean hound for a long race." Insurance companies have shown that the somewhat underweight individual has a greater life expectancy than his overweight, adipose brother of the same age. We have a lot of sympathy on people who are thin and who are approaching middle age, as, on careful examination, they are found to be organically healthy—at least most of them.

It is a common trick of the novelist and the caricaturist to picture the miser, the pessimist, or the grouch as a skinny, sharp-nosed character devoid of humor; one who uses his cane on children and dogs.

Some of these persons are grouchy and unhappy because their digestive organs are out of tune. Others have a bad case of nerves—they worry, cross bridges before they come to them, and are fearful of ill health. Many of them are afraid to eat and some of them take a dose of this or that for indigestion or what not almost every hour.

In order to add weight it is necessary to use more food than the amount required to maintain body metabolism. Fats, starches and sugars must be used in increasing quantities, as protein foods are not easily transformed into fat. The food intake must be increased gradually. Plunging into a diet heavily loaded with fats, starches and sugars will promptly upset digestion and make a bad condition worse.

The first requirement is to find the food level that will maintain strength, replace daily wear and tear on the tissues and furnish enough blood for the organs of the body. Using this level as a starting point, from 100 to 500 calories must be added to the daily diet. For the first month or so the added amount should not exceed 100 to 200 calories a day. If it is found that this quantity of food is assimilated, in the second month the digestive organs may care for an increase of 200 to 300 calories per day. The amount of food taken may thus be increased slowly until at the end of a few months the individual is taking sufficient additional food to bring about a substantial gain in weight.

Chronically thin people are occasionally found to have a high metabolic rate due to excess activity of the thyroid gland. This of course, must be carefully checked as oversecretion from the thyroid will burn up food as rapidly as it is taken and gain in weight is practically impossible. Removal of a portion of the thyroid is sometimes necessary. Underweight may be the result of infection, of a lack of free hydro-chloric acid in the stomach, or of some other type of digestive failure.

Diet suggestions will be forwarded to any one sending a stamped and addressed envelope with request.

What 'Today Means

"Aries."

IF APRIL 10 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m.

There may be danger of an important item being overlooked, or misconstrued, should letters, memoranda or messages receive scant or hasty attention from you on this date.

Avoid being negative if called upon to express an opinion. The proper setting, as well as the right environment, will have a great deal to do with the success of any form of social entertainment, so exercise care in either preparation or the selection of place. Morbid curiosity on this date may lead to unpleasant situations, so it had best not be indulged in.

If a woman and April 10 is your birthday, your sympathetic nature will make you too ready to assume other people's burdens, or sacrifice your own pleasure, so as to indulge them in a selfish desire, prompted many times by purely a desire to have your own way.

If a man and April 10 is your natal day, the most important thing for you to learn is to master your temper and not let it master you.

Dames of Loyal Legion To Convene Here Friday

Harris & Ewing.

National Officers and Members From All Sections to Attend.

THE CIVIL WAR to most persons seems a remote tragedy which happened a long, long time ago. Yet today there are living enough daughters and widows of officers who fought to preserve the Union to form an important part of the membership of the National Society of the Dames of the Loyal Legion.

The organization which will meet Friday and Saturday at the Mayflower also includes in its memberships the mothers, wives and lineal female descendants of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States.

Two of the most distinguished members of the Dames of the Loyal Legion are Mrs. Henry M. Robert, widow of Gen. Robert, who wrote Robert's Rules of Order, and Mrs. Hoxie, widow of Gen. Richard Hoxie. Both make their home in Washington most of the time.

National Officers to Attend.

Members from all over the country as well as national officers are coming to Washington for the meeting. The national president, Mrs. Harriet Vaughn Rigdon, of Indiana, is already here. Yesterday she was in the thick of making plans for next year's program, which she intends to outline at the business session.

It won't be a very active program, according to Mrs. Rigdon. There will be the usual marking of graves on Memorial Day, the usual Lincoln Memorial service in the Capital next February 12. That's about all.

"It's hard to raise money now for memorial statues and monuments," Mrs. Rigdon said. "So I don't think we'll plan anything of that kind. Besides, almost everybody who deserves a memorial already has one."

Leaders Coming for Meeting.

Among the national officers who will attend the meeting are Mrs. David D. Good, of Philadelphia, junior vice president; Miss Marion L. Armstrong, of Reading, Pa., recorder; Miss Helen F. Downing, of Washington, treasurer; Mrs. J. Roberts Jarret, of Haddonsfield, N. J., registrar.

Sonia Troyano Will Be Heard Here Tonight

THE WASHINGTON unit of the Women's Overseas Service League will present Sonia Troyano in a costume concert at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Mayflower Hotel.

Sonia Troyano is a young American lyric soprano of Italian and Albanian parentage. She has won international fame in Spain and Mexico, and is widely known in New York as a radio star.

Miss Helen J. Neville is chairman of the concert committee. Assisting her will be Miss Alma Winningham, Miss Elsie Galloway, Miss Sadie Caughy, Mrs. Wallace W. Chiswell, Miss Mary H. Harlow, Miss Caroline Lee Hendricks and Miss Ruth McClellan.

The New York City Society will hold a card and bingo party at 1:30 o'clock today at the Southern Dairies, 60 M street northeast, for the benefit of a fund created for the purchase of talking book machines for the blind.

Miss Louise Moore, blind since the age of six years, will demonstrate the operation of the talking book, which reads itself aloud.

The Washington alumnae chapter, Delta Delta Delta National Sorority, will be entertained at a buffet supper tonight at the home of Mrs. William Lawrence Fulton in Chevy Chase. Mrs. Joseph D. Grigsby, national president of the sorority, will be the guest of honor.

Bamboo Room Plots Mystery For Its Guests

Johnny Slaughter Off for Atlantic City on a Secret Mission.

By Kay Ware.

It's getting to be a night club habit—this mystery business. Now the Willard Hotel's Bamboo Room has caught the fever, and Johnny Slaughter has left for Atlantic City, incognito, in false nose and whiskers, on an errand that must remain untold. We can guess what the errand is, but the Bamboo Room says, "Sh-h-!" so we won't tell.

Meanwhile we miss Ernestine and Fenton because they too are strolling the boardwalks. And so, when Isham Jones dropped in the other day, he missed out on a lot of very agreeable singing from the duo.

Eddie Peabody will double in activities and appear, not only at the Earle, but at the Shoreham. He's promised for four days next week, beginning Monday. Presently Marshall and Inez, musical comedy team, top the bill, with Eddie Collis playing a neat master of ceremonies. Mr. Collis is known in London as the Prince of Wale's favorite actor, and has appeared at the St. James Palace and the Prince's private lodge.

Marcia Harris is a specialty dancer; Aida Luciano, a genuine Spanish lass, sings, dances and wears native costumes. Max Lowe's music with Barnee directing is heard in the lounge every afternoon and in the ballroom evenings.

The Lotus opens welcome petals—or something—at the return of Al Norton, back from Florida. He probably wishes he was still there, what with the delightful spring weather we have here.

As for floor show, there's a big set-up of featured entertainers, dance teams, singers, comedy acts and what not.

A bit of biography on Emory Daugherty, the lad who runs the band at La Paree. Back in 1924 he bought himself a set of traps and organized the Sanagmo Orchestra, named after his Central High School frat. First job was on Arlington Roof with Dick Leibert, now a radio network organist. The two boys organized the Lido Orchestra, and opened the club of the same name at the Hamilton Hotel. Then Emory took his band to the Astor and stayed five years.

Meanwhile Asbury Park beckoned and Emory went. Also to Norumbega Park in Boston, and the Casino in Old Orchard, Me.

Since, the Aster was reborn under its new name, La Paree, and Emory's old friends still come back for more music. No wonder, because he knows the formula for dancing rhythms.

As for the radio angle, he was one of the pioneers in the commercial end in Washington, and his band has been heard over the two major networks. He composes, too; wrote the popular "College Sweetheart" which was published some years ago.

"Three's Not a Crowd" with Roy and Sonny Zastro and Eddie Brach heading the show at Club Habana. Unfortunately they will be here only a limited time, so get your looke-see soon. Sonny's Viennese Waltz is really lovely.

Napoleon's, formerly of 3000 Connecticut avenue, has opened a new establishment called Napoleon's Cafe and Restaurant.

Its cocktail lounge is the Flemish room, and contains replicas of the paintings and sixteenth century frescoes, Van Dyke Home in Antwerp, the Village Fair, Wine Cellar, Old Flemish Beer Hall and others.

Dinner music is from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. and 11 p. m. to 2 a. m.

You'll like the new Russian Balalaika orchestra up at the Casino Russe whether for dinner or dance music. Moyta Nemiroff has just come back from New York with an entirely new personnel, singers and dancers. There's music during dinner and into the late hours as well as during luncheon.

Vodka cocktails, a specialty of the house, add much to the glamour and the spirits.

Remember Tiny, formerly singing those very special songs at the Shoreham? Imagine the surprise to find him and ditties at the Mayfair the other day. But the worst of it is that he'll be there only until tomorrow. Tonight's your last chance—from 10 to 1. He says, "I don't mind 10 to 1 as odds, but it's hard as hours."

He panicked the place the other night with "Three Little Babes in the Woods." What's been done once can be done again.

Troika's own publicity man writes a letter to this columnist. It is best to quote:

"Troika's bartender has invented a new cocktail and it is not called the Troika Special. It is a Russian sidecar, i. e., a sidecar made with imported zubrovka as its base, rather than gin, and with a dash or two of something else to keep it from exploding when it touches the tongue. It tastes something like honeydew from the Garden of Eden, something like liquid dynamite, and just a trifle like a sidecar made with Russian zubrovka as its base.

"I know that you also will be glad to hear about Andre, our collosol cossack, who has added another accomplishment to his already long list. Andre is rapidly becoming a career man and I am sure that some day both the Troika and your column will point with pride to having given him a helping hand in his early strivings. As you know, he has long been Connecticut avenue's champion cab caller, and in addition writes poetry, sings beautifully and plays a superb game of pinochle. Now, however, he has gone in for professional wrestling. Although few knew it, he held numerous local titles among the Russian cossack troops in which he served before emigrating to America. Now he is recalling his early training, appearing next Thursday night at the Auditorium under the bleared and benevolent eyes of Promoter Joe Turner.

"The extremely dignified chap going in for flaming boeuf a la Stroganoff the other night and giving a big hand to Screen Cut-up Hugh Herbert's extemporaneous speech, was Myer Ellinson, Mayor of Newark, in town for a flying visit, to transact a couple of very weighty and mysterious pieces of business with the New Deal."

Marine Band Orchestra To Play for Pageant

Music for two presentations of the Pan-American pageant, "Simon Bolivar, the Liberator," will be played by the orchestra of the United States Marine Band at Roosevelt Auditorium tomorrow and Friday at 8:30 p. m. when the play is presented under the auspices of the Community Center Department.

Written by Dr. Barbara Ring, and presented for the first time in Miami, Fla., in 1932, this production will be under the general direction of Marie Moore Forrest. The Lisa Gardiner Dancers will participate.

D. C. Democratic League Plans Program Tonight

The monthly meeting of the Democratic League of the District will be held tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Racquet Club, 1135 Sixteenth street northwest, when Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, will be the guest speaker.

Other guests and speakers will include Representatives John S. Bowland, Francis D. Cullin, Samuel Dickstein, James Duffy, Charles A. Buckley, E. J. Sisson, Richard Tonrey, John J. Delaney, John O'Connor, Emanuel Celler and Mathew J. Merritt, all of New York. Arthur C. Smith is the president of the District League.

Senator Thomas Speaks At National U. Tonight

The first of a series of lectures to be given under the auspices of the American Institute of Adult Education will be delivered tonight at the National University by Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah.

Senator Thomas, who has spent many years in the Far East, will speak on the course China and Japan will probably take in the event of another world war. Dr. H. W. Woolever, editor of the International Press, will preside, and Dean Charles Pergler, of the National University School of Economics and Politics, and Dr. Boyd Carpenter, professor of political science at Georgetown University, will speak briefly.

College in Iowa Facing Probe By Grand Jury

By the Associated Press.

Iowa City, Iowa, April 9.—A warning that a grand jury will investigate conditions on the University of Iowa campus unless university officials enforce discipline more rigidly was sounded today by County Attorney E. A. Baldwin as a result of the indefinite suspension from school of 23 fraternity members.

The college men, affiliated with Phi Beta Delta, were suspended on charges that women visited their chapter house for immoral purposes.

Baldwin said the university had not cooperated in an investigation he has been making into vice conditions since taking office last January 1. He added that he believed other fraternities at the university might be guilty of practices similar to those charged to the Phi Beta Delta house.

The suspension of the 23 was announced last night by the university board of discipline, which said its action was based on an investigation that revealed women had visited the fraternity house four times between last December and February of this year.

4 Collegians Arrested After Drinking Bout

By the Associated Press.

Gambier, Ohio, April 9.—The prospect of expulsion from Kenyon College faced at least four members of one of its fraternities tonight as the aftermath of an alleged drinking party attended by several girls from the nearby town of Mount Vernon.

The four were arrested by deputy sheriffs at the close of the party as the fathers of two of the girls signed warrants charging the youths with contributing to the delinquency of minors.

Dean Clarence P. Gould said all students connected with the party would be expelled as soon as circumstances of the party, and a near-riot which developed as the arrests were made, are fully explained to the college authorities.

Jewish War Veterans To Mark the Passover

Commemorating the Passover, a Community Seder, sponsored by the Jewish War Veterans of the Jewish Community Center, will be held Sunday at 6:30 p. m.

The ceremony, it was explained yesterday, is to be a duplicate of the one held in Paris in 1919 for more than 2,000 Jewish soldiers. It will be conducted by Abe Sheffer-man, who officiated in Paris at the time.

Academy of Sciences To Convene April 22

With 54 papers on a widely varied field of subjects scheduled for presentation, the National Academy of Sciences will hold its annual meeting here April 22, 23 and 24.

All sessions, which will be held in the National Academy of Sciences Building, will be open to the public.

Shut-ins to Be Guests At Dance Show Tonight

Patients of Mount Alto Hospital will be guests tonight at a benefit entertainment by students of the Lou Langlotz School of Dancing.

A variety show and exhibition dancing will feature Elaine English, Kathryn Mehserle, Patricia Whitaker, Suzanne Smith, Elvina Rowe, Rose Mary Scopi, Gona Blumberg, Marion and Laura May Norris, Mary Jane Wyble, Mary Palermo, Olive Scopi, Peggy Ownes, Leon Cantellis and Bussie Langlotz, with Mrs. Gertrude Colbert at the piano.

Church Group Plans Dinner.

Members of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church will hold their annual business meeting at 7:45 p. m. tomorrow. The Men's Bible Class, assisted by women of the church, will serve a dinner at 6:30 p. m., preceding the business session.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Manhattan Promenade.

It stands, spread-winged, in the Pennsylvania R. R. Station at Thirty-fourth street, a 1929 Ford tri-motor plane that established the coast-to-coast record of 48 hours 6 years ago. Perhaps it stands there as a speedometer of the amazing age in which we are living, because this plane, in six years, has become old fashioned. Walk up the wooden runway and peer into the cabin, and it is as if you were opening the pages of an old family album. Erect wicker chairs on which the passengers sat look clumsy and awkward, and the whole effect is one of homeliness. Yet I remember traveling from Boston on one of these planes, and at that time it was the last word in air luxury. In six years, it has become outmoded, almost as old-fashioned as the earliest forms of rail transportation. You shudder to think of the planes of 1914, in which men shot at each other between the revolving blades of propellers.

The contrast becomes startling when you go to Newark Airport to see off some Broadwayites who are going out on the Coast planes of 1935. I was there on Saturday. Two TWA planes were taking off for the Coast, because now the traffic has grown so heavy that planes go out in sections, like the Twentieth Century. We went out into the yards to inspect the 15-passenger Douglass. Upholstered seats fitted snugly into the streamlined contours, the chairs operating on swivels so that they could be adjusted in any position. The dashboard of the plane was absolutely bewildering, with perhaps 52 different dials and clocks, each pertinent and necessary to operation. The pilot let us adjust the radio earphones. We could hear the man in the Newark control tower, traffic cop of the field, clearing the ground lanes of all ships so that the Coast plane could take off. We could hear the dot-dash-dot signal of the radio beam that directs planes through fog, worst hazard of the air. We could hear planes reporting to the ground, and we could hear ground stations calling planes and giving them weather reports, altitude directions. This has been accomplished in six years. The huge plane that spreads its wings in Pennsylvania Station is part and fabric of the amazing pattern, as important as the man who runs the first leg of a relay race and turns over the baton to fleeter legs.

Never saw such a show as the one given at Newark's Mosque Theater, Sunday night. It was arranged by Mayor Meyer C. Ellenstein, Newark's amazing chief exec, for the Hebrew Orphans' Institution, and from 9 o'clock at night until 11, I must have introduced every great star in show business—Sophie Tucker, Paul Whiteman's band, Abe Lyman's band, Jack Pearl, Jimmy Durante, Jack Dempsey, Phil Baker, Gus Edwards, Evelyn Herbert and Bob Halliday, Lillian Roth, Aunt Jemima, Helen Morgan, Ritz Brothers, Benny Leonard—the list was endless. It was a tribute to Newark's Mayor, a very swell person and whose versatility is best expressed by the fact that in school he was a ring champion and yet found time to win a degree in law and another degree in dentistry. Performers get a great kick out of this particular benefit. Whenever they subsequently return to Newark to play an engagement, they receive daily floral bouquets in their dressing rooms from the orphans.

Soothingest moment in the rush of the Dawn Patrol arrives at 2 a. m., when some of us go to the Cotton Club uptown. At this hour, Claude Hopkins' grand band plays the tunes that we ask for, and Hopkins, at the piano, lures brilliant melodies. From 2 a. m. until 3 a. m., if you are fortunate, Orlando Robeson, greatest singer of popular songs I've ever heard, really turns loose. I've never heard any one to match this Robeson. He has a tremendous feeling for music, this greatest of blackbird warblers, and if you haven't heard him, you've got a swell treat in store for you and your girl friend.

Rainbow Room, at Radio City, is reserved only for club members at luncheon time. The sign in the lobby is a bit startling: "Visibility Poor" read the placard yesterday. The cubes of butter served at lunch are imprinted with the "R" of the Rockefellers, and the $1 luncheon is excellent. The organ plays in lieu of the band. The panorama is startling in its vastness. The steel span of the Washington Bridge, the spidery web of the Fifty-ninth Street Bridge that leads to Long Island, and the entire city of stone is spread before you. Everything is breathtaking, including the elevator that jumps from the first floor to the fifty-third floor in one staggering leap.

Sophie Tucker, thrilled by a 15-minute ovation at her opening last week, was talking to me of nervous tension and how it expresses itself. I told her of Ruth Snyder. Twenty minutes before electrocution, Mrs. Snyder was arguing violently with the matron—over a $3 error in Sing Sing bookkeeping.

Chris Schmidt sends me a postcard of O'Brien's Ledger House at Elmsford, N. Y., where Barmaid Betsy Flannagan originated the cocktail. The name derived from her practice of decorating the bottles with chickens' tail feathers, and I never knew that before.

Nice to Hear Battle Today On Oath Bill

Dr. Ames Will Argue Against Measure for Teachers.

Col. Woodcock to Lead Proponents of Plan Legion Fosters.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 9.—A hearing on the teachers' oath bill, one of the most controversial measures before the recent session of the General Assembly, is scheduled to be held before Gov. Harry W. Nice tomorrow. Large delegations are expected to appear for and against the proposal.

Chief interest centers in the hearing on the oath bill, which has aroused opposition among many of the leading educators of the State. Dr. Joseph S. Ames, president of Johns Hopkins University, will be spokesman for a group asking the Governor to veto the measure. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president of St. John's College, Annapolis, and former national prohibition administrator, is expected to be among the proponents.

Sponsored by Delegate John S. White, of the Prince Georges County delegation in the House, the act provides that all teachers in schools, colleges or universities, receiving State aid, shall take the oath of allegiance to the United States. It had the full weight of support of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and other patriotic organizations. The oath requirement is part of a Nation-wide campaign of the legion, and has been adopted by more than a score of States.

Today the Governor gave a hearing to a delegation of nearly 100 citizens of Montgomery County urging approval of legislation for that county. Senator Stedman Prescott, who introduced most of the bills, was chief spokesman. He spoke in favor of the new charter bill for Glen Echo, a measure that was protested by a delegation which appeared before the Governor several days ago.

The Governor spent the afternoon and evening in Baltimore participating in ceremonies marking the formal opening of the mammoth new Chevrolet motor plant.

Albert Lomax Named Tobacco Inspector

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 9.—The appointment of Albert J. Lomax, of Leonardtown, Republican member of the House of Delegates, from St. Marys County, as State tobacco inspector, was announced today at the office of Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Lomax was commissioned as of April 4 to succeed F. Brooke Matthews. He will serve the remainder of a two-year term running from March 4 last.

The position, after the State salary cuts, carries compensation of $3,162 annually.

Recent Legislation Reported Defective

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 9.—Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor and his staff are working on the mass of legislation passed by the General Assembly and are reporting to Gov. Harry W. Nice as to the constitutionality of the measures.

It was intimated today that a number of the bills will be subject to adverse opinions. Unless signed by the Governor despite such rulings, these measures will be lost until the next legislative session.

The State Law Department declined to confirm the fact that a number of measures were found defective, but reliable authority has stated this to be the case.

One measure, especially desired by the Governor, which would create a 3-man conservation commission, was said to have been so hastily amended in the final crush of the session that there is serious doubt as to its legality. O'Conor said this bill has not yet been signed by his department.

A total of 602 bills were passed. The attorney general's office has completed the study of about 400 of them.

Bookmaking Foes Petition for Veto

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 9.—Proponents of a bill to outlaw bookmaking establishments in Washington County, which was passed by the Legislature on the closing day, and which is now in the hands of Gov. Nice, will ask the Governor for a hearing after having learned that petitions are being circulated by opponents of the bill urging a veto.

The same bill was passed two years ago by the Legislature, but was vetoed by Gov. Ritchie. Proponents of the bill are prepared to take a large delegation to Annapolis. The bill provides for closing the establishments.

Allegany Bailiff Begins Duties.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Noah Newton's Penalty Is Cut To Life Term

Slayer of "Meddlesome" Sweetheart Escapes Chair As Peery Acts.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 9.—Gov. Peery today commuted to life imprisonment sentence of Noah Newton, sentenced in Fredericksburg on a plea of guilty to the murder of Josie Allen, a former sweetheart whom he said was "meddlesome."

"Mature consideration of the whole record and all of the surrounding facts gives rise to some doubt as to whether the death penalty should be imposed in this case," said the Governor in a three page typewritten communication. "I have decided to resolve this doubt in favor of the prisoner and grant the prayer of the petition, commuting the death sentence to life imprisonment."

The death sentence was imposed by Judge Frederick W. Coleman in the Stafford County Circuit Court, for the murder of the Allen woman December 30, 1934. On January 4 after a plea of guilty and the testimony of certain witnesses the court sentenced Newton to death, and fixed February 15 as the date for his electrocution. A reprieve was granted in the case to April 19, 1935.

Describing the events leading up to the murder, the Governor said the evidence indicated the prisoner and Josie Allen had been "very intimate" and that this intimacy was broken off some months before the homicide.

"It appears from the affidavit of Dr. Frank C. Pratt that he knew Noah Newton from birth until 1917, and that he did not consider him normal mentally; that he had opportunity to observe him frequently and that he believed him mentally deficient."

Pastor Extols Woman 62 Years in His Flock

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 9.—Sixty-two years of membership in one congregation—First Baptist, this city—was publicly mentioned from the pulpit Sunday when the pastor, the Rev. John Ward Brown, referred to Mrs. Margaret West, 80, present in the congregation.

Mrs. West, wife of Charles W. West, joined the church when she was 18.

Rotary Picks Speaker List For Meeting

Education Chief and Aid to Hoover Will Be on Program.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, April 9.—Dr. John W. Studebaker, United State Commissioner of Education, and Hugh H. Clegg, assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation, United States Department of Justice, head a list of distinguished speakers for the annual thirty-fourth District Rotary Conference here April 28, 29 and 30.

Preparations are being made to entertain 500 to 1,000 Rotarians and their wives from the district area, Maryland, District of Columbia, and parts of Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

District Governor J. Milton Patterson, of Cumberland, Md., will preside at the session and one of the business features of the conference program will be selection of his successor, who will be elected formally at Rotary International Convention in Mexico in June.

On the speaker program also is Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Washington, which was attended by the late President Calvin Coolidge.

The general theme of the conference will be "Youth Service."

Rotary International will be officially represented by Charles E. Hunt, of St. Johns, Newfoundland. Business sessions of the conference will be supplemented by the annual dinner and ball on Monday evening, historic tours, sports and other features.

The opening event of the three-day conference will be a sacred concert Sunday evening, featuring the Treble Clef Choral Club of the Wicomico Woman's Club, which has several times carried off highest honors in State-wide competition. Entertainment at the annual dinner will feature the Keystone quartet.

Clarke County Tax Increase Defeated

Board Refuses Request for 22-Cent Boost.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., April 9.—After 17 of 19 citizens attending the session had voted against an increase in the Clarke County tax levy for the current year, the board of supervisors adopted the 1934 rates.

A 22 cents increase was requested. The increase was to be distributed 5 cents on the general county levy, 8 cents on the school levy and 9 cents on the general debt fund.

Superintendent of Schools A. F. Robertson had stated the 8-cent increase in the school levy was necessary if the schools were to be operated for nine months. He declared a recent law of the Virginia Legislature eliminating high school tuition meant a $4,000 loss per year to the county. It was said that if the increase were refused, the school term for 1935-36 would be eight months instead of nine.

The county levies are as follows: General, 55 cents; school, 62; general debt, 8 cents.

Moonshiner Denies Guilt In Slaying

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., April 9.—Arraigned in Loudoun County Circuit Court today on a charge of killing Corpl. Clarence J. McClary, of Alexandria, on March 17, Thomas (Old Tom) Quesenberry pleaded not guilty and asked the court to appoint a lawyer to defend him.

The one-eyed mountaineer moonshiner, whose case was set for trial on April 23, appeared nervous when he faced the court and spoke in a low drawl. The courtroom was filled by those awaiting the entrance of the rugged character whose alleged shootings into raiding parties called out a large body of Federal, State and county officers before his capture the night of March 17.

To the indictment charging Quesenberry and Shelby Cole, alleged lookout man at the still, with the shooting of Federal Agent George Kirkpatrick, Quesenberry pleaded guilty, but sentence was deferred by Judge J. R. H. Alexander. Cole pleaded not guilty to the charge. The case was tentatively set for May 2.

Jesse Tumblin, of Bluemont, arraigned on an indictment of selling ardent spirits, pleaded not guilty. He changed his plea of guilty to the charge of feloniously shooting Floyd Hummer, to not guilty, and his case was set for April 29.

Neale Virts, jr., and Thomas Ballenger, charged with stealing dynamite from the Leesburg lime kiln, pleaded guilty and sentence was deferred until tomorrow.

Cases of Wilmer Brent, of Mercer District, charged with the possession of a still, and George Ritchie, of Lovettsville, charged with possession of ardent spirits, are set for April 26. They will be defended by Stilson H. Hall.

Butler Held for Jury In Applejack Purchase

Harry Adams, butler for William Lipscomb, yesterday waived scheduled preliminary hearing at Alexandria, Va., on a charge of buying 150 gallons of applejack from "Old Tom" Quesenberry, Loudoun County mountaineer accused of shooting two law enforcement officers, and was ordered held for the Federal grand jury by U. S. Commissioner John B. Phillips.

Farm Robberies Land Trio in Jail

Thefts of Chickens, Meat Cause Heavy Losses.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 9.—Sheriff G. Kersley Wysong, assisted by State police, has arrested three men in connection with robberies of chicken and meat houses on Jefferson County farms in the last winter. Losses suffered by the farmers amount to hundreds of dollars.

Sheriff Wysong, Corp. Ancil and Trooper Osborne searched a house occupied by Raymond Burke, south of here on Charles Town-Berryville pike, and found some of the stolen meat as well as tobacco and notions thought to have been stolen from country stores that have been robbed in this section recently. Burke implicated Jim Frazer and Joe Dodson, Culpeper and Madison, Va., respectively. Officers captured the Virginians at their homes and all of them are in jail here.

It is understood Dodson made a partial confession, but Burke made a complete confession and has been held for April term of the grand jury. Frazer and Dodson will be given a hearing before Justice J. Dan Walker, Charles Town, at 10 o'clock Thuraday morning.

3 Counties Lead Entries in Post Spelling Tests

Schools Urged to Enroll so Final Result Will Be Representative.

While Shenandoah and Loudoun Counties in Virginia and Prince Georges in Maryland continue to roll up entries in the national spelling bee, other parts of the territory in which The Post is sponsoring the project are lagging.

No matter how few enrollments in any one county, schools which have entered will be permitted to take part. If only one school is registered, its two best spellers will represent the county in the area finals. If only two schools enter, the champion from each will take part in area finals.

That should offer a challenge to schools in counties which are lagging in registration to get into the contest and make winners truly representative of the entire county.

Seven schools enrolled yesterday:

Clarke County, Va. — Glendale School, Miss Georgiana Glascock, principal; Hout School, Miss Mabel Glascock, principal.

Fauquier County, Va.—John Barton Payne School, R. B. Lawson, principal; Hume School, A. di Zeriga, jr., principal.

Shenandoah County, Va.—Forestville School, K. B. Hook, principal.

Loudoun County, Va. — Furnace Mountain School, enrolled by Miss Margaret F. Costello.

Anne Arundel County, Md.—Brooklyn Park School, Miss Jessie S. Bourke, principal.

Dorothy Trammell and Virginia Utterback, in the seventh grade, and Muriel Trammell and Alberta Costello, in the sixth, are leading in the spelling bee in Forestville School, Fairfax County, Va., Miss Madeleine Long announces. Final winners, who will represent the school in the county match, will be determined later.

Enrollment blanks and leaflets giving details of the contest will be sent on request. Address Alice Fox Pitts, in care of The Washington Post.

Woman Denies to Law She's Dead and Buried

New York, April 9 (AP).—Helen Teevan, 24, of Brooklyn, came into the Charles Street Police Station today to prove she was still alive.

"I read in the papers yesterday," she said, "where I was identified in the morgue and that I was buried in Silver Mount Cemetery on Staten Island."

Lieut. Jack Shevlin agreed there must have been a mistake and went about correcting the department's records.

Peace Rally Meets Salvo Of Criticism

Student Liberty League Echoes Charges of 'Red' Agitation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 9.—The University of Virginia's proposed anti-war rally scheduled for Friday morning in the McIntire Amphitheater as a mass meeting of the entire student body, approved by the university officials and including among its roster of speakers members of the faculty and of national organizations, drew fiery criticism from several sides today.

Homer Chailliaux, director of the national Americanism commission of the American Legion, speaking at a meeting of the Seventh District of the legion here last night, denounced the work of Communist agitators in American colleges and called many educators in the country's schools sponsors of Communist doctrines who were afraid to pay their dues in the party organization.

Calls Group Communistic.

Referring specifically to the meeting here, he said the American League against War and Fascism was distinctly a Communist organization and that the meeting here, hence, was backed by Communist elements. The American Legion approves of any movement seeking peace, he said, but it can not recognize activities backed by radicals.

The principal speaker of the day Friday is to be J. B. Matthews, representative of the League Against War and Fascism.

Meanwhile, John H. Blaffer, chairman of the university chapter of the American Liberty League, an organization which has declined to join in the rally, declared the movement was being sponsored by local Communist groups and that the university antiwar committee was influenced by a body of the school's radicals.

To Send Protesting Letter.

Blaffer said he would prepare a letter of protest to be sent to College Topics, university undergraduate news organ.

Citizens of Charlottesville and Albemarle today were invited to join in the demonstration by the antiwar committee. At a meeting in Madison Hall yesterday afternoon a resolution was adopted urging all persons in the community to attend the meeting, which will be held regardless of weather conditions. Arrangements have been made to conduct the rally in Cabell Hall should inclement weather continue.

Members of the committee also were attempting to enlist students of Lane High School and St. Anne's School for Girls for a demonstration. Leaders of the group proposed at the high school that the students hold a separate rally of their own. They were sent to Dr. James G. Johnson, superintendent of city schools, by Principal Hugh L. Sulfridge who declared it was against the law to disseminate propaganda among high school students.

Relief Group Calls 'Preparedness' Parley

Richmond, Va., April 9 (AP).—Anxious that Federal relief authorities shall have a clear picture of the situation in Virginia before final regulations are promulgated for the State under the new $4,880,000,000 works bill, the relief committee of the League of Virginia Municipalities will hold a "preparedness" conference here during the week.

Degree for Glass From W. & M.; Notice Conveys Extra Honor

President Bryan, of Williamsburg Institution, Asks Privilege of Conferring Degree on Virginia Senator.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., April 9.—There's some difference of opinion as to just who will be honored when Senator Carter Glass receives his degree of doctor of law from the ancient College of William and Mary.

The degree will be awarded during the commencement exercises of the college in Williamsburg June 10.

"Dear Senator Glass:

"I have the honor and the pleasure to inform you that by the unanimous vote of the faculty and the board of visitors of the College of William and Mary, you have been elected an LL.D. of this institution. I very greatly hope it will be your pleasure to allow us to confer the degree upon you on Monday, June 10.

Moliere Ceremony Recalled.

"You may recall that when the bust of Moliere was placed in the French Academy, his proponent said:

"'This act honors us, not him.'

"And I only express the opinion of the country at large when I say that you have reached a position of distinction and eminence which has placed you above the power of others either to add to your honor or to detract from your fame; but for the sake of generations to come this ancient college, which conferred its first LL. D. degree upon Thomas Jefferson, earnestly desires that it may be privileged to inscribe on its rolls your name as the recipient of the highest tribute it is in the power of the college of William and Mary to bestow."

The Senator's Reply.

Wrote Senator Glass, in reply:

"My dear Mr. Bryan:

"Be good enough to pardon this belated acknowledgment of yours of March 26 occasioned by constant preoccupation with such vitally important public matters that I have been compelled to neglect personal matters completely.

"Needless to say, I deeply appreciate the honor which the College of William and Mary proposes for me and accept it with a sense of humility appropriate to such action by the faculty and the board of visitors of the institution. I see no reason now why I may not be there on June 10. I do not need to assure you that I greatly prize the gracious way in which you have communicated this action to me."

Favored Films Duplicate Our View of Merit

By Nelson B. Bell.

The April 1 brochure of preview critical judgment, distributed by the the Will H. Hays office—that would be the official headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.—lists as the "Best of the Month," RKO-Radio's "Laddie," Paramount's "Ruggles of Red Gap," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Vanessa, Her Love Story" and Samuel Goldwyn-United Artists' "The Wedding Night."

All but one of these, Washington has viewed and would be inclined to rate about as Mr. Hays' transcontinental screen gazers have catalogued them. The film yet to be viewed in the Capital is "Laddie," originally booked for this coming Friday at RKO-Keith's, but withdrawn at the last minute in favor of William Powell and Ginger Rogers in "Star of Midnight."

The Various "Bests."

This valuable monthly pamphlet goes on to list as the best social drama of the preceding month, "Dog of Flanders," the "society" idea being just a trifle obscure in this instance. The best musical romance, it seems, was "Let's Live Tonight" and the best musical comedy, "Enter Madame."

In the department of humor, "Capt. Hurricane" is given top ranking; of melodrama and mystery tales, "The Casino Murder Case" has the call.

These appraisals are important because they reflect a cross-section point of view of the entire country. They are doubly important to Washington because they usually represent an echo of critical opinion the National Capital already has expressed.

Cesar Romero, who plays the juvenile lead with George Arliss in the screen version of "Cardinal Richelieu," will be interviewed on the radio today at 1:30 through Station WOR by Bide Dudley, noted critic. "Cardinal Richelieu" will begin its New York engagement in the Radio City Music Hall on Thursday, April 18. It is, of course, a United Artists release—"of course" because Mr. Arliss was one of the first stars coaxed away from his earlier productional affiliations by Darryl Zanuck when he organized Twentieth Century in association with Joseph M. Schenck.

That Civic Theater Idea.

Perhaps, after all, there is, in embryo, a Washington Civic Theater—as it may be called for want of a better name. It happens in this case to be the Columbia Players who are at the bottom of it.

A plan long cherished by the Columbians for a permanent repertoire of favorite plays is becoming a reality with their decision to keep their production of "Uncle Vanya" intact for future presentation.

The play was presented last month at Pierce Hall, and later at the Soviet Embassy by invitation of Ambassador Troyanovsky, and is regarded by members of the group and by subscribers as one of the finest things the Players have done.

Keeping Up in Parts.

Not only will the scenery, costumes and properties be kept, but the cast is holding line rehearsals from time to time to keep lines and characterizations fresh.

Handicapped by lack of storage space for scenery, the Players have heretofore dismantled each set, using much of the matrial in building the settings for the following play.

When the group acquires a theater of its own, with space for storage, and adequate workshop, the keeping of favorite plays from year to year will present no problem.

In the meantime, however, they have found room to store the "Uncle Vanya" sets, and from now on the most outstanding of the Players' productions will find a place in a permanent repertoire.

Thus, of all the semi-professional groups in Washington, it seems to be the Columbia Players who actually are going places, as the saying is.

A friendly note from Romaine Callender, long one of the wheel horses of the National Theater Players, brings word under date of April 7, that Mr. Callender, excellent actor that he is, is engaged to go with the Elitch Garden Stock Co., in Denver, Col., come June. "Post Road" is running merrily along," continues Mr. Callender, "and we play our 150th performance Wednesday night, April 10." That, you will observe, would be approximately tomorrow.

Concerning Mr. Herbert.

Although a native of Binghamton, N. Y., and there is such a town somewhere, it seems to me, just as there is a Valparaiso, Ind., this fellow Hugh Herbert, currently headlining the stage portion of the goings-on at the Earle Theater, is no stranger to Washington.

As a matter of fact, he used to live here—somewhere on F street, northwest. That was up to, but not quite including the year 1907. On Thanksgiving Day of that year, Master Hugh, just a lad at the time, shook the Potomac humidity from his heels, in a manner of speaking, and took himself away from here to go on the stage.

In 1913 we find him star of a skit known as "The Son of Solomon," being presented with elan no end in Hammerstein's Victoria in New York, the then ace vaudeville house of the country, bar none. Broadway's famed Palace had not even been thought of then.

And who would be the manager of this Hugh Herbert act? You'd never guess. Sidney R. Lust, local motion-picture independent, factotum of the M. P. T. O. A., clubman and all-round bon vivant. Sid and Hugh got their start in the theater jointly.

The Lusts Entertain.

That is why Mr. and Mrs. Lust on Wednesday midnight of this week are tossing a rout in their Geranium street home in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert. This, by all signs and portents, will be a large evening in theaterdom, all of the major lights and satellites of "show business" having been bid to meet the distinguished visitors in our midst.

Having already met him, I am prepared to say that those who have not, have a treat in store. Mr. Herbert is a comedian on the stage and on the screen, but a substantial citizen off.

A writer of note, he has the first all-talkie script ever produced to his credit—reposes, I believe, either in the Congressional Library or the Smithsonian, or somewhere—in that memorable "The Lights of New York," and, besides that, has composed something like 150 vaudeville acts, the text for Erich von Stroheim's "The Great Gabbo" and divers and sundry other jobs of journeyman scrivening.

It is one of the idiosyncrasies of this gifted clown's method that he never bothers much about the author's lines when he is handed a part. Most of it he ad libs as he goes along. And the results are probably far happier—at least for those out front, if not for the author who thinks his lines are pretty good.

In Shakespeare Fairyesque.

I suspect that one time when Hugh didn't do too much ad libbing was in the filming of Max Reinhardt's "A Midsummer Night's Dream"—which might also, in some slight measure be credited, I presume, to one Master Will Shakespeare. In this subject Mr. Herbert appears in a dual role, having one part in the major movement of the fantasy and another in its occasional interludes.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," incidentally, is gradually being whittled down to practical dimensions. The last I heard, it was 15 reels long, but now I understand they have reduced it to a size no more ponderous than one of Eugene O'Neill's marathon stage plays!

But the point is that Hugh Herbert is a rather grand person, literate, genial, comic and what an inexplicable theater jargon terms "regular."

If you have not already seen him on the stage at the Earle, you should.

At the annual meeting of the Pierce Hall Players, last week-end, Frank Baer, Washington playwright and commentator; Mary Foley Benson and George Farrington were elected to serve as council members for a term of two years. Those elected to serve for one year include Dorine Calcote, Jessie Harden, Elinor Cox Karsten, Howard Wentworth, Myrtle Olmstead MacMahon and Allan Stephens. After the official session, a reception was held for the new council members.

Standing Aghast Note.

So this is spring!

Blackfriars Guild

"CRADLE SONG." The Blackfriars Guild presents the play in two acts and interlude by Gregorio Martinez Sierra, translated from the Spanish by John Garrett Underhill. Directed by Lucy Ann Rogers; settings designed and executed by J. C. Witler, Paul Murphy, Pat Seidenberg and Jack Hurley, in St. Paul's Auditorium, April 8, 9 and 11. Reviewed Monday evening by W. A. Whitney.

The Cast.

The Prioress.....Mary Black
The Vicaress.....Keith Oriani
The Mistress of Novices..Frances Shea
Sister Joanna of the Cross
.....Jeanne Bateman
Sister of Maria Jesus..Helen Halligan
Sister Marcella.....Helen Nordstrom
Sister Sagrario.....Adah May Brady

Sister Tornera.....Adele Endres
Teresa.....Elinor Sgueo
Antonio.....Leo Murphy
The Doctor.....Edgar M. Ford

Following the custom established a few years ago of offering during Lent a drama with a distinctly religious background, the Blackfriars Guild last night presented Gregorio Martinez Sierra's beautifully fragile drama of convent life, "Cradle Song," before an audience enthusiastic, but not unmindful of the deeper significances and purposes of the play.

In the annals of the stage and screen no more poignant story of tenderness and mother love has been portrayed than Eva Le Gallienne did upon the stage and Dorothea Wieck upon the screen, both in the role of Sister Johanna of the Cross, the cloistered novitiate on whom human affection welled unabated despite vows to eschew the world and its cares. Into that part, of which so much has been made and, accordingly, so much more is each time expected, Jeanne Bateman stepped last evening with laudable precision and gave the part a reading of superlative quality.

Leads Excel.

Elinor Sgueo, as the object of Sister Johanna's maternal affection, was excellent. And even in the more repressed parts Miss Sgueo was no less effective.

Of the others, Edith Oriani, as the "old-maidish" vicaress; Mary Black, as the prioress, and Helen Nordstrom, as Sister Marcella, were somewhat more prominent because of the greater number of lines assigned. Leo Murphy made a good—and sufficiently nervous—Antonio, and Edgar M. Ford was satisfactory as the doctor. The remainder of the cast are also to be complimented for their admirable support.

Here is a beautiful drama admirably staged in two exquisite settings and presented with dignity and precision. It may be seen in St. Paul's auditorium again tonight and Thursday night.

Peery Says Carson Fee Is Closed Case

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., April 9—When informed of an announcement from the Shenandoah National Park offices here that written opinions of five circuit court judges in whose courts park lands were condemned, as to the value of the professional services of Judge A. C. Carson in condemnation proceedings, would be submitted to him and to the State Commission on Conservation and Development, Gov. George C. Peery commented that "Judge Carson has already been paid $7,500 for his services and there are no additional funds available."

He added, "I can see no point in reopening something that is already closed."

The conservation commission originally allotted Judge Carson $7,500 and later authorized an additional sum of $3,500. Judge Lemuel Smith, of Charlottesville, and Judge J. R. H. Alexander, of Leesburg, have stated that the nature and extent of Judge Carson's services to the park project would justify a fee of $25,000. Judge Philip Williams, of Winchester, and Joseph A. Glasgow, of Staunton, valued his work at "around $20,000," and Judge H. W. Bertram, of Harrisonburg, said that $20,000 would be too low."

Judge Carson agreed to accept such amount as the commission might designate "after the services had been rendered," and donated his service in drafting the legislation under which the park lands were condemned, as his personal contribution to the park project. It is understood that Judge Carson is seeking no additional compensation.

V. M. I. Cadets to Figure In Opera Ball at N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., April 9.—V. M. I. cadets, as impersonated by the famous Seventh Regiment, will figure in the Metropolitan Opera Ball in New York on May 2, college authorities learned today. The ball will feature a pageant in which an aristocratic Louisiana family of about 1850 are the central characters and V. M. I. drills of that period will furnish part of the action.

By a coincidence, V. M. I.'s cadets on the same day will be impersonating Gen. Stonewall Jackson's troops in a reenactment of the Battle of Chancellorsville near Fredericksburg.

Hospital Fund Drive Set.

Cumberland, Md., April 9 (AP).—Funds to be used for charitable work at the Memorial Hospital here will be sought by the ladies' auxiliary of the hospital in a tag-day drive. The City Council has issued a permit granting the auxiliary right to conduct the drive on April 13 or April 20.

Kolisch Group Given Ovation InConcert Here

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Second concert of the 1935 chamber music festival at the Library of Congress, Monday morning. American debut of the Kolisch Quartet, of Vienna (Rudolf Kolisch, Felix Khuner, Eugen Lehner, and Benar Heifetz). Program: Quartet in B flat, Op. 130, with the Grand Fugue ending (Beethoven); "Lyrische Suite" (Alban Berg). Premiere of Quartet No. 5 in B flat (Bela Bartok).

Such an ovation as was lavished upon the Kolisch Quartet after the completion of the Beethoven reading has seldom resounded in the auditorium, where many enthusiasms have been expended; the visitors from Vienna were recalled four times and finally honored with a standing salute. Spontaneous and unanimous, the tribute of admiration was an inevitable reaction to the masterly playing of an organization distinguished by the finest qualities of musicianship. Had a vote been taken in those moments of excitement, one surmises that the primacy among contemporary string foursomes would have been awarded to Messrs. Kolisch, Khuner, Lehner and Heifetz.

The reasons for that possible decision are multiple, and foremost is the remarkable unanimity in the subtleties of interpretation displayed by these four men, who play from memory with the complete effect of improvisation. So sympathetic is the interplay of spirit and emotion between them that one seems to hear music being created at the moment from the springs of inspiration. Their rapport results also in a blending of timbres into a rich and eloquent tone of unrivaled beauty, a tone of infinite finesse in color graduations. Individually proficient in technique, they subordinate that skill entirely to the purposes of expression and the persuasiveness is irresistible.

Fugal End Rarely Given.

Their presentation of the Beethoven Quartet in B flat was in the original version, as composed in 1825, with the fugal finale. One usually hears the work with the final movement written late in 1826, after Beethoven had accepted his publisher's advice to issue the Grand Fugue separately. The validity of that advice, practical as it was in the intention, is artistically questionable, for the length of the quartet in its first form imposes no tedium, when it is understood and played as the Viennese musicians played it yesterday.

Alban Berg's "Lyrische Suite" was written the year after the premiere of his opera, "Wozzek." In that period of relaxation after the concentration upon a great dramatic work, he also composed his "Chamber Concerto for Clavier, Violin and Thirteen Wind Instruments." Both the suite and the concerto contain intensely personal music, distinctly autobiographical in implications, and the suite, because of its lyrical character, is the more intimate of the two.

The very titles of the six movements reveal the poetic impulse in a vein of emotional confession. "Allegretto giovale," "Andante amoroso," "Presto delirando" and "Largo desolato" provide one with indisputable evidence that the composer is speaking from his heart more than from his intellect. The influence of Schoenberg, so strong upon Berg in his conspicuously modern moments, is observable here and there in the suite, but the individual idiom predominates and suffuses the entire work.

Sympathetically Played.

One was fortunate in hearing this highly significant suite interpreted by musicians keen in intuition and responsive in sympathy. A mere playing of the notes might have left one with a sense of disappointment, for in its superficial aspect the music is a weaving of tricks and devices. But it is fundamentally sincere music, an honest "unpacking of the heart" in tones, and once this sincerity is realized, one's comprehension of its true nature is attained.

In his Quartet in B flat, written last year on commission from the Library of Congress and performed publicly for the first time yesterday, Bela Bartok has combined very successfully his two major tendencies—harmonic atonality and the folk spirit. In form the music is more angular than graceful, for Bartok has never cared for suavity when vigor suited his purpose better, but it is more agreeable to the ear than his previous quartet.

The element of folk music is unobtrusive, scarecely more than a faint aroma, except in the "Scherzo all bulgarese," where it is an almating force. The five movements are forceful, positive and almost argumentative, for Bartok is a forthright individual with ideas of his own and the courage of his convictions.

Quintet Is Heard In Evening Session

Third concert of chamber music festival at Library of Congress, Monday night. The Paris Instrumental Quintet: Rene LeRoy, flute; Pierre Jamet, harp; Rene Bas, violin; Pierre Grout, viola; Roger Boulme, violoncello. Program: Sonate en quatuor, Op. 12, No. 1 (Guillemain); Quartet in D, Koechel 285 (Mozart); Serenade," Op. 30 (Roussel); Trio (Cras); Premiere of Sonata a Cinque (Malipiero).

A diversified program, ranging chronologically from 1743 to 1934, was presented by the Quintette Instrumental de Paris for the enjoyment of last night's audience. Deft, skillful and polished in their ensemble technique, the five artists varied the instrumental combinations as well as the types of compositions with interesting results. Curiosity centered naturally on the first performance of the Sonata a Cinque, written only last year by Gina Francesco Malipiero on commission from the Library of Congress.

This novelty held a surprise for those who may have expected something in the vein of the violin concerto recently performed here to the consternation of conservative ears. It is far less acrid in harmony and its few bursts of frenetic excitement are not so angular. Markedly impressionistic in style and for the most part nocturnal in atmosphere, it has certain affinities with De Falla's "Noches en los Jardines de Espana." Unusually lyrical for Malipiero, its poesy is expressed in frequent changes of tempo which amount virtually to a rhapsodic unsteadiness of mood.

Return to Melody.

The lyrical quality, taken in conjuction with the economical skill in instrumentation, suggests that Malipiero too may have joined the "back to Rameau" movement. There is at least a return to simplicity and to the charm of melody and the clarity of the writing has a classic trend. The three movements are played without pause and the work is relatively brief for the amount of contained thematic material. Decidedly attractive on a first hearing, it discloses in some passages a rare and tenuous beauty.

The trio by Jean Emile Paul Cras, the naval captain who has maintained his vocation on the sea and his avocation for music with equal faithfulness, is in its harmonic aspect belated Debussyism. Thematically and rythmically, it smacks strongly of the folk spirit and one of its four movements actually starts with an unmistakable gigue.

Somewhat Repetitious.

So rustic is the feeling of this trio that one can readily imagine that its inspiration came from the composer's native province of Finisterre. Again and again one hears the drone of the cornemuse and the shrilling of the pipes. Animated and melodic, it would hold the interest more firmly were it to be revised and curtailed; at present it contains longuers and repetitions in which much ado is made over very little.

Romanticism and sophistication are mingled in Albert Roussel's Serenade, as though lyric poems were alternated with epigrams. The work is constructed with his customary deftness in instrumentation and its moods are flavored with many a dash of subdued irony.

Of the two eighteenth century works on the program, the Mozart quartet for flute, violin, viola and violoncello was the gem radiating flashes of beauty. Beside it, Gabriel Guillemain's Sonate en Quartuor seemed pale, despite its vivacity and courtly grace. It is interesting to note that its subtitle, "Conversation galante et amusante," anticipated by considerably more than a century Henry Cowell's "Amiable Conversation."

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, April 9.

MERLE OBERON, fortunate enough to have a background and a face as intriguing as her name, has employed all three to quickly capture the imagination of movie fans.

Her place of origin is Tasmania, and her real name is Estelle Merle O'Brien Thompson. Her father was connected with the English Army service, and while on a visit to that island off the southeast coast of Australia he met Constance O'Brien, who became Merle's mother. The date was February 19, 1911.

Her mother always called Merle—and still does—My Queen. The mother now resides in London and is a frequent visitor to the movies when her daughter is on the screen.

When 7 years old, Merle was taken to Calcutta. Here she was known to her friends as Queenie. She went to school, and she went to work. She didn't care much for either.

She worked as a secretary in a large commercial firm, but the thing she loved to do most was dance.

It was her desire to become a great dancer. Even now, she'd practically stop doing anything to go dancing.

Her chief asset was that she always appealed to the boys. She generally got what she wanted at school, for the lads were anxious to do favors for her. When she was 17 years old, she was engaged to a prominent business man in Calcutta.

* * * * *

IN London she went to work, first at the Chez Henri, and at the Cafe de Paris as a dance hostess. She was earning money doing what she liked to do; but now she had a yen to get into pictures.

An American director, Art Rosson, gave her the first movie job, an extra in "Ebb Tide." She next played a bit, with one line to deliver, for another American director, Harry Lachmann. The flicker was "Aren't We All," starring Gertrude Lawrence.

She was still Queenie Thompson. It was when she played a bit in "Fascination," for Director Myles Manter, that he decided to change her name to Merle O'Brien.

Next, one day, dining in the studio commissary, she met Director Alexander Korda. He saw in her a personality which could be moulded into stardom.

Merle and Korda looked through the phone book for a new monicker. It was decided that she was to be Merle Auberon. There was a dressmaker at the studio named Auberon and she objected. Quickly, the name was changed to what it suggested to Korda, Oberon of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Then came the changes in technical makeup and appearance. She is dark skinned, with brown-reddish hair, hazel and green eyes, which slant a little, and a trim figure.

She wore a special hairdress in "Henry the Eighth" and "Folies Bergere." Her eyes were held back and made up to appear more oblique. She appears much taller than she is when attired in a smart gown. She is only 5 feet 2, and weighs 108 pounds.

* * * * *

SHE uses a special gold-colored makeup for the camera. She paints this brass on her cheek bones and covers her eyelids with it. Its main purpose is to catch the glare of the arc lights on the set.

She is always changing the makeup of her hair. She is always experimenting with new cosmetics. She paints her toenails a bright red, and her fingernails are painted a mild red—just for contrast.

She leaped into the American spotlight when it was announced from Monte Carlo that she had become engaged to Joseph Schenck. The public who got their first glimpse of her in "Henry the Eighth" were interested. It was merely another engagement to be called off.

She returned the engagement ring to Schenck. It was later purchased by Douglas Fairbanks and is now being worn by Sylvia Ashley.

Merle is still very much the object of many young men's affections. In Hollywood, she has been mentioned as being seen dancing with various screen heroes. She hasn't gone out with any of these men alone. Her favorite leading man is still Leslie Howard.

She wants to do a million things in one day. She can't keep time or appointments. She loves to hold your hand while she's talking to you.

She is a good dressmaker, and in the days when she was pinching her pennies, she made her own clothes.

She sleeps in a nightgown. She makes up for going to bed. She is a peaceful little sleeper.

Peery Opens Drive On Hit-Run Deaths

Richmond Toll, 8 in Week, Arouses Governor.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va. April 9.—Hit-and-run auto drivers drew the wrath of Gov. Peery today as he announced a double barreled attack upon criminal motorists who hit and run away.

The hit-run wave of the week in Richmond, which has mounted to a death toll of eight, prompted the Governor's pronouncement that such cases will be subject of an all-day discussion in the street and highway section of his safety conference here next month and that the matter immediately will be called to the attention of the criminal procedure sub-committee of his advisory legislative council.

The broken figure of an automobile cap embedded in this side of one hit-and-run victim had led today to arrest of Oliver J. Dillard, Negro, who is alleged to have driven a car which killed Harold R. Shoemaker, 42, an architect from Daytona Beach, Fla.

Plants Used to Catch Flies, Savant Tells W. & L. Students

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., April 9.—Housewives in some parts of the world—particularly Portugal—use growing plants to catch flies in the kitchen, thus, dispensing with fly swatters and flypaper, Dr. Francis E. Lloyd, McGill University professor and internationally famous botanist, told Washington and Lee University students last night.

There are 420 plants that feed on animals. But, contrary to occasional lurid stories, none of them consumes human flesh, the savant said. The diet of most carniverous vegetable matter is composed of insects. Both large and small and worms, he pointed out.

But the yarns about trees that eat men alive, he branded utterly false.

Dr. Lloyd spoke under the auspices of the department of biology.

Messenger Rises To Bank President

Hugh Scott Also Heads Board at Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 9.—A career which began 44 years ago when he became a runner for the National Bank of Fredericksburg was capped by Hugh D. Scott today with his election to the presidency and chairmanship of the board of directors of the oldest banking house in the city. He succeeds the late Judge H. Lewis Wallace.

Mr. Scott became assistant cashier in 1911, and nine years later became cashier.

As a result of the election other employes of the bank are: Cashier, M. P. Embrey; assistant cashier, Richard Hallberg; bookkeeper, Embrey Bailey; assistant bookkeeper, George Scott, jr., and Lawrence Estes, note clerk.

Forest Warden Finds Law Used in Early Mill

Oakland, Md., April 9 (AP).—A saw, used in the Muddy Creek Falls mill from 1852 to 1884, has been located by Forest Warden A. L. Sines, of Oakland, and now is on display at the Swallow Falls camp.

The saw, which is 7 feet long and 11 inches wide, was powered by a water wheel at the falls and traces of the sci-up still are visible there.

Grant Signed by Monroe Found in Harrisonburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 9.—A grant, giving 32 acres of East Rockingham land and signed by James Monroe, then Governor of Virginia, has been found here. The grant is dated September 19, 1800.

It is printed on sheepskin and the printing and writing are unusually plain. The signature of the fifth President of the United States stands out. The grant was made to Michael Hornes, a name now unknown in this section of the valley.

J. Roscoe Wheatley Killed in Auto Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harris Worried as Rain Deprives Nats of Needed Hitting Drill

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

IT was Shakespeare, or perhaps Longfellow, or somebody, I think, who said that clothes make the man, but I have always doubted it. In baseball, at least, it is difficult to know the gentlemen for what they are when they are out of uniform. Seven weeks on the road with the Nats, during which they were in civilian clothes almost continuously due to the persistent rains, has enabled this department to glean the following impressions of the Washington ball players in civilian attire:

POVICH.

Bucky Harris—The rising young business man who has probably gone far in the firm. A fellow who knows the value of excellent grooming—a customer's man.

Cecil Travis—A kid from the gang on the high school excursion that is visiting the State Capitol. He's no athlete, you can tell from his knock-knees.

Bob Burke—Fresh out of college and ready to enter the stock and bonds business if there is anything to this personal appearance talk.

Ed Linke—The butcher's boy in his Sunday best. Good natured, perhaps, because he may be afraid to fight and too fat to run.

Monte Weaver—A North Carolina mountaineer whose city polish has covered everything but his adam's apple. Fine, old American stock.

Irving Hadley—The campus hero who has taken on weight with age. A prosperous young fellow whom dad has probably taken into the business.

Joe Kuhel—All the way from Dingville Center to see some of the people he's heard tell about.

Johnny Stone—An athlete. Probably a football halfback, a javelin thrower in track, a center in basket ball or a big league pitcher. But, unmistakably an athlete.

Ossie Bluege—Chief file clerk of the Census Bureau who has risen rapidly in his work. Never played baseball, himself, but likes the game.

Lyn Lary—Used to be a tough guy, but has thought better of it. Probably wondering what he will settle down to.

Fred Schulte—He stumps you, but would be a splendid specimen in any kind of a uniform with brass buttons. A strong, silent man.

Cliff Bolton—A left-over sheik from the jazz age and the flapper era. Wonder where he got those shoulders?

Walter Stewart—A fellow from the horsey set with his stylishly gray temples. A breath of Old England. Undoubtedly has done a bit of boating, too.

Jack Redmond—A little, tough guy.

Sammy Holbrook—Going home on leave from a CCC camp. Anyway, the life of the party wherever he may be.

Syd Cohen—Fourth secretary of the Venezuela Legation, or the son of a Mexican revolutionary general.

Leon Petitt—A cowpuncher who wouldn't shoot up the place unless he had good cause.

Johnny Kerr—Jockey's booking agent. Probably used to ride himself until the weight got the best of him.

Al Powell—A rookie trying to make good in the big leagues. Will probably become a cop if he fails.

Nick Altrock—Nick Altrock.

Dempsey Turns Down $50,000 Offered for His New York Cafe

By Jimmy Powers.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Jack Dempsey and his backers turned down Saratoga Tom Luther's $50,000 offer for the ex-champ's beanery today . . . That 40-inch aisle the politicians are building at New York ringsides for themselves and their bagmen has been dubbed "Deadhead's Ditch" by Jack Miley, the word-toyer . . . The fellow who beat Joe Louis twice is about to turn pro. He is Clinton Bridges, colored lefty from Detroit; but the chump has joined up with John Roxborough, Louis' backer . . . There is a well known Broadway bookie breaking rivals by accepting daily doubles bets and paying off up to $300 for $1 . . . They say Primo (Bootsie) Carnera has worked himself up to an all-time, all-American high dudgeon and is going to bust the beezer of the next pest who pokes fun at his puppies. Primo, at heart, is sensitive and shy as a buttercup . . . Don't let on that you know it, but Boxing Commissioner John J. Phelan is a manufacturer of brassieres.

Bobby Jones corresponds with Dan Mackie, Scotch profesional at the Century Club, on intricate problems of the golf swing. Dan received confirmation of his new theory that underspin adds length. He recommends deeper dished clubs . . . Mercury centered balls are the latest fads . . . Gene Sarazen will tell the boys how to pull off "miracle shots," starting Thursday, at a local department store . . . Craig Wood lost the play-off of the P. G. A. at Buffalo, too. Paul Runyan nailed him there . . . The longest officially recorded length of a golf drive, hand or machine driven on test grounds, is 256 yards, according to Saks, the Queens driving range tycoon.

Lou Gehrig, despite his slump, is the game's best batter. He leads both leagues in batting, home runs, runs batted in and total bases, in addition to running his consecutive game streak to 1,504. He's a cinch to lead the Yankee lumbermen again this summer. Cheers from Amsterdam avenue!

Hunk Anderson, Frank Thomas, Jock Sutherland, Dick Harlow and Andy Kerr comprise the faculty of a new superior coaching school opening in Boston June 24 . . . Diz Dean and Frank Frisch are certain to trade left hooks before the summer is out. Frank, instead of praising Diz for winning the pennant, is slapping him with fines and daily lectures . . . James Hendy, the hockey compiler, releases his honor team today. Forward line comprises Frank Boucher, of the Rangers, at center, flanked by Charlie Conacher and Harvey Jackson. Defense men are Ed Shore and Art Coulter with Tiny Thompson in the nets . . . Dazzy Vance will be digging August worms for his Homosassa (Fla.) fishing trips by August, according to our Dodger correspondent . . .

"Thundering cockroaches" is the new nickname for the midget automobile racers. Ted Darley had his right shoe wrenched off as he was catapulted from his somersaulting car in a crash Sunday. Ted was revived by a Fordham Hospital interne 20 minutes later and immediately wanted to know "Who swiped my boot?"

The colored National League has white semipro baseball backers worried. New York Cubans with the stars of the Havana League, will represent Manhattan at Dyckman Oval. The Brooklyn Black Eagles will play at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. Other franchises include the Pittsburgh Crawfords, the Chicago Giants and the Philly Stars . . . Norman (Kid) Elberfeld is now a peaceful citizen at Chattanooga, Tenn., according to our barnstorming George Kenney. The Tobasco Kid is now on the wagon . . . Winged Foot opens a week from Saturday.

Bill Terry Passes Plate.

Bill Terry no longer sings in the choir. He passes the collection plate in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Memphis, on winter Sundays . . . George Harper, former Giant, is road secretary for the El Dorado Club in the Dixie League. George dropped his roll in oil leases . . . Joe Choynski is in Cincy and Johnny Kilbane, fattened into a heavy, teaches boxing in Cleveland public schools . . . George Coyle, Golden Glove champion, fights at the Yonkers K. of C. tonight . . . The flyweight, middleweight and bantamweight divisions have been so dormant not one fan in ten can name the champion of all three!

Chief Little Wolfe's "death hold" is the biggest barney to come down the wrestling pike in years!

Dodgers Face Coppola in Box Today

Pitchers Keep Edge but Hitters Laggard as Result of Rain.

By Shirley Povich.

THE team's hitting, which is the chief recommendation of the Washington ball club in whatever it hopes to accomplish in the pennant race, now only six days away, has supplanted the club's pitching as Manager Bucky Harris' chief source of worry.

Harris' high expectations of the club's hitting power have wilted considerably, coincidentally with the damp spell which has seen the Nats play only four games since breaking camp at Biloxi 12 days ago. They haven't seen a pitched ball in the last three days. On their last occasion at bat, they made only five hits in 11 innings. Summed up, the team is woefully lacking in batting practice.

His pitchers have maintained a certain edge as a result of workouts under the stands during the rainy weather, but Harris is genuinely concerned over the club's batting. With his pitchers a question mark at best, the Nats' manager was relying upon what he believes to be a superior offensive to carry the club through the early days of the pennant race.

Dodgers Visit Today.

Stymied again by rain yesterday, the Nats were forced to forego their scheduled game with the Boston Braves, who quit the city without donning a uniform. Today, upon the promise of fair weather, the Washington Club meets the Brooklyon Dodgers, led by Casey Stengel, at Griffith Stadium.

Harris today will be making his third consecutive attempt to test Henry Coppola, his rookie sensation, under fire against big league opposition. Originally scheduled to face the Cubs in Chicago, Coppola's debut was postponed by cold weather until yesterday when it suffered a further delay when the game with the Braves was rained out.

With most of his pitchers laggard in training, Harris is eager to determine to what extent he may rely upon Coppola and thus the young Italian's low, fast fall and his newly developed curve will be sent against the Dodgers.

The 1935 spring training campaign has been the club's most costly in history as a result of the continual rain. Their failure to play six of their ten scheduled games en route north, with the cold weather in Chicago reducing the single game's attendance to 2,000, compared to the 10,000 who saw the two games there last year, was a blow to the Nats' exchequer.

On top of the $15,000 expense entailed in training the club at Biloxi, the Nats operated at an approximate $3,000 loss on their barnstorming trip which normally shows a profit of from $7,000 to $10,000.

The club's bad run of financial luck continued after its arrival in Washington where the Braves had been scheduled. At the time the game was arranged, it did not loom as a financial bonanza, but with Babe Ruth joining the Boston club and showing here for the first time in a National League uniform, the contest was calculated to restore to the Nats a goodly portion of their training output.

Bostwick Tells Of Golden Miller

Grand National Choice Was Sore, Ace Rider Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—George H. (Pete) Bostwick, amateur jockey of Westbury, Long Island, who was spilled by his horse, Castle Irwell, in the last quarter of the Grand National at Aintree, arrived on the Majestic today with Mrs. Bostwick and their son, George H. Bostwick, jr.

The Grand National favorite, Golden Miller, was "sore" on the day of the race, Bostwick said. He saw him work out the day before and said it seemed to him the horse was moving short.

"I know there has been a lot of controversy about the spill Golden Miller took, but I saw the fall. Golden Miller tried to refuse the jump and then went straight up in the air, throwing his rider," Bostwick said. "There was nothing to it except that the horse was definitely not right. The very next day I saw him do the same thing."

Six Ball Teams Seek To Join Junior League

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 9.—Six teams have expressed a desire to take berths in a junior baseball league during the 1935 season, according to an announcement by Pershing Rohrer. The interested clubs are the Cumberland Dragons, Piedmont American Legion, Mount Savage Cinder Tips, Hyndman Eagles, Legionnaires and Cumberland Robins.

S. C. and V. M. I. Added To Richmond Grid List

Richmond, Va., April 9 (AP).—South Carolina and V. M. I. have been placed on the University of Richmond's 1936 football schedule, Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite announced today. Both teams will be met here, the Keydets on October 24 and the Gamecocks on November 7.

Girl Swimmers Seek A.A.U. Titles

75 Mermaids Compete at Chicago Tonight.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 9.—Some of the outstanding rivalries in sport will be resumed in the Lake Shore Athletic Club pool starting tomorrow night when 75 of the Nation's outstanding mermaids cut through the waves in competition for national A. A. U. championships.

Every important titleholder is entered in the three-day meet which will be enlivened with record-breaking attacks by Jack Medica, Seattle's human torpedo, and Adolph Kiefer, 16-year-old Chicago high school boy. Medica, distance free style champion, will try to smash records in 300-yard and 300-meter events, while Kiefer will try to better world marks in the 400-meter and 500-yard backstroke events.

Babe to Face Hubbell in Opener

Terry Grooms Ace for Debut in Boston; 40,000 Expected.

By the United Press.

BOSTON, April 9.—Persons with a sense of the fitness of things, like Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants, are leaving no stone unturned in their plans for giving Babe Ruth a rousing reception into the National League.

The Giants are slated to help the Boston Braves, Ruth's new sponsors, open the 1935 baseball season here next Tuesday afternoon, and whom do you suppose Terry has been grooming as his starting pitcher?

Unless advices from New York are cockeyed, it's no one but Carl ("Screw-Ball") Hubbell, lean little southpaw remembered for such classics as the whiffings, one after another, of Lou Gehrig, the Babe and Jimmy Foxx in the first inning of last year's all-star game.

40,000 Fans Expected.

With a record opening-day crowd of some 40,000 (estimated) in the stands, only Dizzy Dean could imagine a better setting. It should please everyone but the Bambino himself, whose big bat has been missing on several cylinders and who may have read that the Hubbell screw-ball is looking more elusive than ever.

Hub fans who greeted news of the Ruth deal enthusiastically late last February grew disheartened at the Babe's Florida performance, but have perked up as a result of the two long home runs he clouted at Newark Sunday. They're hoping his old competitive spirit is being renewed with approach of the regular season and that he'll continue to perform better in the cooler North.

Ruth's Southern showing was certainly nothing to enthuse about. In 18 games he got 10 hits in 44 trips for an average of something like .227. He donned a Braves uniform March 4 and it wasn't until a month later, on April 4 against Southern Teachers College at Savannah, that he drove out his first home run. He played four straight games before making his first outfield putout, and didn't click as a first-base replacement for Holdout Baxter Jordan, now in the fold.

Still a Drawing Card.

There is a strong feeling that, whatever his hitting, the Babe will be quite a liability in the Braves' home outfield, one of the roomiest in the circuit.

But there is every evidence to indicate that Ruth remains enough of a drawing card to prove the Braves' investment a sound one. He drew 50,000 fans to the Braves' exhibition games, and is expected to attract as many more to the three Braves-Red Sox "city championship" games opening here Friday. If Ruth can help his mates upset the stingy Hubbell in Tuesday's packed opener, it might send the club off to a flying start and onto the road back to prosperity.

Gar Wood Plans New Record Run

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., April 9.—Gar Wood held the stop watch on Miss America X in a one-way run over the measured mile today and reported her unofficial speed as 123.38 statute miles an hour.

As mechanics began the two-day task of shortening the speedster's step, Wood announced he would again attack his own world motor boat speed record of 124.91 miles an hour on an official two-way run late this week.

6 Clubs Compete In Valley League

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 9.—Valley League directors will meet at Culpeper tomorrow night to draft a schedule, adopt player regulations, and work out plans for the opening of the season around June 1.

The league is planning to go ahead with six clubs—the Heurich Brewers, of Washington, a traveling entry; Charlottesville, Orange, Front Royal, Culpeper and Harrisonburg—since Staunton and Waynesboro have decided to remain in the Augusta League.

The clubs will play three or perhaps four games a week under present plans. President George Holtzman and a committee are busy drafting a schedule.

Browns Pound Dizzy Dean For 13 Hits

Cards Lose 6-5 Decision; Hubbell, Harder in 1-1 Draw Duel.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—Rogers Hornsby's renovated Browns landed on Dizzy Dean for 13 hits today and took the second game of a city series from the world champion Cardinals, 6 to 5.

Buck Newsom, Brown hurler, in the ninth was relieved by Coffman, who stopped a final-inning Cardinal rally that netted three runs.

Pepper Brown first baseman, opened the scoring in the second frame, reaching home on Bell's single. Lowering skies kept the crowd to 1,200.

Giants, Tribe Deadlock.

Kingsport, Tenn., April 10 (AP).—After the New York Giants and Cleveland Indians had battled on even terms through 11 innings, Umpire "Steamboat" Johnson decided it was too cold to play and called today's game with the teams deadlocked at 1 all.

Each team made seven hits with the Indians getting their run off Carl Hubbell, who pitched nine innings, in the fourth on successive doubles by Galatzer and Trosky. The Giants went scoreless until the eighth. Gus Mancuso got a ground rule double on a drive that bounded into the right field stands and Dick Bartell followed with a single off Mel Harder.

Rookie's Homer Wins.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 9 (AP).—Thanks to a first-inning home run by Rookie Mike Farrotto, the Brooklyn Dodgers managed to defeat the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, 1 to 0, today.

Farrotto, who held down Len Koenecke's position in the outfield for the first six innings and then replaced Sam Leslie at first base, also got a single for two of the Dodgers' six hits, but his homer was the deciding factor.

U. S. Open at Oakmont Is Sarazen's Objective

By Gene Sarazen

Written for the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—My next objective this year is the United States Open championship, not only because it carries with it the greatest competitive honors in golf, but because it will be played over the toughest course in America—the Oakmont Club, near Pittsburgh.

The last time the championship was held there, in 1927, I took an 80 on one round and finished one stroke behind Harry Cooper and Tommy Armour, who met in the play-off. They finished with 301 each. I had 302.

I think it will take at least 296 to win the tournament this June, despite the fact some of the hazards have been increased. The course now measures around 7,100 yards and has 200 traps. I base this prediction on a belief that the pace is much faster now among the professionals than it was eight years ago. There are more top-notch performers. Equipment has been substantially improved. Scores are lower in big-league tournament competition now than they have ever been.

I intend to go into real training for the open. I expect to visit Oakmont in May, at least a month before the championship, to get a first-hand idea of the changes. Meanwhile I will spend most of my time on my farm at Brookfield Center, Conn.

My victory at Augusta meant more to me than any I have gained, outside of an open championship. In the first place I wasn't sure I could get back "on" my game. I didn't go so well last year. Now I feel confident.

I was lucky to hit the greatest shot of my life down there. I have had three holes-in-one but that two on the par-five fifteenth, with a drive and No. 4 wood, was the first "double eagle" of my career. It was just one of those things but it's golf. If you miss, it's hard luck, but if it rolls into the cup it's a break.

Explains Jones' Failure.

I have been asked by a lot of people as to the reason for Bobby Jones' failure to score better at Augusta. In my opinion, the answer is not alone the fact he has lost his old confidence. There is no doubt he is a bit rusty from lack of competition, but I think it is also a fact that the scoring pace now is faster than it was when he was in his prime. In other words, since he retired in 1930, the professionals have made big forward strides and taken advantage of the developments calculated to improve their play.

Jones knows all there is to know about the mechanics of golf but he no longer concentrates on his game. He has other interests, not alone his family and his business, but he devotes much of his recreational time to hunting, shooting and tennis. He no longer thinks in terms of competitive golf when he steps up to the tee. And when he has a difficult putt to make, he quickly shows an uncertainty that never was apparent in the Jones who won 13 national championships.

Nevertheless the fact Jones plays at Augusta—and, I believe, intends to play in the tournament each spring—will continue to attract wide public interest and influence many players to accept invitations. He is still a great figure in golf. But he can not hope to give the professionals a battle unless he gets down to some serious training or plays more often in fast company.

It may be just a coincidence, but I recall that Jones won the tournament at Augusta before starting his "grand slam" sweep of 1930. I hope it is a good omen for me. Whether or not I win at Oakmont, I intend to sail immediately afterward for England to play in the British Open at Muirfield.

Cards Look to Dean, Says Hopeful Rickey

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—The depleted pitching staff of the championship St. Louis Cardinals, toward which the baseball world is cocking a dubious eye, is no worry to Branch Rickey, vice president of the club, if his star performer, Dizzy Dean, behaves himself.

Before leaving today for the new Cardinal farm at Asheville, N. C., Rickey denied having any deals on tap, but admitted he wouldn't turn down a chance to add an experienced hurler.

"Of course I'd like to strengthen our pitching staff," he replied, when asked if he planned replacing Pat Malone, sold to the New York Yankees.

"However, I expect much of the young pitchers, and I consider the staff strong enough the way it is. I see no reason why Jess Haynes should not win 20 games this year. Why not? His arm is as strong as ever."

Rickey indicated he regarded Dizzy, the club bad boy, as his chief mainstay.

"I still consider Dizzy Dean the key man of the staff. If he is a gentlemanly fellow and attends to the business of pitching and winning, we can get another pennant.

"But I can not say that I am overcome with a feeling of confidence where he is concerned. But I am hopeful."

76 Card Leads Girl Golfers At Pinehurst

Miss Glutting Again Wins Medal in North and South Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 9.—For the second successive year, Charlotte Glutting, of East Orange, N. J., won the qualifying medal in the North and South Women's Golf Championship today, scoring a 38-38—76, 5 above men's par for the No. 3 course. Last year she carded a 78 and then went on to win the title.

But for 6s on the first two par 4 holes, Miss Glutting might have broken Mauren Orcutt's course record of 73. Off to such a poor start, she settled down, played the next four holes in par, then got two birdies. A bogey 5 on the ninth put her out in 38.

Another 38 on the home stretch gave her a five-stroke lead over Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., and Estelle Lawson, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Helen Waring, State champion, had second place within her grasp but, needing a 4 on the home hole for an 80, slumped to take 8.

Scores as high as 94 made the championship test. Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, of Baltimore, seven times holder of the Maryland State title, barely got in. Mrs. Morrow had 44 out, but slumped badly on the last three holes to tie Mrs. S. F. Little, of Fort Bragg, N. C.

East Boston Track Granted Race Dates

By the United Press.

Boston, April 9.—The Massachusetts Racing Commission late today granted a license to the Eastern Racing Association for a horse racing track at Suffolk Downs, East Boston, and at the same time awarded it a 44-day season extending from June 29 to August 10.

The commission did not announce whether it would authorize another track for the 29 other days on which racing could be held under the Massachusetts law.

To Get Bout Of Maxes Rome Likely

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy hopes to stage the Maxie Baer-Max Schmeling heavyweight title fight in Rome on August 17, according to venerable Charlie Harvey, negotiator, who arrived today from Europe on the liner Ile de France.

And that is the big reason why the German promoter, Walter Rothenburg, is offering Baer the fabulous guarantee of $300,000, as provided for in the unsigned contract brought over by Harvey. Rothenburg would promote the bout, which would be subsidized by Mussolini and the Fascist government.

Harvey discounted the possibility of the bout being staged in any other European city, although admitting that it would draw huge gates in London or Hamburg. "There's that 22 per cent tax in England," Harvey said. "And Baer wouldn't fight in Germany."

Hamas Also Returns.

The thin, bent man with the little gray handle-bar mustache and cane sat in the liner's grand salon and told of the $300,000 guarantee—"which will really amount to about $400,000 for both fighters"—and of the Hamburg battle last month between his boxer, Steve Hamas, and Schmeling. Hamas and his wife, Kathryn, and Steve's trainer, Al Thomas, returned with Harvey.

"By jimminy, goodness me!" exclaimed 70-year-old Harvey, veteran of 53 years in the fight game. "This fellow Rothenburg is a man of more imagination than was Tex Rickard. He has peddled this fight around Europe, and he has sold the idea to Mussolini. No syndicate in America can offer a guarantee of $300,000 to Baer, and I know of no backers in any other country outside of Italy who would do it. Sure Rothenburg is offering $300,000. Look at this contract which I want Baer and his manager, Ancil Hoffman, to sign."

The contract, written in German—with clauses in English—provides for a 15-round bout for the title between Baer and Schmeling, somewhere in Europe on August 17, with postponement protection until September 17.

Choice of Payments.

The contract gave Baer and Hoffman a choice of two agreements as to payment of the $300,000. (1) A sum of $150,000 in United States money would be deposited to the account of Baer and Hoffman in a bank of their selection four weeks before the date of the fight, and the remaining $150,000 similarly would be deposited ten days before the bout. Harvey understood that these sums would be held in escrow by the bank until after Baer had gone through with the bout. Agreement (2) provided for an advance payment of $30,000—$15,000 before Baer sails for Europe and $15,000 when he arrives in Europe. The remaining $270,000 will be paid after the bout.

The contract provides that "Baer must be in Europe on or before July 17." This is one month before the date of the bout and it is the "kicker" in agreement (1). It would force the champion to be in Europe befor the first $150,000 was deposited to his account. It is doubtful if shrewd Hoffman would agree to this, and even more doubtful if he would agree to point (2).

Shortly after Schmeling handed Hamas the "terrible" beating at Hamburg, Rothenburg, who promoted the bout, made Harvey, his American representative in the title-scrap negotiations. "And I'm not getting a dime out of it. But it may lead to big things for me later."

Harvey admitted that Hamas was "almost slaughtered" by Schmeling at Hamburg. "Steve was in there fighting with a bum left arm, his best weapon against a fighter like Schmeling. He had injured his elbow a week before in training. But we thought it the sporting thing to go through with the fight."

School for Deaf Nine Opens Against Romney

Daily Double Mutuel Is $28.70

Workman Pilots Two Winners; Upset to Gifted Lady, $35.

By Walter Haight.

THE Weather Man dug deep in his files to pull out one of the worst racing days ever encountered in Maryland, but he failed to chill the enthusiasm of a crowd of some 6,000. The customers went for the daily double in their usual big way, playing more than $12,000 into the combination bet, which was divided into the lots of $28.70 and passed over the counters to the small army that backed the chances of Alwintour, in the first race, and Venetian, in the second.

The best race on the featureless program was the fourth, a skid of 6 furlongs for the older class "C" sprinters. This test gave the favorite players one of their several chances to cheer during the afternoon. Sang Froid, a representative of the Howe Stable, splashed through the muck of the stretch to take a head decision from Miss Careful, with Slipper King a length and a half away.

Workman Rides Two.

The day saw Sonny Workman, the Capital jockey, who rode sensationally on the West Coast last winter, score a "saddle double" with horses belonging to Robert Robertson, father of Alfred Robertson, Workman's co-worker and buddy. Workman brought Venetian and Atmosphere, a pair of heavily-played horses, to the wire in excellent fashion.

Bobby Merritt rode Sang Froid to victory in the outstanding race. Silvio Coucci, who had the leg up on Miss Careful, gave the filly a lot of help, but Sang Froid layed just off her pace and when Merritt gave the signal in the stretch, it was all over but the shouting. Slipper King, far out of it most of the way, closed determinedly for the show money. Sang Froid was an even-money betting proposition and won his second race of the meeting.

Trueman Horse Wins.

The Elmer Truemans, of Washington, put over their first winner of the meeting in the first race when Alwintour went to the front in the stretch to defeat a field of 11 ordinary sprinters. Bright Don, the favorite, was second, and Fan, an outsider, was third. Vanda Cerulea cut out a fast pace, but folded at the eighth pole and it was anybody's race from there in. R. Booker, a diminutive colored boy, put up a swell ride on the winner which paid a $10.60 mutuel. The defeat of Bright Don saw the destruction of many daily double combinations.

Parade Girl, a chip off the old block which is Display, showed some of her daddy's qualities in taking the second race. Well back in the field and apparently beaten, Parade Girl rushed through the stretch to collar and defeat Patsey Begone some 20 yards from the wire.

Venetian Triumphs.

Venetian, the property of Robert Robertson, father of Jockey Albert Robertson, came from behind to score an easy victory in the third race over the 6-furlong course. Sonny Workman, the Washington jockey, had the mount, and he brought Venetian up on the outside with a rush that Mad Beth, the second horse, could not match. Tristrap, a Charles Town sprinter, and 152-to-1 shot, was a nose away from place money. The winner was heavily played at a $5.80 mutuel.

Gifted Lady Surprises.

Gifted Lady suddenly took a new lease on life in the fifth race. The filly, which has been running as if she were in a trance, uncorked a brand of speed that had her rivals wallowing in the slop behind her for virtually the entire mile and 70 yards. Her margin of victory was four lengths and her price $35.80. Inferno Lad, the tip in the race, just lasted to head Standout for the place. Captain Jerry quit early in the role of favorite.

Robert Robertson's Atmosphere won the sixth event in easy fashion to give his stable and Jockey Workman a double and the form players another success. The gelding, coming back off a splendid race, took an early lead and increased it to register by two lengths over the improved Cousin George, which raced well up all the way. Repeal was a distanced third. Atmosphere paid $4.40.

Popo, $3.30, won the last event by four lengths from Darkling, with Old Judge third.

DEAR AL, Bowie Race Track, April 10.

I had the benefit of some of the best rooting of Maryland season yesterday, but three winners was the best I could squeeze out of the program. Clocker Mike, Trainer Joe and Daily Double Dan almost wrecked the press box trying to get some of the others home. I'm informed that Havre de Grace will not have a daily double. Manager Burke of that plant believes that the play on the combination bet will fall off due to short prices. However, I disagree. The play yesterday topped the $12,000 mark, as compared to some $11,000 on opening day. Only fair mutuels have prevailed for the past few days, but the fact that those possible $1,500 and $1,200 combinations are displayed is going to keep the customers stepping up to the windows and laying their dough on the line with a lot of hope. In some ways, the "double" is costly to the track. It forces the employing of additional ticket sellers and it keeps a large amount of money out of action on the second race. But it does serve to draw people to the track. Down at Miami the dog tracks hire Vincent Lopez and other star entertainers to lure the crowds which are admitted for tax money. If the people come, they play and it's the play that makes or breaks the race tracks. BILL.

First race—Boocord has a pretty fair race to his credit and appears to be the best of a very poor lot. The time for this race should border on that of a 4-mile steeplechase. Happy Easter has shown a liking for the track and could be uncomfortably close. Veritas for the show out.

Second race—Cold Shoulder, a derby candidate from the Vanderbilt barn, turned in a whale of an effort here last week. Came with a rush in the stretch. Looks like an even-money shot in this company. Gum, a stablemate, is said to be promising. Sula and Royal Command to complete the money bracket.

Third race—Playful Tour will have Sonny Workman to do the booting and I expect the combination to take the measure of Deliberate. The latter is sharp, however. John Tio, bred for the mud, is a possible surprise.

Fourth race—Winter Sport made a show of a field earlier in the meeting and figures to do a lot of running in this sprint. Sea Biscuit closed a lot of ground to be second last out after being forced back just after the break. Alert handling would make this one a keen factor. Lemont was a busy fellow in Florida and is speedy.

Fifth race—Alladin's Dream is a powerful horse right now and one that will give no quarter in a field of this sort. I'm depending upon Pollard for some good riding. Ilchester is hard to beat on a heavy track and will be a keen factor. Old Field for the show and a possible upset.

Sixth race — Black Falcon isn't much of a horse but this opposition is the cheapest to show here since the meeting opened. Cherokee Sal for the place and Maddening to show. The last named carries only 100 pounds and might take it all.

Seventh race—Pencader will have Georgia Watson to do the riding and a soft track to ease those ailing dogs. Boocap and Idle Flirt should take care of the others.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALWINTOUR, $10.60, $3.50, $2.80; BRIGHT DON, $3.00, $2.50; FAN, $3.50.

ALWINTOUR, away quickly but outrun for the first half-mile, moved to the pacemaker readily when placed to a drive, took command entering the home stretch, then held on resolutely to stall off BRIGHT DON. Latter bettered his position on the inside when called on and was under extreme pressure at the end. FAN, squeezed back soon after the start, worked her way up steadily when finding racing room and was going the strongest at the finish. LUCKY TURN, worried up steadily and showed good energy in the closing drive. ABERCROMBIE closed steadily after slow beginning. VANDA CERULEA showed speed for a half-mile and then stopped.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old maiden fillies. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:11. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PARADE GIRL, $7.80, $4.10; PATSEY BEGONE, $13.90, $4.20; FESTOON, $2.40.

PARADE GIRL, forced to race on the outside, came determinedly after reaching the home stretch and wore the leaders down to get up nearing the finish. PATSEY BEGONE moved clear during the opening furlong, saved ground, and continued with good courage when challenged. FESTOON, keen factor from the start, continued gamely under punishment during the closing furlongs. EVENING HOUR was away quickly, but could not stay with the leaders after the first sixteenth. VANGUA TEA played high and tired from his outside position to hold a forward position early, but flattened out during the last quarter-mile. SUMAC was outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:07. Off at 2:44. Winner, R. Robertson's ch. h. (5), by Colonel Vannie—Waterfall. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49, 1:15 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VENETIAN, $5.80, $3.20, $2.60; MAD BETH, $3.00, $2.70; TRISTRAP, $17.60.

VENETIAN, away nicely but outrun for the first half-mile, swung wide when approaching the leaders, closed fast when straightened into the home stretch and came on smartly after shaking off the leaders. MAD BETH raced in near pursuit of CLEAR KNIGHT in the early running, moved up stoutly when reaching the home stretch, but could not withstand the winner after getting to the front between calls in the stretch drive. TRISTRAP raced in the thick of contention and held on well in the closing drive. SMEAR permitted to drop far out of contention, finished with a belated rush in the last three-sixteenths. ACCOLADE was prominent in the early racing. FIELD GOAL closed a good gap. CLEAR KNIGHT stopped badly after reaching the home stretch. ALMADEL, JR., was never a factor.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $28.70.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Graded Handicap. Class "C." For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:14. Off at 4:15. Winner, Howe Stable's b. g. (5), by Kai Sang—Saturday. Trained by P. M. Walker. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49 1-5, 1:15.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SANG FROID, $4.00, $2.60, $2.30; MISS CAREFUL, $3.30, $3.00; SLIPPER KING, $4.60.

SANG FROID, rated within striking distance of the leaders and kept on the outside, challenged strongly when reaching the home stretch, closed with good courage and was up in the last 20 yards. MISS CAREFUL showed good speed in the early racing to dispose of CHIRAC, but saved ground where the footing was firm, and held on with excellent courage in the closing drive. SLIPPER KING weak strongly from the beginning and was making up ground on the first two during the final drive.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:44. Off at 4:45. Winner, H. Massey's ch. f. (3), by Bright Knight—Markiluna. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:17 2-5, 1:44 2-5, 1:50 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GIFTED LADY, $35.80, $15.10, $8.80; INFERNO LAD, $3.40, $4.80; STANDOUT, $4.10.

GIFTED LADY, sprinted into a commanding lead when straightened into the back stretch, increased her advantage at the stretch turn, then had enough in reserve to stall off INFERNO LAD. Latter stalked steadily when placed to a drive, but could not menace the winner when the real issue came. STANDOUT saved ground in the late stages and closed with good courage. FLAT ROCK closed stoutly after being outrun early. ZEMBLA gained slowly in the last half-mile.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:15. Off at 5:21. Winner, R. Robertson's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ATMOSPHERE, $4.40, $2.90, $2.40; COUSIN GEORGE, $6.00, $2.20; REPEAL, $2.20.

ATMOSPHERE, steadied close up with SCOTTY DON for the first six furlongs, took command at his leisure when midway of the final turn and, under nice handling, held COUSIN GEORGE safe. Latter went in his best form from the beginning, secured racing room on the inside to enter contention, then came with good energy for the closing test. REPEAL bettered his position on the outside until entering contention, but could not threaten during the stretch stages. BRAINS went forwardly for six furlongs, then failed to rally. CABOCHON could not threaten at any part of the journey.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:47. Off at 5:51½. Winner, L. Haymaker's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POPO, $3.30, $3.70, $3.30; DARKLING, $7.30, $4.40; OLD JUDGE, $7.20.

POPO outran his field to the first turn, was rated in front until reaching the home stretch, was shaken up and held DARKLING safe. Latter secured racing room on the inside when midway of the back stretch, responded nicely after entering contention, but could not menace the winner in the final drive. OLD JUDGE worked his way up on the outside, was placed to punishment, and closed gamely. GRAINGER was under stout urging and had no mishaps. FLYING DERE could not threaten when hard ridden. REYOMAR was used up in the early racing.

Belle Haven Crowds Golf Program

Schedule Announced at Alexandria Starts Off With Team Match.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, April 9.—Charles Rollins, golf chairman at Belle Haven Country Club, announces an extensive spring and summer program for the club, beginning with a team match with the Quantico Marine team, and ending with the club championship September 21.

From April 13, every week-end is filled with some form of competition, including the weekly sweepstakes, bi-State team competition, Belle Haven Bowl matches, and the club championship.

The team will also probably schedule several team matches with nearby clubs, and a ladies' tournament is being planned for June.

Crowded Schedule Announced.

The complete schedule: April 13, team match with Quantico Marine Club; April 20, Sweepstakes, April 27, Sweepstakes; May 4, Open; May 12, Return Match with Quantico Marine Club; May 18, Bi-State Association matches at Winchester; May 25, Sweepstakes; May 30-31, Decoration Day events, qualifying round for Belle Haven Bowl.

June 1, Sweepstakes; June 2-5, first round match play, 18 holes; June 6-8, second round match play, 18 holes; June 9-14, semifinal match play, 18 holes; June 15-16, finals, Belle Haven Bowl, 36 holes; June 22-27, ladies' tournament; June 29, bi-State matches at Belle Haven.

July 4, special events; July 11, 12, 13, qualifying rounds Gazette Trophy, 18 holes; July 14-17, first round Gazette Trophy; July 18-20, second round Gazette Trophy; July 18-20, Bi-State matches at Purcellville; July 21-26, third round Gazette Trophy; July 27-28, final round Gazette Trophy.

August 30-September 6, qualifying rounds club championship. September 7, begin match play for championship; September 9-12, second round club championship; September 13-15, third round club championship; President's Cup, 36 holes; September 21-22, final rounds for club championship, 36 holes.

Mexican Wants Bout.

Petey Sarron, national ranking featherweight boxer who resides here, has been offered a bout with Baby Arizmendi, Mexican champion, to take place in Mexico City in May. It is understood that Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager, is seriously considering the offer.

Episcopal High School's athletes are facing a busy week with two baseball games, a track meet, and two tennis matches scheduled, all to be contested at Episcopal.

The baseball team, after having its opening game delayed twice by rain, is scheduled to get under way tomorrow afternoon, entertaining Washington & Lee High School.

On Saturday Tech High School of Washington comes to Hoxton Field, and next Wednesday a contest is slated with the Alexandria High School seconds. Either Gravatt or Moore will probably be Coach Powell's mound selection for the opening game.

Maroons Ready for Grind.

The Maroon and Black runners make their debut Friday afternoon in a dual meet with Eastern High School. Candidates for the team have been working out for several weeks under Coach Tomkins and apparently are ready for the stiff schedule. To date the most outstanding performers have been Capt. Flick Hoxton in the 440, Fleming in the javelin, Herbert in the high jump and Arthur Bryant in the weight events. These four represented Episcopal in the Columbia interscholastics last month and all were impressive.

Episcopal's crack tennis aggregation is scheduled to meet Eastern tomorrow afternoon and the Johns Hopkins University freshman team on Saturday, but it is unlikely that the courts will be dry enough for play tomorrow. Since winning the opening match from Tech High, 9 to 0, the Episcopal netmen have kept indoors because of the unusually bad weather.

Alexandria High School's baseball team entertains Eastern, District of Columbia interhigh champs, Thursday afternoon at Baggett's Stadium in the feature scholastic attraction of the week. Eddie Hammersly, ace right-hander, will go to the mound for the Twins in their attempt to register their second successive victory over a Washington high school.

Amateur Boxers Seek U. S. Titles in Tourney Starting Today

Local Quartet To Compete At St. Louis

58 Cities Represented by 160 Fighters; Louis Is Topic of Debates.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—A larger field tonight was assured for the three-day National Amateur Athletic Union boxing tournament which starts here tomorrow.

Definite word has been received that 160 athletes from 58 cities in virtually all parts of the Nation and Hawaii would be on hand.

The National Capital will be represented for the first time with a squad of four men ranging in weight from bantam to welterweights. The most promising of these, according to advance reports, is Lou Gevinson, broad-shouldered Jewish lad seeking the 126-pound championship. The boy has a most impressive record and is expected to make a good showing.

His teammates are Eddie Saugstedt, 118-pounds; Willie Feary, 135, and Steve Thompson, 147. They represent the Olympic A. C.

Only one of the eight 1934 champions, Stanley Evans, Detroit Negro heavyweight, will exhibit his wares and he will fight in the light heavyweight class. Conspicuously missing is a fellow townsman, lithe, dusky-skinned Joe Louis, who, as a virtual unknown last year, struck terror to the hearts of other light heavyweights.

Louis Leading Contender.

Today as hopeful coaches shepherded determined novices from hotel to gymnasium the name of Louis, the man with dynamite in either glove, was on many lips.

The rough diamonds from which sparkling fighters are made are not all averse to accepting tainted professional pay. Besides Louis, three other 1934 champions are now fighting for money. They are Fred Apostoli, middleweight and Norbert Meehan, lightweight, both of San Francisco, and Edwin Waling, Detroit featherweight.

Predictions of success for the various competitive contingents varied greatly tonight, as most of the boxers are untried in fast company.

Unusually strong teams are entered from Fort Benning, Ga.; Detroit, San Francisco, Boston and Cleveland. The Chicago district, which last year won both the bantamweight and flyweight titles, will not be represented.

Last year 154 contestants were entered in the tournament. Benny Kessler, who directed the 1934 show and is again in charge, said tonight he believed the current tourney will be the largest ever held.

The great number of contestants will make it necessary to fight in two rings simultaneously so that the tournament may be completed in three nights.

Long distance traveling honors go to the seven-man team from Honolulu, which arrived Saturday. The islanders are principally of Japanese origin, but one man from the United States Navy is included.

Jr. Golden Gloves Bouts April 22-26

Boys Under 16 Eligible for A. A. U. Event.

Dates of April 22-26, inclusive, have been assigned the District A. A. U. Junior Golden Gloves championship, James A. Sullivan, advisory chairman, announced last night.

The tournament entries will close on April 20 at the Boys' Club of Washington. No entry blank is required, but a parental release must be signed by the parent or guardian. "Parental Release" slips will be available this Friday.

All boys under 16 who have been duly registered with the District A. A. U. are eligible.

There will be competition in the 60, 70, 80, 90, 100, 110, 120, 130-pound classes, and a special team trophy will be awarded by the Junior Board of Commerce.

W. A. Mulligan, Billy Reed, Morris Fox, Emmett Kitchen, Jack Stapleton and Charlie Reynolds serve on the committee with Sullivan.

Elkins Franklin Heads Prep Basketball Team

Elkins Franklin, 18-year-old senior from St. Louis, was elected captain of the Georgetown Prep basketball team for the 1935-36 season yesterday. Franklin was one of the outstanding guards in prep school basket ball locally last year. He will have only one other regular member of this season's team available next season. Bob O'Shaughnessy, forward, is returning to school.

Lunn, D. C. Boy, Stroke Behind 74 of Medalist

Whit Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 9 (AP).—Sloshing over a rain-soaked course, Dan Topping, of Greenwich, Conn., defending titlist, today led the field in the qualifying round of the seventh annual Mason and Dixie Golf Tourney.

Topping, with a 36-38—74 for the 36 holes, was a step ahead of Dick Lunn, of Washington, who turned in 36-39—75.

Millers Meet Tonight.

Cavaliers Train To Meet Michigan

Get In Only Practice of Week Due to Rain.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., April 9.—The University of Virginia baseball team had its first practice in a week this afternoon preparatory to meeting Michigan tomorrow.

The Cavaliers have had two games and all but one practice rained out since defeating Vermont April 1, 4-0.

With Capt. Orlin Rogers pitching, the Cavalier nine will include five veterans and four of last season's freshmen.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 9.—The Chicago White Sox took another fall out of the Pittsburgh Pirates here this afternoon, humbling the National Leaguers, 12 to 9, in a free-batting fracas that saw 32 hits rapped out.

The victory put the Chicagoans one up on their barnstorming mates in their cross-country series which now stands 9 to 8 in favor of the American Leaguers.

Al Simmons, who starts hitting harder as the season opener nears, connected for five wallops today as his mates bombarded Birkofer and Osborne for 19 hits.

Ball Team Practices Indoors for Game Here

Chestertown, Md., April 9 (AP).—The Washington College baseball team, hampered in practice for several days by bad weather, worked indoors again today preparing to meet Georgetown in Washington Thursday and Maryland here Saturday in the first home game of the season.

Coach J. Tom Kibler, in addition to supervising the varsity, has taken over the freshmen and has been considerably encouraged at the showing made by several of the first-year men. Fountain, Compton and Anderson, pitchers; Huffman, catcher, and Evans, Bilancioni and Berry, infielders, have shown especial promise.

Eastern Nine Problem to Guyon

Coach Has 100 Candidates but Few Drills; Due to Play Alexandria.

THIS is the day before Eastern High should start its baseball season but Eastern's ball team, inter-high champions in 1934, this balmy spring morning is solely imaginary. In fact, it was so imaginary yesterday that Coach Chief Charlie Guyon was able to do little more than give the vaguest sort of hazy conception of who would meet Alexandria High tomorrow or why.

The Eastern squad has toiled through a preseason practice period which has amounted to all of two days. This long training grind has only served to confuse the situation nicely. Since over 100 candidates turned out for the team, with only one regular among them, the task of picking nine starters assumed all the proportions of a lifetime job.

But Coach Guyon was making creditable headway until the elements took a hand and ended his efforts. Consequently, the only man certain of being numbered in the starting line-up is Joe Sullivan, last year's all-high pitcher.

"By golly, I dunno," said the chief. "I dunno who'll play. I dunno a thing. By golly, I think I'll put all the names in a hat and play 'em in that order until they've shown me how good they are. We had no chance to get out. I can't tell who will play what."

Eastern was originally scheduled to open the season yesterday against Mount St. Joseph's in Baltimore but a hangover from Monday's rains had the fields there in bad condition.

Ross Is Favored To Keep Title At Seattle

Capacity Crowd Attending Junior Welterweight Championship Go.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, April 9.—Eyes of the boxing world were focused here tonight, where Barney Ross, of Chicago, world lightweight and junior welterweight champion, was risking his latter crown against Henry Woods, Yakima (Wash.) Negro, in a 12-round battle.

Pacific Northwest boxing fans flocked to the Civic Auditorium at an early hour, and a capacity crowd of 9,000 was expected for the first world title bout in Seattle. Two thousand general admission seats were placed on sale at 6 p. m., two and one-half hours before the preliminary events started.

Ross and Woods were scheduled to enter the ring at about 10, with the champion a heavy favorite, but with the Negro's supporters giving him at least a chance to go the full route.

Woods is the first Negro Ross has ever met.

The 20-year-old Yakima lad is the Washington State lightweight champion and a knockout artist, and an upset was not impossible in the event he connected with his blasting right.

In 69 battles the Negro has scored 32 knockouts. He won 28 bouts by decision and fought seven draws. The other two he lost on technical knockouts to Cecil Payne, of Louisville.

Although the junior welterweight limit is 140 pounds, both boxers scaled close to the lightweight class when they were weighed in this afternoon. Woods held three-quarters of a pound advantage, tipping the beam at 137¼ compared with 136½ for the champion.

Measurements of the battlers showed the Negro 1 inch taller than Ross at 5 feet 7 inches, and 1 inch longer reach at 69 inches.

Satellites, Virginians Start Court Play-Off

Finalists in the Community Center girls basket ball league, the Satellites and Virginians, will meet tonight at MacFarland Junior High gym at 9 o'clock in the first of a series of games. The Young Men's Community Club, 130-pound District A. A. U. champions, and the Washington Boys Club will clash at 8 o'clock in the preliminary.

The Virginians are composed of girls who played on high school teams in and around Warrenton. They won all eight games in the second half of their league schedule. The Satellites are made up of former high and college players.

Determination Keeps Sarazen Among Greats, Says Freddie McLeod, Back From Augusta

By Dave Herman.

"I WAS walking from the eighteenth green to the clubhouse with my playing partner, Chandler Egan, and noticed that Craig Wood was being congratulated and photographed. So I figured he was the winner. Just a minute later I heard someone bark out, 'Sarazen got a two on the par five fifteenth.' I thought he was kidding."

The speaker was Freddie McLeod, Columbia's ole maestro, who returned yesterday from Bobby Jones' masters championship at Augusta, Ga. The oldest of the former Open champions entered, McLeod brought back only words of praise for the new titleholder, Gene Sarazen, who defeated Craig Wood by five strokes in a 36-hole play-off Monday.

"Gene certainly proved that he hasn't lost any of his golf stuff," McLeod said. "Golf seems to be a matter of determination with him. He is as great a player as he was when he won his first national Open crown at Skokie in 1922."

"Bring on your big championships, and let Gene get in his practice rounds over the course, and he'll be hard to beat," the Columbia pro declared.

Commenting on Sarazen's double eagle, the ole maestro said: "No one was more surprised than Gene, himself. I've never heard of anything like it in a big tournament, especially since the shot came when he needed it most."

Asked if the Augusta course is as tough as either Merion or Oakmont, McLeod replied: "No, it's not as heavily trapped. The greens are large, but deceiving, and the course as a whole was exceptionally slow because of the raw weather. As expected, the big shots encountered most trouble around the greens."

The field was of a National Open caliber, but lacked such stars as MacDonald Smith, George Von Elm, George Dunlap and Johnny Goodman. McLeod made it known. The hospitality was perfect, and the entire golf show very entertaining, he said.

And as for the host, Bobby Jones, McLeod merely echoed the opinions of other observers: "He's still a great golfer, but hasn't had enough competitive golf since he retired in 1930."

McLeod's playing partners, besides the Oregon peach grower, Egan, twice former National Amateur champion, were Jock Hutchinson and Jim Foulis.

Ginger Hawk Wins Puppy Stakes

Frederick - Owned Entry Tops Field; Trials to End Today.

GINGER HAWK, a playful white, black and tan English setter, carried off top honors in the Puppy Stakes, feature of the opening-day program of the National Capital Field Trial Club's annual meeting. In progress at the Hill farm, near Glen, Md., the trials will be concluded today with the running of the Novice Shooting Dog, and all-age events.

Capably handled by its owner, J. E. Shell, of Frederick, Md., Ginger Hawk survived its test with flying colors to establish its superiority over its field by a comfortable margin. Working over a snow-covered terrain, the setter found plenty of birds for its master, and generally conducted itself in sterling fashion.

Virginia Dog Second.

Alleghany School Girl, a white and liver pointer, the property of Capt. R. H. Clemmer, of Waynesboro, Va., was second to Ginger Hawk, and Phil Baird, white and liver pointer owned by Capt. N. D. Woodward, of Annapolis, Md., took third prize.

Rip of Ravenhill, a remarkably pretty picture framed in a background of snow, was adjudged the best Irish setter in the trials. It was handled by its owner, Elisha Hanson, of Bethesda, Md.

Competition will be resumed early this morning when 11 braces in the novice-shooting class are scheduled to go afield. Six braces exhibited their wares yesterday. E. C. Mead, of Richmond, Va., and Thomas B. Baldwin, of Washington, are judging.

Jenkins Sets Record In Virginia Road Run

Charlottesville, Va., April 9 (AP).—Ab Jenkins, automobile racer, this afternoon set a new record of 54 seconds for the half-mile of twisting mountain road to Monticello, covering the distance from the entrance of the lodge to the Mansion in 15 seconds less than his time three years ago.

This is the first speed test since completion of the new roadway, which will be dedicated Saturday on the 192d anniversary of Thomas Jefferson's birth. Better time probably would have been made but for unfavorable weather conditions.

Next 2 Games Decisive for Faber's Men

MARYLAND'S skyscraper hopes for a national lacrosse championship will either be increased tremendously or erased entirely in the next two games, Coach Jack Faber and his assistant, Al Heagy, decided yesterday. The opponents who will make or break the Terps are Mount Washington, of Baltimore, and St. John's, of Annapolis.

Maryland travels to the Monumental City this week-end for its annual encounter with Mount Washington, a team comprised of Maryland and St. John's alumni. The clubmen defeated Faber's men last season, but only after two torrid periods when the issue was decided by superior reserve strength. Saturday Maryland hopes to even up matters.

St. John's, Maryland's perennial lacrosse rival, appears to have a team just about as good as the College Parkers. The Bay City tea served notice of its prowess by walloping a strong alumni team, 15-1, in the season's inaugura'. If the Terps do get by this team, after finishing off Mount Washington of course, it can almost rest assured of winning the championship.

Bianchi Rolls In Isemann Sweeps

All-Events Champion to Compete Saturday; Stars Entered.

JOHNNY BIANCHI, of New Haven, Conn., recently crowned all-events champion in the U. S. National Tournament, will head an imposing array of duckpin stars in paying tribute to George L. Isemann, popular Duckpin Congress secretary, in a sweepstakes named in his honor on Saturday. The event will be rolled on the Mount Rainier and Silver Spring alleys with five games at each establishment. The entry fee is $10, which includes cost of games.

Many preliminary tournaments have been scheduled in numerous cities which has tended to boost the entry list close to 50. Up to the present date, bowlers from Connecticut, Maryland, Richmond, Va., and the District have signified their intention to compete.

The Occidental and Sholl's teams will roll intact, along with a number from the Masonic, Mount Rainier and Silver Spring Leagues.

Jones and Yates Beaten By Dura and Thomas

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, April 9.—Olin Dutra, National Open champion from California, and Jimmy Thomson, long-hitting young pro from Long Beach, Calif., teamed today to beat Bobby Jones and Charlie Yates National intercollegiate champion, 3 and 2, in an exhibition match.

The stocky Thomson, smashing terrific drives in spite of the wind handicap and pitching with great accuracy, carded a 67, three under par. Yates stood next in the scoring with a 69, while Dutra and Jones each equalled par with a 70.

Tech Threatens Central for Net Title

Harry March Sets Fast Pace for Strengthened Tennis Contenders.

TECH HIGH'S tennis team, which missed the interhigh championship last year by a narrow margin, is coming back this season with renewed vigor in quest of Central's long-held title. Paced by Harry March, the country's No. 6 ranking boys' player, the Techmen stand out conspicuously as the chief obstacle between the Mount Pleasanters and another title.

The 16-year-old March will head an impressive list of scholastic racquet wielders. Eddie Pinkham, highly able veteran, will take time enough from his cadet-captaining duties to play in the Central match. Billy Stanton will play No. 2, and Hap Lomax, former Western boy, No. 3.

A pair of new arrivals, Lloyd Weaver, of Detroit, and Paul Falconer, of Milwaukee, has given the team strength from an unexpected quarter. Bob Williamson and James Kemper round out the squad impressively.

The long-unbeaten Episcopal High team furnished Tech its first opposition of the season recently, winning, 9—0. March's feat in taking Donald Lay, Episcopal's high-ranking captain, to 6—4, 6—3, stamped the Tech leader as a definite threat for the interhigh individual championship.

Tech lost to Central, 5 to 4, last year, with Johnny Yeomans and Buddy Adair, of Central, winning the No. 1 doubles match, 4—6, 7—5, 6—4, from March and L. Stolar. The two schools meet May 28 in what may be the deciding engagement of the series.

Stocks Stage Sharp Rally At Last Minute

A Single Trade Was 95,600 Shares of General Gas & Electric A.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—The stock market jumped ahead like a startled pedestrian in the final ten minutes of trading today. A sudden burst of enthusiasm for the metal shares appeared to have as much as any other one factor to do with the quick rush for equities, but most of the list evinced a readiness to respond to buying.

The creeping advance of the past week or so appeared to have finally stampeded the bear forces into a covering movement, and the bulls were naturally not averse to helping the buying along. A number of leaders got ahead 1 to 3 points or so, while United States Smelting, a metal stock recently freely offered, was 6¾ points higher at 104¾.

While turnover on the Stock Exchange was only 856,184 shares, nearly 300,000 changed hands in the final hour, and much of it in the last ten minutes or so. Thousand-share blocks in some of the trading favorites were common enough. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced .7 of a point to 38.1, the highest level since February 24.

After months of restricted volume followers of the stock tape noted with interest the recording of a single block of 95,000 shares of General Gas & Electric "A" at ⅜, off ⅛ from the previous sale. The stock subsequently snapped back to ⅛.

Among the more active stock leaders American Telephone at 107½ advanced 2⅝ points, and Union Pacific at 90½ was up 3½. Others gaining 1 to 2 points each included U. S. Steel at 31¼; Westinghouse at 38⅛; Allied Chemical at 134; American Tobacco "B" at 78½; Santa Fe at 40¼; Montgomery Ward at 25¼, and New York Central at 15⅝.

Corn Up Again; Wheat Hesitant

Cotton Rises 12 to 17 Points on Covering and Trade Buying.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 9.—Soaring corn prices climaxed an otherwise dull grain market session today. A late rally in the corn pit, which carried the prices of all grains except wheat to sharp gains for the day, gave trade expression to the mounting evidence of diminishing supplies of corn. Accompanying the price jump was a revival of floor gossip suggesting the possibility of a market squeeze in May corn when the time comes for delivery on huge speculative contracts.

With May selling at a new high since February 20, corn closed ⅞ to 2¼ cents above the previous finish, May 87⅜-½. Wheat was unchanged to ⅜ cent lower, May 95⅛-¼. Oats gained ⅛-⅝ and rye was ¾-1 cent up.

Overnight rains in parts of the wheat belt, with only a trace of moisture in drought areas, served to dampen bullish enthusiasm as to wheat. Oats followed the action of corn. Provisions were somewhat easier early in sympathy with grains, but firmed up later with corn.

Cotton showed increased activity and strength today, with prices advancing on trade buying and covering encouraged by the firmer tone in the stock market. Closing quotations were within 2 or 3 points of the best at net advances of 12 to 17 points.

Expectations of large Government relief or recovery expenditures and the possibility that something of a bullish character might develop from discussions of the cotton situation in Washington, were mentioned as contributing factors in the advance.

Election of Gay as Stock Exchange President Promises Some Rise in Commission Rates, Effort to Cut Floor Brokers' Returns.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 9.—The unopposed nomination of Charles R. Gay, head of a large commission house, to the presidency of the New York Stock Exchange marks the culmination of an internal controversy of fundamental importance to the future of this leading security market. While personal considerations entered largely into the fight on the existing administration, headed by Richard Whitney, the events of the next few months will amply demonstrate, it is understood, that basic principles were involved also.

The most important practical result will be, commission house brokers who have supported the Gay candidacy from the first indicate, a rise in the rate of commissions charged the public. On the surface, it appears an anomaly that the "liberal" element in the exchange membership, which has now triumphed, should favor charging the public higher rates for executing orders to buy and sell securities on the exchange. However, this group argues that the exchange should learn to depend more largely upon bona fide investment transactions, and less upon margin traders and professional speculators. The real investor, who does not turn over his securities very often, would not mind a moderate rise in the level of commission rates, it is contended. The fact that speculators will find higher rates discouraging their rapid turnover operations is not considered particularly serious, in view of the sharp contraction in the extent of such in and out trading.

Higher Rates Planned For Low-Priced Shares.

The precise changes which the special committee of the exchange studying the subject will favor will be a rise in commission rates on lower-priced stocks, and some reductions in rates on high-priced shares, it is understood. At the the present time, shares selling from 1 to 10 incur a commission of $7.50 per 100 shares, whereas shares selling from 75 to 100 carry a commission rate of $20 per 100 shares. This is said to favor the speculative trader, for by restricting his operations to low-priced shares he can greatly reduce the volume of commissions he pays on his trades. Once again, commission brokers argue, speculative trading is not active enough to justify such a discrepancy in commission rates, while the cost to the broker for executing a transaction is very nearly the same regardless of the selling price of the stock involved.

More controversial than the projected increase in commission rates charged the public, which the election of Mr. Gay is believed to insure, is the reduction in rates allowed floor brokers favored by the commission houses. A special committee at work on this subject will present statistics, it is understood, showing that a quite substantial proportion of the commissions paid by the public on security transactions on the New York Stock Exchange goes to floor brokers who handle the routine execution of these orders for commission houses. It is likely this study will show, in fact, that about one-third of the commissions paid are absorbed by such brokers, who do not themselves come into direct contact with the public. The committee may not directly recommend, however, that rates to floor brokers be lowered.

The objective of the commission house group, which backed Mr. Gay, is thus a moderate rise in the average rate of commission paid by the public, and an eventual reduction in rates paid by the commission house to the floor broker and specialist. In this way, it is hoped to build up a sounder financial basis of operation for commission houses, despite the greatly reduced volume of turnover. It is difficult for most commission houses now to avoid deficits, and they do not want to wait for a speculative revival in order to get back "into the black."

Sympathetic With Work Of the Commission.

Formerly, the commission house contingent on the floor of the exchange, which has now acquired a dominant position in its administration, favored increased restrictions on specialists and floor traders. However, this part of their program is also favored by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Hence, it is expected to be an easy matter for the new administration of the exchange to cooperate more actively with the SEC than did the present officials, who have been more representative of the groups of brokers toward whom the commission has adopted at times a critical policy.

The new exchange administration also favors a more aggressive public relations program, to explain the functions of the exchange to the public. However, the present officials also expended considerable effort to this end, without winning much public favor in times of falling prices. There is a feeling in some quarters that a weakness in the stock exchange's public relations policy has been that it has tended to claim too many virtues and an inhuman absence of faults, with the result that its arguments have appeared unconvincing to many. It is doubtful, however, whether the new administration will make much change in this respect, and restrict its contentions to the position that the exchange does far more good than harm, but that it is not necessarily 100 per cent beneficial in its operations at all times.

Stocks—A sharp rally in the final ten minutes of trading sent stocks substantially higher. American Smelting closed at 104¾, up 6¾. Sales for the day were 856,184 shares, of which more than a third were sold in the last hour.

Bonds—Indifference in Federals held back a movement to join the stock rally. High priced corporates also lagged, but rails managed to record slight gains together with utilities and foreign issues. Sales for the day were up to $9,777,000.

Curb—Rallied in late trading, with specialties in the lead. Gains of a point or more were numerous at the close. Sales for the day were up to 167,000 shares.

Grains—A sharp rally near the close lifted corn prices as much as 2½ cents on squeeze possibilities. Wheat and oats registered slight changes. May corn closed at 87⅜, while May wheat sold last at 95⅛.

Cotton—Early advances were nullified around midday, later to advance 12 to 17 points net at the close on trade buying and covering. May cotton closed at 11.26.

Stockholder Asks About Niagara Hudson Salaries

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—Executive officers of the Niagara Hudson Power Corporation encountered something of a squall at the hands of a small group of stockholders at today's annual meeting.

Charles H. Proctor, of Arlington, N. J., a shareholder, who informed the meeting that he had invested $5,000 in the stock of Niagara Hudson, "which is now worth $350," asked F. L. Carlisle, chairman of the board, "is it not true, as the newspapers recently reported, that this company earned a definite amount for the common stock and if so, why was it not paid the common stockholders?"

"The directors," Carlisle replied, "did not consider it advisable with a view to the troublous and uncertain times through which we are passing."

To this Proctor rejoined, "have you gentlemen reduced your own salaries?"

When informed that officer's compensation had been reduced 10 per cent, Proctor said, "it would be more fitting to have cut them 50 per cent."

Bank Council At Augusta to Hear Fleming

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, will be one of the speakers at the spring meeting of the American Bankers Association Executive Council to be held in Augusta, Ga., from April 14 to 17.

Other speakers on the program include the association president, Rudolf S. Hecht, Roger Babson, the economist, and Frank M. Totten, of the Chase National Bank, New York.

It is estimated that about 350 of the ranking bankers from all parts of the United States will attend the session. After the opening report of the administrative committee, which will be presented by President Hecht, Executive Manager F. N. Shepherd and Treasurer Hal Y. Lemon, the departmental reports will be given. In this category, the advertising and publicity departments will be represented by Gurden Edwards; Banking, journal of American Bankers Association, William R. Kuhns; legal department, D. J. Needham; protective department, James E. Baum. After these will come reports of divisions and sections by the presidents, as follows: American Institute of Banking section, Charles F. Ellery; national bank division, C. J. Lord; savings division, T. J. Caldwell; State bank division, James C. Bolton; State secretaries' section, George A. Starring, and trust division, Leon M. Little.

Reports of commissions and committees will be presented by the chairmen, as follows: Agriculture commission, H. Lane Young; banking studies committee, Tom K. Smith; bank management commission, Orval W. Adams; bankruptcy committee, M. R. Sturtevant; commerce and marine commission, Fred I Kent; economic policy commission, Leonard P. Ayres; Export-Import Bank advisory committee, Robert F. Maddox; Federal legislation committee, Ronald Ransom; finance committee, Robert V. Fleming; Insurance committee, W. F. Keyser; membership committee, E. N. Van Horne; public education commission, Frank M. Totten; special committee on Section 5219, United States Revised Statutes, Charles P. Blinn, jr.; State legislation committee, A. T. Hibbard, and taxation committee, Robertson Griswold.

Credit Men Award Diplomas.

At the weekly business luncheon of the Washington Association of Credit Men, Inc., yesterday, President Louis M. Hewlett presented certificates to students who completed the course in business law conducted under the auspices of the local chapter.

The instructor in this course was John A. Reilly, prominent local banker and attorney, who has been a regular instructor for the Institute of Credit for a number of years. Students who received their certificates were Max Dinkin, L. S. Jullien, Inc.; David Bendheim, Hechinger Co.; John Hayes Knowles, Hugh Reilly Co.; Robert R. Kenyon, Fries, Beall & Sharp Co.; Lewis Magruder, Fries, Beall & Sharp Co.; John H. Parker, Washington Association of Credit Men.

The local chapter of the National Institute of Credit was chartered in 1927 and has conducted regular courses in business law, credits and collections, financial statement analysis, and financial organization and management since that time.

B. & O. Loads Drop.

Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended April 6 totaled 36,041, of which 23,044 represented revenue freight loaded on the line and 12,997 received from connections.

Compared with the same week of last year, it was a decrease of 796, when there were 24,077 loaded on line and 12,760 received from connections, or a total of 36,837.

The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. filed suit in the United States District Court in Philadelphia against the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. for $330,000 yesterday in connection with a long-standing dispute between the two roads over citrus fruit freight rates.

The claim is that the Pennsylvania retained more than it was entitled as its part of the freight for shipments of citrus fruits delivered from Southern territories to Northern destinations. The case had its origin in a technical ruling years ago by the ICC on the basis for computing freight on citrus fruits.

Acacia to Build Home.

Work on the new home of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. will be started immediately, President William Montgomery announced yesterday. Shreve, Lamb & Harman, New York architects, who designed the Empire State Building, are planning the new structure, to be located at Louisiana and New Jersey avenues.

The building will be six stories high with a marble exterior to match the architectural scheme of the Government buildings in the Capitol area. Eventually the building will encompass the entire block on which the first unit will be constructed.

Recovery Actually Under Way, Says Mathes After Wide Survey

No Doubt That Major Revival Has Begun, Is Conclusion of Advertising Expert, Who Predicts Era of Prosperity Exceeding 1926-1929 Period.

New York, April 9.—After a survey of business trends since the beginning of the year, including personally expressed opinions from leaders in finance and industry, James M. Mathes, advertising expert, announced today that every report reaching his organization clearly establishes that the long anticipated boom is actually under way. The conclusion he draws from analysis of definite figures and individual judgment is that we are at the threshold of the biggest upturn since 1926.

"There is no longer any doubt that a major revival has begun," he says. "The only difference of opinion concerns the exact time when it will gather such force that everybody will be conscious of it. Some analysts believe that its full effect will not be felt until next year. I am more optimistic. Based on actual statistics at hand, plus the weight of opinion in well informed circles, it seems to me that we will be roaring along at full speed before the end of this year.

Higher Prosperity Foreseen.

"I foresee an era of prosperity exceeding that of the period between 1922 and 1929. We are moving swiftly toward our peak boom. All the weathervanes point that way. It is the inexorable outcome of every depression that it is succeeded by a sharp swing in the other direction, just as a period of inflation is followed by hard times.

"It is always the same—history repeats. The course of business after the Napoleonic wars is one known precedent. The aftermath of the Civil War was the same. The graphs of business after the World War are along identical lines. Business is biological. It moves in cycles which repeat themselves with uncanny accuracy. Study the trends for the last 100 years and you will note an amazing similarity.

"Inflation is here. It is primarily credit inflation and not monetary. That is the important key to the situation—the fact that it is credit inflation and not the artificial stimulus to business which the printing of money could bring about. Let us hope that the Government does not resort to the printing press. The experience of Germany shows how futile that is. Genuine prosperity can not be synthetic. There is no reason why we, in this country, with all our vast riches, should try to make it so. We have all the foundations for real prosperity. So why try to paint the lily?

"The condition of banks has never been sounder than it is now. It is reported authoritatively that each day 10,000 persons are getting out of debt. For the first time in five or six years notes are being reduced. Savings deposits are higher than they have been for a long time. Not long ago I heard the head of an important bank express himself on the subject of credit. He said that one year ago he discouraged men from obtaining loans. His bank had no money to put out. Now he is anxious to lend money for the promotion of sound business enterprises.

Banks Can Finance Business.

"What does this mean? It means that the banks have the cash to finance credit inflation. They beckon business to step in and make the most of a great opportunity. And business is ready to go. The timidity of the past six years is a thing of the past. So, on one hand, we have the money, and, on the other, the desire to use it. Could there be a healthier situation?

"There are almost innumerable reasons for saying that we are heading toward a great revival. The most conspicuous of these are that retail trade is much improved, that the curve in consumer and capital goods is moving upward and that cash is now available for expansion. There is, however, one obscure reason which is equally important. This is the yeoman job which the creators of new wealth are doing. I have in mind particularly the steel industry. For many years steel was the paramount index of our economic status. Then came the slip and we could no longer look to steel as the barometer of what was taking place.

"Men of science have restored the steel industry to the point where it again becomes perhaps one of the important gauges of trends. Out of the laboratories has come alloy steel. Through the use of alloys, greater strength has been imparted to steel, greater lightness and greater resistance to corrosion. This means new uses of the metal on a far-flung front. The automotive industry has already become an extensive purchaser of alloy steels and has learned that they solve the problem of making cars more durable and attractive. The railroads have taken notice and are now potential buyers on an elaborate scale.

"So certain am I that a boom of far-reaching proportions is at hand that I am wondering whether we should not in due time consider the advisability of proceeding cautiously. Remember, it is the law of economics that after every depression there must be a boom and after every boom, a depression. The boom gathers force. After the lean years we have been through it is a marvelous elixir. Our mental state is like that of the person who awakens from a nightmare, to find that the haunting visions have vanished."

Bond Market Fails to Keep Pace of Stocks

Rails and Utilities Up; Industrials Are Unchanged.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—The bond market tried to get enthusiastic about a late rally in stocks today, but was held in check somewhat by indifference in United States Governments and high-priced corporate issues.

Helped along by a number of firm spots in the low-priced division, rail bonds ended generally higher along with a majority of the utilities and foreign loans. Industrials, however, elected to trail along with the prime investments and Government obligations.

Trading in existing obligations again suffered from neglect at the hands of traders who were busy with the new Federal Land Bank bonds, the books on which were closed during the afternoon with the announcement that no more exchange offers would be accepted. Transfers aggregated $9,777,000 par value, compared with $9,298,000 on Monday, and of this total the turnover in Governments accounted for $1,520,000 against $930,000 the day before.

Firm spots in railroad loans included New York Central consolidated 4s, up 1⅛ points at 77⅝, New York, Ontario & Western 4s, up 1¾ at 49¾, Erie 5s, up 2¼ at 58¾, and St. Louis-Southwestern 4s, up 4 at 69.

Best showing in the utilities was made by obligations of the American Water Works, Columbia Gas & Electric and Federal Light & Traction, most of which were a point or so higher.

A 4½ point drop in Vanadium 5s to 74 featured the industrials. A generally steady trend ruled the foreign department. German (Dawes) 7s were a point higher at 37¾ and improvement was shown by obligations of Australia, Japan and some of the South American loans.

Carpets and Rugs Up 5 Per Cent.

New York, April 9 (AP).—Carpet and rug manufacturers today have announced an advance of 5 per cent effective May 1. In the wool goods division men's wear manufacturers were beginning to show fancies for all. Cotton goods ruled quiet on the basis of 5⅝ cents for wide 64x60s, at which small sales were made. Silks were barely steady, with sheer goods selling best. Burlaps were easy and quiet.

Nor. Am. $1.04 On Common

New York, April 9.—The North American Co. reports operating revenue of $101,386,964 for last year, an increase of 1.08 per cent over 1933. Operating expenses were $57,499,992 compared with $55,256,087 in the previous year. Gross income was $49,472,768 last year against $50,831,167 in 1933.

Consolidated balance for dividends ano surplus, after all charges, including preferred dividends of subsidiaries, amounted to $10,792,414, compared with $11,551,702 for 1933, a decrease of 6.57 per cent. After dividends of $1,820,034 of North American preferred stock, the consolidated balance was equal to $1.04 per share of North American common stock outstanding at the end of 1934, as compared with the balance for 1933 of $1.19 per share of common stock outstanding at the end of that year.

"Statistically," says James F. Fogarty, president, "1934 was a good and an encouraging year. This was true to a lesser extent from the financial viewpoint. Lower rates, while a strong inducement to greater use of electricity, precluded an increase in revenues corresponding with the growth of business. Meanwhile the cost of doing business increased faster than revenues. This applies particularly to items of expense largely beyond the control of the management, such as taxes, wages, the cost of fuel—both in higher prices and greater consumption due to the drought—and the cost of other materials and supplies affected by the national industrial recovery act. As a result of these adverse factors, the net operating revenues for 1934, and the balance available for dividends, do not reflect the improvement to be expected from an otherwise encouraging year."

	1935	1934
Philadelphia Co.	$23,538,911	$23,329,564

All-Time Record For Rubber Seen For This Year

New York, April 9.—Of an approximate world consumption of 920,000 long tons of rubber in 1934, the United States took more than all the rest of the countries, accounting for 455,470 long tons, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. This represented an increase of 13.7 and 37.2 per cent, respectively, over the 1933 and 1932 figures, and surpassed all records back to 1929, when consumption totaled 469,804 long tons, according to statistics compiled by the Rubber Manufacturers Association.

In spite of this gain, consumption for 1935 is estimated at 500,000 long tons, which will establish a new all-time peak. The year started well in this direction, as January consumption at 46,103 long tons was a new high for that month, rising 19.9 per cent above the comparative 1934 total, and 28.5 per cent above that of the month preceding.

Curb Revives In Late Trades

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.—Following early hesitation, the curb market came to life in the last few minutes of trading today and pushed up for closing advances of fractions to around a point. Transfers, which approximated 167,000 shares, were about the same as yesterday.

Among issues closing with advances of about a point were National Container, Pioneer Gold, A. O. Smith, American Gas & Electric and Gulf Oil.

30-Hour Week No Advantage, Survey Reports

Would Not Stimulate Recovery, Conference Board Says.

New York, April 9.—No stimulus to business recovery and no increase in the purchasing power of wages would result from the adoption of the 30-hour week, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. Following are the highlights of the study just completed by the board:

There would be some increase in employment, but it would be slight compared with the number of workers now unemployed.

The 30-hour week would penalize those industries where labor costs are a large part of total costs, thus creating unemployment.

The 30-hour week would effect most unfavorably the durable goods industries in which unemployment is greatest.

Prices of most goods would rise, especially prices of necessaries. The millions of workers now employed, whose weekly earnings would not increase as a result of the 30-hour week, would suffer a reduction in real wages.

The decrease in real wages would result in a demand for higher wage rates, causing labor disturbances.

A standard of living like that characterizing the period from 1922 to 1929 could not be sustained by the 30-hour week.

There is no evidence that an excessive labor supply exists and that it is necessary to reduce working hours to avoid permanent unemployment.

The purchasing power of farmers would be reduced. Also, the ability of American producers to compete with foreigners both in domestic and foreign markets would be weakened.

The final cost of manfactured products would be increased 12 per cent to 14 per cent under the 30-hour week.

The 30-hour week would not appreciably reduce the cost of Federal unemployment relief.

OBJECT—Not MATRIMONY

By LILLIAN BARKER.

Katrina Harman, on her eighteenth birthday, discovers that, instead of being wealthy, she has lost her fortune. She also discovers that Tazewell Bronson, whom she loves, also loves her, but has no intention of marrying anyone. Ill-advisedly, she allows him to pay for some dresses she has ordered, giving her I. O. U. for them. She determines never to see him again. After discouraging search for a job, she becomes a waitress in the Blue Moon Restaurant. One day she is told to take particular care of a certain luncheon party, but bringing in the first tray, she finds that the guest in question is Tazewell. She drops the tray of hors d'ouevre on his companion's frock. Hurrying to the dressing room, she changes into street clothes, preparing to leave before enduring the wrath of Doremus, the proprietor; but he meets her on the stairs and says Tazewell wants to see her.

SO, realizing that power he still had to enrapture and to hurt her at the same time, how could she hope to control her emotions if closeted with Taz upstairs in that private office? Why should she weakly give in to his wishes, to Doremus' demand and allow herself to be led into the presence of the person who'd made her suffer untold agonies and who right now was only waiting to deal another terrific blow to her pride by trying to force her to become financially dependent upon him?

Rather than run the risk of breakdown before Tazewell, of discussing with him the "future" he wished to help her "arrange," of subjecting herself to a session that, for her, could result in nothing but anguish, regrets and more humiliation, she'd hold out in her refusal to do Doremus' bidding. Granting that Tazewell had shown consideration and sympathy by his appeals to both his sister and the restaurant owner, wouldn't any other man in his place, if even half a man with a semblance of gallantry, have done the same thing?

Silence Misinterpreted.

"I see," the Blue Moon proprietor took advantage of Trina's meditativeness to assume: "I see at last I've brought you to your senses, to a reconsideration, a reversal of your stand. Good for you! Now you are showing some appreciation, after all. We mustn't lose any more time talking, however. Mr. Bronson will be wondering what's become of both of us, so," persuasively and with a gentle, coaxing pull on Trina's arm, "come, let's see how quickly we can make it to my private office!"

"You've—you've misinterpreted my silence," apprised Katrina, "and again I'm sorry. But it's useless to talk any more about the matter. I can not go upstairs to . . . to Tazewell Bronson. So please, please let go my arm, I beg you."

"I have no notion of letting it go." The Corsican temper, briefly quiescent, was all volcanic again, "and I have a very strong notion to pick you up in my arms and carry you to Mr. Bronson. That's one sure way of getting you to him, of keeping my word——"

Trina Was Furious.

Trina, alarmed and also raging, her voice shrilling with excitement, threatened: "Just try picking me up in your arms and I'll scream for help. To people passing or," catching sight of the park policeman twirling his club near the marble entrance, "better still, to that officer yonder. Then you will have a scene that is a scene in front of the Blue Moon, your 'rendez-vous for the elite.' Now, for the last time, let go my arm. Let it go, I tell you!"

Doremus, frightened by the shrilling pitch of Trina's voice, by the determination he saw in her eyes and by sight of the menacing-looking officer with the menacing-looking club, released her arm at last. But in what fury and resentment! Just when he thought he'd carried his point, won her over she, a waitress, had intimidated him, her employer, with that threat . . .

"Get out of my sight," he ordered, "and stay out of it! I never want to see you again. If you go hungry, if you have to sleep on one of those park benches over there," he pointed to the benches, "don't you ever come back here asking me for a job! If you got down on your knees and begged me for work I wouldn't give it to you. You stubborn little ingrate!"

Doremus Was Cruel.

The demoniacal, vindictive rage in those black eyes! Katrina quailed before it. But quailing, and trembling, and even with her knees feeling most uncertain, Trina managed to reach the Square before the grilled door of the restaurant opened and closed, the vicious click-clicks resounding in her ears.

Kind in one way, how cruel Paul Doremus could be in another! Thwarted in his purpose to "deliver her to Taz," who, in his turn and in his own way, was to "deliver" business to him, the restaurant-keeper had driven her to make that threat to call the policeman to her rescue. Now he was probably telling Tazewell up in the private office all about what had just occurred.

How cheap, how melodramatic Taz would think her—and how he would hate what he'd consider "heroics" on her part! But in that extremity what else could she have done with Doremus devil-bent and determined to carry out his purpose at any and all costs to her?

Tears Flowed Freely.

Cutting across Sixth to Greenwich avenue and west into Morton street, on her way to the box of a room she called "home," Trina asked herself that question over and over again. Yes, in what other possible way could she have saved herself from being carried in Paul Doremus' big, strong arms to the upstairs office where Tazewell was waiting?

Tears, forced back during that verbal fray in front of the restaurant, ran in rivulets down Katrina's cheeks without her realizing she was weeping until, a moment later, a little beggar, sidling up to her with a request for a nickel, exclaimed:

"Why, lady, you are crying! What's the matter?"

The spectacle she must have made of herself, all unconsciously! Trina explored her purse, produced the coin and replied: "Here's your nickel!" But moved by frayed coat sleeves and several coat-patches, she dug back into her pocketbook and held out a dime. "This will make 15 cents altogether and that's—that's three times as much as a nickel," she computed, smiling.

Six, or seven at most, this panhandler, whose hair was unkempt and whose face was both freckled and dirty, jingled the coins in his hand.

Generosity Appreciated.

"Gee, lady," he enthused to the accompaniment of the jingle, "you're just grand, ain't you?" Big gray eyes beamed. Even the freckles, a face full of them, radiated joy. "This is the most money I ever had at one time in all my life!"

"Not really!" Nothing so touching had ever before come under Trina's observation. At 18 she was only beginning to see the seamy side of life and this poor kid, years younger, had never seen or known anything but the seamy side. What a childhood!

Matrimony.

"Yes'm, I'm telling the truth," insisted the youngster. Honest, I am. You see, my dad's a drunkard. Once't in a while he works at his trade, plasterin', but only once't in a while. And Mom she has to go out cleanin' by the day when she can get any cleanin' to do. So us kids—they's four of us—don't never have no money 'ceptin' what we get beggin', a few pennies now and then, and sometimes if Mom don't clean we don't eat for days. Once't we didn't eat for three, just drinked a little milk. We sure was hungry, too. Terrible hungry.

"But," suddenly staring up with a sort of sympathetic curiosity, "you never did tell me what you was cryin' about. Have you just come from a funeral . . . or sumpin sad like that? I always cry when I go to funerals. I've been to four already in my life, and ain't that a heap o' funerals?"

Impulsive Action.

"I should say so!" Katrina agreed, temporarily forgetting her own suffering in the face of this family tragedy the little panhandler had opened her eyes to. "But I haven't been to any funeral today . . . I was . . . I was just being silly."

Again she unclasped her pocketbook, this time automatically, and removed a dollar, one of the few left from her week's wages after paying room rent.

"Take this to your mother," she said, stuffing the greenback into a pocket of the overpatched coat. "Tell her it's from a stranger who sympathizes with her and who would help her lots—lots more if she could. And now suppose you tell me your name and where you live. Maybe some day I can go to see you and take you toys and books and other things."

Gray eyes, saucer like now, danced with anticipation as the boy answered: "My name's Mike . . . Michael Flaherty . . . and I live in the basement at 47 Bleecker street. When will you come with the toys and . . . things, lady, Christmas?"

Purse Was Love.

What had she let herself in for? In her impulsiveness to give joy to others how completely she'd overlooked her own plight. Only a few dollars in her purse, room rent due in two days, no job and no prospect of one. And children expected promises to be kept. That was certain.

"I can't just say when, Mike," Katrina warned, "and it may possibly be that I can't ever go to your house at all. Be sure, though," she took his grimy fist in her own ungloved hand, "if I can I will. But if I can't, please know, won't you, that it isn't because I don't want to? For I never, never shall forget a sweet little boy by the name of Michael Flaherty who stopped me on Morton street and, for a short while anyhow, made me cease thinking about—about—well," smiling courageously—"what shall we call them? Troubles? My own little troubles."

Job Deeded Again.

"And now," with a parting handshake that made the urchin feel very proud and important, "goodby, young fellow, till . . . till the next time."

Mike, grinning from ear to ear, sped on to the nearest "hot dog joint," as he would have styled it, and Trina, continuing on her way, added to herself:

"If there is ever a 'next time;' if I ever do get another job and can really do something for that poor Flaherty kid, the poor Flaherty mother and her other half-starved children."

Covering the same streets, so windingly characteristic of Greenwich Village thoroughfares, repassing the same tea rooms, newsstands, antique and china shops, Katrina worried about what Glad would think, and say, when she learned, as undoubtedly she would from Doremus, about her refusal to go upstairs and talk to Tazewell Bronson.

Gladys Didn't Know.

Sweet, kind, solicitous, devoted Glad who'd introduced her to the restaurant proprietor and urged him to create for her a vacancy. This chummiest of girl friends, who, that very same day sauntering along that identical street, that very block even, had confessed her own disillusioning "first love" experience!

Confessed it, never guessing that her listener and confidante also had a story of disillusionment that preyed on her mind day and night. One she hadn't been able to speak of, to breathe out loud to a living soul because of its embarrassing ending—that anguishing break with Taz.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Cheerfulness and activity was maintained on the stock exchange today due to better employment figures and budget hopes. British securities, especially silk-edged issues, improved and transatlantic and oil shares closed higher. Gold shares were supported by South African buyers. The closing was firm.

Paris—French rentes were dull and rentes dropped slightly during the hesitant trading on the bourse today. International issues strengthened somewhat and the market closed irregular.

Berlin—A slight increase in the Reichsbank gold coverage to 2.41 centum influenced trading on the boerse. Prices were slightly better and the market closed dull.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust executed by Washington Arcade Company, a corporation, dated May 6, 1930, and duly recorded in Liber 6091, folio 57, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and pursuant to an order for foreclosure and sale thereunder passed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, on the 19th day of December, 1934, as amended by order of said court dated March 4, 1935, in Equity Cause No. 54172, the undersigned trustee will sell at public auction, in the front entrance of the premises on Fourteenth Street on THURSDAY, THE EIGHTEENTH DAY OF APRIL, 1935, AT TWO O'CLOCK P. M., the following property as set forth and described in said deed of trust: All that tract or parcel of land, together with improvements, easements, rights, privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging, situate, lying and being in the County of Washington, District of Columbia: Lot numbered five hundred and twenty-five (525) in Harry K. Bliss' subdivision of part of lot numbered twenty-nine (29) of John Sherman's subdivision of part of square numbered seven hundred and seventy-one (771), as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in Liber County 17, at folio 14; said property formerly known for purposes of assessment and taxation as lot numbered five hundred and twenty-five (525) in square numbered twenty-six hundred and seventy-four (2674). Lot numbered seven hundred and one (701) in the combination made by New Arcade Company of lot and parts of lot in John Sherman's subdivision of "Pleasant Plains," as per plat of said combination, recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in Liber 62, at folio 31, except the rear or west 5 feet of said lot heretofore taken for an alley dedication by proceedings in District Court Cause No. 1353, in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and shown on plat in said surveyor's office in Liber 74, at folio 189, and being also known for purposes of assessment and taxation as lot 844, in square 2674; subject to the right in and to the use of said alley as set forth and described in agreement recorded in Liber 5178, at folio 114, among the land records of the District of Columbia. Also all furniture, fixtures, boilers, boiler machinery, belting, shafting, tanks, pipes and fittings, electrical apparatus, refrigerating machines condensers, coolers, tanks, refrigerating boxes, engines, starting generator, pool tables, billiard tables, bowling alleys, chairs, piano and all accessories and equipment of every description, which the Riggs National Bank, as trustee, holds aforesaid, has a right to sell and convey under the terms of said deed of trust. Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances belonging or in any way appertaining to the aforesaid property or any part thereof, with the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof, and all the estate, right, title, interest and claims whatsoever at law or in equity, which the Riggs National Bank as trustee, as aforesaid, has a right to sell and convey under the terms of said deed of trust. Subject, however, to all existing leases, tenancies and rent agreements, the nature and extent of which will be made known at the time of sale.

Terms of sale: One-fifth of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in four equal installments, payable in one, two, three and four years, with interest at 5 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually from day of sale, secured by first deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. A deposit of $10,000 in cash or certified check on a local bank or trust company will be required at time of sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recordings, revenue stamps, etc., at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty days after ratification by the above court, otherwise the trustee reserves the right to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit, trustee may avail itself of any legal or equitable rights against the defaulting purchaser. Taxes, rents, insurance and water rent to be adjusted to date of sale. The sale hereunder shall be made subject to the ratification by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in said equity cause.

1431 Eye Street northwest.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE, BEING A TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING, CONTAINING SIX ROOMS AND BATH, WITH REAR ROOMS AND BATH, ALSO TILE CAR, BRICK AND TILE GARAGE, KNOWN AS 2604 THIRTY-SECOND STREET SOUTHEAST.

By virtue of certain Deed of Trust recorded in Liber No. 6271 at folio 280 of the Land Records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned will sell at public auction in front of the premises on WEDNESDAY, THE 17TH DAY OF APRIL, 1935, AT 4 O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises situate in the District of Columbia, and being Lots No. Twelve (12) and Thirteen (13), in Square No. Fifty-seven Hundred (5700), in Allen MacCullen's Subdivision of parts of the tracks of land known as "Discovery" and "Perry Farm," as per plat recorded in Liber No. 78 at folio 8 of the Records of the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia.

Said property is subject to a prior Deed of Trust securing an indebtedness of $4,750.00 and said property will be sold subject to said Deed of Trust indebtedness. Of the purchase price over and above said Deed of Trust, $750.00 is to be paid in cash, and the balance is to be secured by second deed of trust on the property sold, payable in monthly instalments of $50.00, including interest at the rate of 6 per cent, said payments to include interest on the said first trust; or all cash at the option of the purchaser. Interest and taxes to be paid or adjusted to the date of sale. A deposit of $250.00 will be required at the time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at the cost of the purchaser. Good title or no sale. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty (30) days from day of sale, otherwise deposit will be forfeited and property resold at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five (5) days of advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

AS PRETTY a lot as you ever saw, south slope, at car line and new school, north of Bethesda, Md., 80x120 ft. Price, $720; $1 down and $14.40 per month. Louis P. Shoemaker, 1719 K st. nw. NA. 1166.

BROKERS, ATTENTION! Federal housing loans available for these building propositions: Closing out remaining 80 of our 2,000 lots in Chevy Chase, D. C., at best prices; also have 60 lots in one group, fronting Connecticut avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.; marvelous opportunity for builder to feature these lots by setting house back 50 feet and other embellishments; on this enterprise, will accept moderate cash payment; balance, 2 years, 6 per cent, with release clause; 40 lots at $125 each, as entirety, Hyattsville, Md. Public improvement available. No grading necessary. 500 acres, southeast, Oxon Hill, almost adjoining D. C. line; forest shade, fronting two State roads, suitable for 2,000 low-cost houses; you could rent for sufficient to pay off housing loan in about 10 years. Capital invested in this manner with present conditions pays better than commercial enterprise, and with no risk. Fulton R. Gordon, 1427 I st. nw. Di. 5230.

All Must Pass.

THE world seems bright and gay, in glad and brave array; my thoughts are dark as I remark, "All this must pass away." The lovely maid goes by, and seeing her I sigh; some day she'll be a sight to see, the year's she can't defy. The young man, hale and strong, goes frolicking along; but time at length will curb his strength, and he will cease his song. All earthly things must pass, the flowers and the grass, the shady trees, the bumble bees, the fruit and garden sass. It is a solemn thought, and I am sore distraught; all things must end, the foe, the friend, the teacher and the taught. The rich man's roll today enables him to play, to buy new cars and fine cigars, but it will pass away. It's sad to look around on fine things that abound, and know they all some day must fall and into dust be ground. Like Ninevah and Tyre they'll shrivel and expire; they'll leave their place without a trace, as though destroyed by fire. There's nothing stable here; all things must disappear; the buoyant hope goes down the slope, as does the craven fear. It's sad to know that things must go on speedy wings; that fame will go, and health and dough, with cabbages and kings. The evil things must go, must melt away like snow, which brings relief amid our grief, and our transcendent woe. It is a dismal day, the skies are bleak and gray; a smile I frame as I exclaim, "The clouds must pass away."

Akron Gloomy About Averting Rubber Strike

Walkout by End of Week Expected; Hope Lies in Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, April 9.—Only a faint hope remained tonight that the threatened strike of several thousand rubber workers here may be averted.

Impartial observers are practically unanimous that the walkout will be under way before the present week is ended.

Their principal hope that the strike may be averted lies in the chance that President Roosevelt may intervene. So far, however, he has made no move to indicate publicly whether he is considering stepping into the rapidly approaching rubber industry crisis.

Nearly 35,000 workers are employed here in the three factories threatened with the walkout by the United Rubber Workers Union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. These companies are the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., the B. F. Goodrich Co., and the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

12,000 Members Claimed.

The union, claiming 12,000 members in the three concerns, is asking recognition, abolishment of company support for the rival so-called "company unions," a Government-supervised collective bargaining election, and an agreement as a basis for settling possible future disputes.

Neither the union nor the companies gave any outward sign of compromise tonight, but non-partisans in this capital-labor controversy continued to look to Washington for hopes of a settlement.

In addition, they pointed out that William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, had said of the Akron walkout threat: "There is always hope that a strike can be averted."

Auto Workers Talk Strike.

Union leaders continued today taking a strike ballot at the Firestone and Goodrich factories, and will complete them tomorrow night. They declined to say, however, how soon they may announce the result. The result of a similar vote at the Goodyear factory also is being kept a secret.

Members of the union were heartened today by the pledge of Francis Dillon, A. F. of L. organizer in the automobile industry, that union auto workers will strike in sympathy if the union rubber workers also go out. In Washington, however, Green said he has "nothing to say" about Dillon's assertion, and that he had received no official confirmation from him.

Green added that he expects to see Coleman Claherty, president of the Rubber Workers Union, in Washington this week, but that he has made no plans to seek President Roosevelt's intervention.

Secretary Perkins May Call a Parley

By the United Press.

Organized labor leaders and the Federal Government combined tonight in a desperate effort to avoid a strike and bloodshed in the rubber manufacturing industry in Akron.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins returns to the Capital today from New York and will decide whether to summon industrialists and labor groups into separate conferences. President William Green of the American Federation of Labor called Coleman Claherty, union organizer, from Akron to see if a walkout could be averted.

The proposed strike already has received Green's indorsement but no date for it has been or will be set until every avenue to settlement of the dispute has been explored.

'The Best Dog Is'—A Pomeranian

Pomeranian, Though Weighing Only 4 Pounds, Proves to Have He-Dog Ideas, and Is Affectionate, Says Proud Owner.

They require lots of attention. They are delicate. They love to be pampered and spoiled. And that is why Miss Bert Seibert, secretary to the National Association of Broadcasters, has Pomeranians.

Miss Seibert frankly confesses that she wanted a toy dog because it was a toy—not a great, big he-man dog in a tiny body, as so many dog fanciers claim in defense of their breeds. So she bought Rosedearie Dyne, a coal-black Pomeranian, weighing just a little over 4 pounds, and that is mostly coat.

"I wanted a lap dog," Miss Seibert declared, in discussing dogs at her office in the National Press Building. "I live alone in an apartment and I am away most of the day. Under those circumstances, although I wanted one, I felt I couldn't keep a regular-sized dog who would require regular exercising and who might annoy the neighbors. The Pomeranian has proved to be my answer. A great many people say they don't like Poms because they yap. My answer to that is—I keep two Pomeranians in my apartment and I have never had any complaints about them. When I first brought Rosedearie home, she would start yapping as soon as I closed the door. In a very short time I broke her of yapping by simply returning to the apartment and switching her lightly with a newspaper."

Miss Seibert's first acquaintance with a Pomeranian was through a picture. "I liked the looks of the dog at once. I had not seen many in Washington, so I decided I wanted one. And I am not sorry. They are very affectionate little dogs, particularly loyal to one person. They don't like children. At least, the two I have do not care for children, because the children in our neighborhood sometimes try to maul them. Pomeranians are delicate, no matter what anyone says to the contrary. Their little legs are very fragile and are frequently hurt by rough handling. Of course, I pamper Rosedearie and her pup, Cutiepie, terribly. I admit it."

Men like Pomeranians, according to Miss Seibert, because they are so lively. "My Pomeranians have he-dog ideas. When I take them out for an airing, they will try to stand right up to a police dog or any other large dog. The breed is not lacking in courage," she declared.

The Pomeranian in build and appearance should be a compact, short-coupled dog, well-knit in frame and exhibiting great intelligence in expression, activity and buoyancy in deportment. His head and nose should be foxy in outline, the skull being slightly flat, large in proportion to the muzzle, which should be rather fine and free from lippiness. The hair on head and face should be smooth and short-coated. They eyes should be medium in size, not full or set too wide apart, bright and dark in color. In white, orange, shaded sable and cream dogs, the rims around the eyes should be black. The ears should be small and carried perfectly erect like those of a fox. The tail, a characteristic of the breed should be turned over the back, carried flat and straight, being covered with long, harsh spreading hair. The dog should be double-coated—a soft, fluffy undercoat, the other a long, perfectly straight coat, harsh in texture and covering the whole body. The dog may be white, black, brown, blue, orange, beaver, cream or parti-colored.

Firestone Blue Eagle Hearing Is Postponed

At the request of attorneys representing the National Industrial Recovery Board and the National Labor Relations Board, Justice James M. Proctor yesterday continued until April 17 a judicial hearing on the merits of labor troubles now engulfing the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio.

The company obtained a ruling last week requiring the two Government agencies to show cause why they should not be placed under an order of the District Supreme Court prohibiting the removal of the company's Blue Eagle.

Steel Salaries Scored; Slash Is Voted Down

Schwab Target of Attack at Meeting of Bethlehem Stockholders.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., April 9.—High officials of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation whose salaries last year were nearly as much as the corporation's net profits were attacked at a stockholders meeting today, but a proposal to slash the payments was voted down.

The move to cut the salaries came after a minor stockholder had criticized especially, the salary of Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board, declaring "there comes a time when a man outlives his usefulness."

The criticism of Schwab and others was an echo of legal efforts in recent years first to restrict the size of bonuses paid the officers and later to force them to return some of the money thus awarded.

Five Directors Reelected.

The outburst against Schwab, President Eugene G. Grace and Vice President and Secretary R. E. McMath developed unexpectedly at the thirtieth annual meeting of stockholders, at which five directors were reelected. They were C. Austin Buck, O. G. Jennings, William C. Potter, Schwab and James H. Ward.

A resolution limiting salaries to be paid to Schwab, Grace and McMath to 20 per cent of the corporation's 1934 profits was defeated.

A few minutes before the onset Grace told the stockholders the concern, which lost $20,000,000 in 1932 and $9,000,000 in 1933, made a profit of about $550,000 in 1934.

Declaring that "44,000 men got 67 cents an hour by the sweat of their brows while three officers of this corporation divided $448,000 in salaries last year," Leopold B. Coshland, New York, said:

"It isn't fair, just or honorable, and if I were Mr. Grace I would hide my face in shame. Such things make a man's blood boil."

Widow Joins In Attack.

He added that in the event of another war Schwab "would not stop for a moment to increase his profits through blood and war."

"That is where he got it in 1917," Coshland said.

Mrs. Mary F. Gallagher, a widow, of New York, said:

"No wonder Father Coughlin preaches about blood money. He knows what he is talking about. There is too much of this. Here we are without a cent, while you men store up millions. Mr. Grace should know there are no pockets in shrouds."

"Yes," interrupted Coshland, "but there comes a time when a man outlives his usefulness."

Grace briefly summarized the annual report of the corporation, which shows cash and Government securities amounting to $50,279,000 in 1932 and $50,875,000 in January of this year.

"We have more than maintained our cash position during the depression years," he said.

Naps in Prison Van, Wakes in Law's Arms

Private siestas should not be taken in the front seat of a U. S. Marshal's prisoner van—and added complications are inevitable if the van is parked around the corner from police headquarters.

Cecil Litton, of no fixed address, will probably be warned of this today when he is arraigned in Police Court on intoxication charges. He was arrested yesterday by Capt. Milton D. Smith and Sergt. Estie Williams, both of the Traffic Bureau, when they passed a parking lot at John Marshall place and Indiana avenue northwest.

Citizens Group Picks Section Members Again

Paul S. Anderson and F. E. Meloy were reelected members of Section 3 of the Chevy Chase Citizens committee last night at a meeting at 204 Raymond street. Other committee members elected are Thomas W. Perry, Harvey L. Curtis and C. Wohlgemuth.

It all starts with these little plants, called tobacco seedlings. They are grown under cover and transplanted to the open fields in the early spring.

Then the warm Southern sunshine begins to get in its good work and as the plants grow and ripen the mild ripe leaves are cut and sent to the curing barns. The farmer then takes his tobacco to the auction warehouse where it is sold to the highest bidder. All of this takes about a year.

The tobaccos for Chesterfield cigarettes are then stored away for two years or more to make them milder and taste better.

It all takes time—just about three years—but there is no substitute for mild ripe tobacco in making a good cigarette. That's the reason smokers—men and women—say that Chesterfields are milder and that Chesterfields taste better.
